What Mr. GLADSTONE says:—"My only complaint is that, once opened, it is difficult to close the volume. I recognise in it an enviable union of fancy, humour, and good sense."—The Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. Illustrated.

RUSSIA'S RAILWAY ADVANCE INTO CENTRAL ASIA. Notes of a Journey from St. Petersburg to Samarkand. By GEORGE DOBSON, Author of the Letters in the Times on "The Central Asian Railway."

"Those of our readers who remember the original errors will need no further commendation of our correspondent's accuracy of information and graphic powers of description."—TIMES.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE QUEST OF SIR BERTRAND, and other Poems. By R. H. DOMENICHETTI.

"Mr. R. H. Domenichetti, in 'The Quest of Sir Bertrand,' and other Poems, is a maker of ballads of the kind that Coleridge and Scott made popular, and Lewis imitated, more successfully than most of their contemporaries. The poet's diction is quite in the brave old style."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"There is certainly much promise in Mr. R. H. Domenichetti's 'The Quest of Sir Bertrand,' and other Poems, for which Mrs. Trugair has drawn an effective frontispiece. He has evidently a keen eye for natural beauty, whether in wood, water, or woman."—GRAPHIC.

Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

CAMP AND STUDIO. By IRVING MONTAGU, late of the Illustrated London News, &c.; Author of "Wanderings of a War Artist." With Portrait, and 102 Illustrations from Sketches by the Author.

"Needless to say he has many tales of horror to relate."—SCOTSMAN.

"There are also some excellent passages relating to the war being carried on at the same time in Europe. But it is in the least known episodes round Kara, Erzeroum, and Trebizond that the author's lively and clever pen finds its best material."—DAILY TELEGRAPH.

"And all who remember his admirable sketches in the Illustrated London News will be interested to know the circumstances under which they were drawn."—ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.

LAST NEW VOLUME OF THE "STATESMEN SERIES." Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

GAMBETTA. By FRANK MARZIALS

"Both in style and matter, the life of Gambetta is one of the best studies of statesmen that have appeared in the 'Statesmen Series.' Mr. Marzials is evidently master of his subject."—STATSMAN.

"The life of 'Gambetta,' by F. T. Marzials, is a highly interesting book."—EVENING NEWS AND POST.

SATURDAY SONGS. By H. D. TRAILL, Author of "Recaptured Rhymes," &c.

"A book of satires not inferior to any which have been the light since the time of Præd, and not unworthy to be ranked alongside the Anti-Jacobin. . . . Some of the most brilliant of many brilliant verses contributed to the Saturday Review."—ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.

"They are more than clever enough to deserve collection in a book."—SCOTSMAN.

London: W. H. ALLEN & CO., 13, WATERLOO PLACE, And at CALCUTTA.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)
ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1837.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service news, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of illustrated articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Those whom the matter concerns will find a faithful and fertile source of information."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"Contains a fresh recipe for every day of the year, is clearly printed, and of a handy size. The recipes are clearly set forth, and likely to be of practical assistance to cooks and housewives, since they have all been approved by experience."—THE CATERER.

"A useful little cooking book."—HOME NEWS.

"Miss Lucy Jones' 365 receipts are admirable for their terseness and for the ease with which they can be understood. This handy book is a veritable treasure to young housekeepers."—PUBLIC OPINION.

"The collection as a whole in this handy and useful volume will be highly prized."—BRITISH WEEKLY.

"We could not recommend a better work."—ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE.

"A considerable number of the recipes are out of the ordinary run, and those which we have examined in detail appear to be constructed on sound principles."—MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

"Will be found extremely serviceable."—METRO POLITAN.

Orders are executed for every description of NAVAL and MILITARY APPOINTMENTS and CLOTHING, MESS SUPPLIES, including Wines, Provisions, Plate, Glass, China, Cutlery, Arms, Accoutrements, Band Instruments, &c., and all kinds of household and personal requisites, at the lowest prices. A comprehensive ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE will be forwarded on application. No orders for goods will be executed at Catalogue prices unless accompanied by remittances for their cost.

Special attention is given to the regular despatch of Newspapers and Periodicals, a Price List of which will be furnished to applicants.

New and Second-hand Books are supplied to Clubs and private individuals on advantageous terms; also Stationery for office and private use.

PASSAGE AND FORWARDING DEPARTMENT.

This Department undertakes the selection of Berths by mail or other steamers, suitable vessels being recommended and passages secured at owner's rates, without charge for Commission.

Intending passengers are invited to send their addresses to MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND CO., who will forward free of charge a copy of their "Traveller's Guide." Personal baggage Collected, Shipped, and Insured.

Passengers leaving England receive the personal attention of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND CO., or their representatives.

Passengers Homeward are received on arrival at the various docks by the representatives of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND CO., and especial attention is paid to Ladies, Children, and Invalids.

MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND CO.'s clerks meet the steamers of the P. and O. and other Lines, on arrival at Plymouth, Gravesend, and the Docks, to receive instructions and render such assistance as passengers may require.

Passengers' Baggage and Packages not immediately required may be stored in a dry Warehouse kept for that purpose, at a moderate rent, and facilities are afforded for examination when desired.

Goods, Baggage, and Parcels of every description are received for despatch to all parts of the world, or cleared and forwarded to their destination, in accordance with instructions.

Forms of Declaration for Customs and Insurance are furnished on application.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Real Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 1st November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 30th October; and from Calcutta to the 29th October.

H.E. THE VICEROY visited Ulwar on Monday, October 27th, and inspected the troops there, visited the Lady Dufferin Hospital, and laid the foundation-stone of a new palace for the Maharajah. On Tuesday morning his Excellency reached Ajmere, where he addressed the Municipal Corporation on the subject of municipal government and invested the Nawab of Tonk with the Order of G.C.I.E. On Wednesday he inspected the forces, and in the evening held a reception at Doulat Bagh. On Thursday H.E. visited the Mayo College, where he unveiled a portrait of Sir Edward Bradford.

SPEAKING at a State banquet at Ulwar, his Excellency explained that he was anxious to devote his first tour to seeing something of those important defences which had been created, or which were in progress, for securing the British Empire from attack from without. He proposed to devote the earlier part of his second tour to making himself acquainted with some of the most important of those Rajpoot States which had played so conspicuous a part in the history of that country, and which they were justified in regarding as not only one of the most interesting, but one of the most loyal, sections of British India.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY was to leave Mahabeshwar for a tour in Kathiawar on Nov. 6th.

LATEST news from Port Tregear dispels the idea of trouble with the Southern Lushai clans this season. The tribes south of Fort Tregear have sent in their submission, and have promised to return their captives.

THE Shirinis are reported to be preparing to resist Colonel Morgan and General White on their arrival at Apozai.

THE two columns of the Zhoob Field Force have met at Apozai.

THE barracks at Murree were struck by lightning. One soldier was killed, and three were injured.

THE Government of India have decided to disband another Madras regiment, and to organise a fourth regiment in Burma.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY has arranged to leave India for England by the P. and O. steamer Oriental about the middle of December.

A MEMORIAL to the late Mr. McConaghey is being organised by his brother civilians in the N.W. Provinces in addition to the proposals that have been started by the Native gentlemen at Lucknow. The Honorary Secretary is Mr. Alan Cadell, Commissioner of Bareilly, who will be glad to receive contributions.

THE ceremony of investing the Maharaja Rana of Patiala with full powers of administration in his State was performed by the Viceroy on October 23rd. Lord Lansdowne in addressing the Maharaja in Durbar spoke of the efficiency of the Council that has carried on the Government during the long minority under the presidency of the late Sir Deva Singh, adding some counsel to the young ruler on the responsibilities of the position he now comes to occupy. The Maharaja in reply was able to point to a long list of enlightened measures carried out in his State as an earnest of the future, and dwelt with evident pride and satisfaction on the condition of his war service troops which the Viceroy was to inspect next day.

MR. T. M. MACPHERSON, Deputy Secretary in the Legislative Department, intends while at home to revise and bring out a new edition of his work on Mortgages. The last addition appeared in 1885, and as it treats more particularly of the law prevailing in Bengal and the North-West Provinces a new issue will be at once valuable and welcome.

NEWS has been received in Lahore of the death of Nawab Sir Nawazish Ali Khan, K.C.I.E., while journeying on a pilgrimage to Mecca. His death will be a great loss to the Mahomedan community of the Punjab, which can ill afford to lose such loyal and enlightened leaders.

RAO BAHADUR KHUNDERAO CHUNUNRAO BEDARKER, Judge of the City Small Cause Court, Poona, has been appointed Prime Minister to the Maharaja Holkar.

Two of the ringleaders in the recent riot at Cambay have been sentenced to six years' imprisonment each, and four others to five years' imprisonment.

THE Czarewitch and his brother are expected to reach Bombay about Dec. 23rd.

THE Director-General of Railways was to leave Simla on a tour on Nov. 10th, and proceed via Sukkur to Kurrachee, Sibi, and Quetta after visiting Killah Abdulla and New Chaman from the 21st to the 25th.

THE Government of India are prepared to sanction the running of weekly passenger expresses in connection with the Overland Mail, the Postal Department being charged with the actual cost only.

BOMBAY Army Headquarters were to be re established at Poona on the 5th inst.

DURING the month of September 4,725,866 lbs. of cotton, worth Rs.9,19,967, were exported from Bombay by sea.

DR. VOELCKER leaves Simla about the 21st Nov., and proceeds to Poona, and sails from Calcutta en route for London on Dec. 18th.

THE Asiatic Steam Navigation Company have obtained a contract for conveying the convicts between Madras and Port Blair.

A PROJECT is on foot to connect the town of Kurnool by a branch line with the Kurnool-road Station on the Bellary-Kistna Railway, distant thirty-two miles. The proposal of the Southern Mahratta Railway for the construction of the line has been submitted to the Madras Government for report.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Madras Mail says that from personal observation and inquiries in Sonapet, Ichapur, Berhampore, and elsewhere, he finds that there is not the slightest chance, as stated by the Pioneer, of a famine occurring in those taluqs. The harvest is expected to be good.

THE tenth annual meeting of the Representative Assembly was held at Mysore on October 29th. The Dewan, in his address, gave a general review of its administration. The receipts showed an increase of fifteen lakhs as compared with the previous year. The Dewan laid stress on the encouragement of indigenous industries, and referred to the proposed iron concession and the system of life insurance for Government servants under contemplation, which, he said, was calculated to benefit the public service by promoting its independence and purity and improving its general tone. In conclusion, the Dewan said that the moderation, intelligence, and practical good sense which characterised the discussions of the Representatives in past years, convinced the Government of Mysore that the wealthier and more enlightened classes may safely be allowed to elect members for the Assembly. Rules were accordingly framed providing for such elections. Various local fund boards, municipalities, and public associations will also depute members to the Assembly. It is proposed hereafter to gradually enlarge the circle of electors so as to give a wider effect to the principles of representation in the constitution of the Assembly. The announcement of this concession in the election gave great satisfaction.

ON October 1st a party of Bengali wood-cutters working beyond the inner line at a place called Bongkong Tola, on the west bank of the Barak, about six hours by boat with stream, and south of Mynadhur, were visited by a party of twenty Lushais, all young men, and armed with guns and dhas, carrying meal and game, who asked for salt and rice. One of them, who spoke Bengali, said they knew some one had killed a sahib, and as the burra sahib was very angry they were 'all angry too. They told the Bengalis not to be frightened, as they would not hurt them, but would return in a few days to collect their rent, as they did not care about boundaries, and the wood-cutters must pay for their timber. The Lushais said they had come to see if the sahib's people were cutting paths, and they went away in a down-stream direction along the Pathar Khal by which they reached a hill-path. A frontier police flanking party killed an armed Lushai in Thanruna's burned village on the 10th, whose flintlock musket bore the name of Private Brown, 67th Regiment.

THE defamation case brought by Mr. Warburton against Mr. John Buchanan of Gujarat, came on for hearing before Mr. Sykes, Assistant Commissioner of Lahore, on October 30th. Mr. Buchanan elected to tender an apology to Mr. Warburton for the defamatory statement sent by him to the Tribune. Counsel made a draft of the apology, which the accused accepted, signed, and undertook to get published in the Civil and Military Gazette, the Pioneer, and the Tribune. If this is satisfactorily done the prosecution undertook to withdraw the charge on November 17th. Meanwhile Mr. Buchanan is allowed to remain on bail.

NOTES.

THE news from India this week is quiet enough—notwithstanding the telegram that one of the columns of the Zhob Field Force had been fired upon, and a Sepoy killed. The expedition is strong enough to put down all opposition quickly and effectively should such be offered.

THE organisation of the troops belonging to the Native States goes on apace, and seemingly with excellent results. Lord Dufferin's policy in preferring contributions of men instead of contributions of money has now proved itself to be sound and popular. The "Imperial Service Corps" promises well, and the Indian Princes are delighted with the arrangements made by the Government of India for the drill and discipline of their troops without in any way interfering with the independent action of the Chiefs themselves.

THE whole of the Indian Press is loud in praise of the arrangements made, and all true friends of England and India will rejoice at the promise of peace and stability of rule which is thus guaranteed. "Wherever the scheme is at work," says one journal, "the military career gains in credit; it is reopened to men of good birth and breeding, who can now see their way to usefulness if not to distinction under their own chiefs. Such of the reorganised forces as have come under notice already show the marks of better discipline and training to which they have been subjected. The scheme has been in operation for only two years, but it seems already possible to count up its military and political advantages. Nothing has been done in rashness, and no step that has been taken has had to be retraced, and it is scarcely too soon to say that the work will endure, to the good of the Native States themselves, no less than of the Empire at large."

THE formation of a fourth Burma regiment has been sanctioned by the Government of India, and the Myingyan Military Police Battalion, one of the finest in the service, has been given up for the purpose. It is also settled that a Madras regiment is to be disbanded—it is not yet known which. In consequence of the growing peace of Upper Burma reductions of the military police amounting to 3,000 men will be made this year, and other large reductions will be made at an early date.

THE Chief Commissioner intends amalgamating Minbu with the Magwe Battalion; Sagaing with the Lower Chindwin, and Pakoku with Myingyan. Thus three commanders will be saved, and considerable reductions made.

THE evidence taken at Calcutta by the Factory Commission so far goes to show that, as far as Bengal is concerned, the inquiry was altogether supererogatory. If the factory operatives on this side of India have any grievance it is not on account of severity of work, or length of hours, or lack of holidays, but the fact that there are too many enforced holidays, and the hands do not get as much work as they are willing to perform. This state of affairs is entirely due to the condition of trade, which has made it necessary to curtail the production and close the mills three days every week, while on open days the working hours do not, as a rule, exceed nine hours.

AN instance of the usual disinclination of Madras Natives to spend money for purely philanthropic purposes is afforded by the Victoria Hospital for Caste and Goshia Women, which was built by the Maharajah of Venkatagiri, at a cost of one lakh. The annual expenditure is Rs. 11,000 and the income Rs. 6,000. Appeals for funds having been made in vain, the Governor has persuaded the hospital committee to call a public meeting, when Government will state what support it will give, and it will be explained that if public support is not forthcoming the institution must fall through.

IN that enlightened Presidency disgraceful conduct is not supposed to ensure any academical disgrace amongst graduates of the University there. At a meeting of the Senate held lately a proposition was made that if any person who has obtained a degree of the University or a certificate of having passed any examination held by the University is convicted in a criminal offence by a Court of Law, or if such person is guilty of disgraceful conduct, it shall be competent for the University, after inquiring into the circumstances of the offence, to deprive such person of his degree, or cancel the certificate of his having passed an examination. The proposition was, however, lost.

THE Times of India says:—"The conversion of the only 'Levy' regiments still left in the Bengal Army proves that the policy of enlisting only the warlike races is to be thoroughly carried out. The lathy Oudh men have been disbanded, and Goorkhas, Dogras, and Mahomedans enrolled in their places. Oudh men are always a source of trouble, being insolent in manner and inferior in drill and discipline of the stuff from which the mutineers were formed, and any regiment is well rid of them. The disbandment will do much to satisfy Madras feeling, which is still somewhat sore at losing three of her own regiments, and should cause Bombay to scan her lists with care. Have we no regiments containing a large proportion of the less warlike races which could be advantageously replaced by regiments of Mahrattas? The tendency to enlist any men who come up to the standard requirements in height and chest measurement is increasing, and, we fear, too many men of non-warlike races find their way into the ranks. If this is not stopped by regimental officers with a firm hand, it will be stopped from without, with, possibly, unpleasant results. Let us look well to our recruits; it is better to fail in bringing the corps up to strength than to enlist inferior men, and it is only by keeping its recruits up to the mark in every way that the Bombay Army can maintain its high prestige."

Reis and Rayet writes in its last issue:—"To-day is the seventh of the moon—the first of the four grandest days of the blessed Doorga Pooja! Alas! blessed no more! This year's Pooja is a Pooja of mourning—thanks to the Government of the foreigners who fatten on the trade of our land! This year we are doomed to mingle our tears with the holy waters of the Ganges in our offerings to the Goddess. For the first time since the people of Bengal, of their free instance, invited the British to sovereignty in India, the darkness of disappointment and pain clouds this auspicious Religious Festival. For the first time the Government has mutilated the leave for the Pooja by one-third. It is not often that the British Government in India in such matters reminds the people of their utter insignificance and abject helplessness in their own land."

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT has already begun to experience the guardianship of the Bengal Press. The Indian Daily News says:—"We do not consider it altogether a misfortune to the province that Sir Charles Elliott is not expected to be a 'popular' occupant of the provincial throne. A man who sternly sets himself to do his duty as a principle of action can never be popular in the general sense of the term. He may infuse something of conscience into the administration where it is much needed without winning praise from his subordinates. But he might thereby do a much greater service to the province, and win, it may be, even the silent gratitude of millions who might not loudly trumpet forth his praise. The position is a high and noble one on one condition. It is no exception from the principle that no office is honourable in itself, but only in the degree in which it is honourably filled. It is a position of great possibilities, as well as of a mere humdrum routine; it will largely depend upon Sir Charles Elliott whether he makes it one or the other."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 13.

The Draband Column of the Zhob force, while marching to meet General White on the 8th inst., was fired upon, and one Sepoy was killed. The political officers think that this was due to the sudden appearance of the troops near the village without previous communication, and regard the situation, now that military operations are practically ended, as unchanged. Every Kidderzai chief is now in camp with Sir R. Sandeman except Matarza, who is reported to have fled the country, and Diluch Khan, who has already submitted. They are detained as hostages as a precautionary measure.

The Viceroy arrived at Jeypore yesterday and exchanged formal visits with the Maharajah.

The Times of India says that Lord Connemara has done splendid work for Madras, and has earned everywhere the highest admiration and respect.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 16.

On Friday the Viceroy inspected the transport corps raised by the Maharajah of Jeypore for the Imperial defence scheme. There were 100 carts, each drawn by two ponies, and everything was in a state of high efficiency; the train will eventually consist of 400 carts and 900 ponies. Afterwards the Viceroy laid the foundation stone of a new hospital, which is intended to serve as a regimental hospital for the transport corps, and will have a staff trained so as to be ready to proceed on service at any moment.

The Madras Mail announces that a public meeting will be held to express general regret at Lord Connemara's departure.

BURMA.

RANGOON, NOV. 15.

The survey for the proposed railway to Konlon Ferry, on the Salween, will not be proceeded with at present. The delay is regrettable as the line is essential to secure the trade of Yunnan.

The Chief Commissioner recently refused, on the ground of want of funds, to construct thirteen miles of metalled road to connect the somewhat important town of Shwaygyeen in Lower Burma with the railway. The Government have, however, decided on expending half-a-million rupees in metalling the road from Thabeitkyit to the Ruby Mines.

The local Government refuse to allow the Chins to come beyond the Myittha Valley, which is situated to the west of Gungaw. Some Chins who visited Myingyan to trade have been arrested and imprisoned. Such an order is equivalent to shutting out the Chins from influences which would tend to civilize them.

Nov. 16.

The military prison at Thayetmyo was burned down yesterday. The cause of the fire is unknown. The prisoners were all saved. The amount of damage done is estimated at a lakh and a half of rupees.

Mr. Mackenzie will arrive in Burma on December 6.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THREE PENSIONERS.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The following has been sent to us as an illustrative story, the moral of which can be realised in the Pay Department:

"Hi, Reynolds! well met. Drawn as yet?" asked Mr. Charles Amos, formerly Quartermaster Sergeant of her Majesty's—th Regiment, but now pensioned off.

"Not oi," replied Reynolds, also a pensioner of the same regiment.

"How is that? Hain't he come yet?" with a jerk of his thumb towards the sanctum of the Pension Paymaster.

"E'ez come, but 'e says, or rather the notice does, that 'e is not visible."

"Well, that's all square," rejoined Amos, "he be bothered a good bit, that he be, by us. I spose he'll call us in decent like and sign our papers."

"Dacint loike is it thin! Do you call it dacint loike for the clerk to tell me they was not giving to pay us to-day?"

"No; did he! and why for?"

"Arx the guvnr that. Oi came here on the first av the month, and Ramchinder, the clerk, he says to me, 'Come again on the fourth. New rule passed.' So oi comes again on the fourth, that is to-day, and he jist now says to me, 'Come agin on the sixth.'"

"'You be suggared!' says oi, 'is the guvnr visible?'"

"No," says he: 'big notice up—see it there?' And sure enough there was a notice that no one could see his Himperial Inness cept he war called in. So I kept moy tongue within moy jaw and thinks to myself: 'Pat, me bhoy,' says oi to moyself: 'fwhat you are goin' to do with yerself? Ye came on the fourth from Igatpuri and put up at a second-rate boardin' house at rupees one per day; that is, one—two—three—four rupees. Now there will av coorse be two more rupees till the sixth, which, together with thrain fare, will amount alltogether to rupees noine. 'Fwhat will your Misses say, Pat, at all, at all?'"

"Well I is in the same predicament as yourself," sympathisingly says Amos. "I'll see the old chap, that I will."

"An' war is the good av it? E'll not see you. By-the-by, fwhat are they cutting down our pinsions for? It is the exchange 'as done it."

"Exchange? fwhat is that got to do with it? Is not a rupee a rupee; and a pice a pice? Faix then, what kind av a thing is exchange? Who made it? By me father's nose and the tares av war! Oi'd loike to 'ave the 'andling av 'im. But we are dthriftin' from the subject. What are ye going to do? Arrah! here comes mother Maloney, the woman with the cough stuck in her throat. Good morning to you, Mrs. Maloney!"

"And a good morning to you, Misther Discul; and you, Misther Amos. Have you (cough! cough! know cough!) drawn?"

"Not yit."

"Then it be same with me (cough!). The clerk says to me, 'I cannot see the Paymaster,' and I says to him I could, and in I goes, and the guvnr got angry."

"Who is you? says he, glaring at me like I don't know what (cough! cough! cough!) through his spectacles."

"Missez Maloney, I says, bowin' politely like."

"'Is that your Christian name or your surname?' he axes me, as if I did not know me Catecism."

"Me surname, Sir," says I.

"'An' you're thoroughbred Irish,' says he with a laugh, cause I'm black."

"'No, Sir,' says I."

"'Come, don't blush,' says he, again laughin. 'My, how red you are getting. How do you spell your name?'"

"'M-a-l-o-n-e and a y, Sir,' says I."

"'Spell door,' says he."

"'D-o-r-e,' says I, very shake like, for I's not a matriculated person."

"He laughed, rudely, he did, and pointing to the door, he says, 'There it is,' and I shuffled out, his laugh following as I went." (Cough! cough! cough!)

"Be aisy with that cough av yours, darlint. You'll bust one of these hodd days," said Pat.

"What are you goin' to do?" asked Amos, of Reynolds.

"Gwing to do? Why gwing away, of course. But 'ill do this, that oi will explain matters in the papers."

"Do you think the papers will pooblish it?"

"Oi know a feller as will wrote for me; and I'll instrucht 'im to sind it to the papers. They is the chaps to do it. They is Christians; and 'elps all that are in throuble." And Pat walked away, determining as he went, to put into execution what he had just said.

THE CLAIMS OF THE CENTRAL INDIA CHIEFS.

(Statesman.)

We can hardly congratulate the Government of India either on the course of events which led to its difference with the Chiefs of the States of Orcha, Datia and Samthar in the matter of their claims to compensation for lands taken up for the Indian Midland Railway, or on the terms of the Memorandum in which it has just disposed of the subject. One would have thought that, when it was determined to acquire these lands for the construction of the line, one of the first points to be authoritatively decided would have been the question of compensation, and that in any case the decision of this question would have preceded the actual transfer of the lands. How far, in the absence of such a decision, the Public Works Department were warranted in promising compensation, is a question into which it is unnecessary to enter. That, in 1886, they did promise compensation, and that it was in reliance upon this promise that the lands were made over by the Chiefs, is fully admitted. Nor do the Chiefs seem to have received any intimation that the Government disputed its liability, till more than two years afterwards, when Mr. Henvey pronounced against their claims. In taking this step Mr. Henvey, it is said, was merely reaffirming the orders passed by his predecessor, Sir Lepel Griffin; and Sir Lepel Griffin, in his turn, had acted under instructions from the Government of India. That the Government of India would have issued such instructions had it known what the Public Works Department had done in the matter is scarcely conceivable. On the other hand, it is hardly possible that Sir Lepel Griffin did not possess this knowledge, and, if he did, his conduct in withholding it from the Government was most reprehensible. In any case, it seems a very unfortunate thing that Mr. Henvey's orders were issued in the face of the previous promise. This being the position the Government of India would, it seems to us, have best consulted its own dignity by admitting its liability without reserve, and ordering the money to be handed over to the chiefs as expeditiously as possible, and with an expression of its regret for the misapprehension which had led to so much delay. But what it has done is very different from this. It certainly admits its liability, which it could not well deny, and, as it must needs have done under the circumstances, it professes its readiness to meet the claims. But the admission is made so grudgingly, and the offer of satisfaction is so qualified, as to leave the claimants no possible room for doubting that they will damn themselves eternally in its estimation if they are mean enough to take it at its word. "On a review of the facts of the case," says the Memorandum, "the Governor-General in Council has ordered that the circumstances should be explained to the Maharajas of Datia, Orcha and Samthar. It will be intimated to them that the Government of India are in the habit of giving free land to any company which constructs a railway, and consider themselves fortunate if they succeed in attracting the capital to the country with so small a concession. When, therefore, the Government of India ask Native States to give the lands required for a railway, free of cost, they are demanding in this respect no more than they themselves give where British territory is concerned. In cases where it has been shown that the free grant of land would impose a disproportionate burden on any State, compensation has no doubt occasionally been granted; but in so far as this consideration affects the Orcha, Datia, and Samthar States, the Government of India has no reason to doubt that they were wealthy enough to warrant the expectation that they would contribute towards works of public utility from which their territories were likely to derive special benefit. It is, however, undoubtedly the case that the durbars of these States were led by the statements made to them by the officers in the employment of Government to expect that compensation would be given for the lands surrendered. The Governor-General in Council regards an engagement thus made on his behalf as binding upon the Government of India, in spite of the fact that, for the reasons mentioned above, compensation would not usually be payable under similar circumstances. If, therefore, after they have been made fully aware of the facts, their Highnesses the Maharajas of Orcha, Datia, and Samthar now think proper to press their claims for compensation, they will receive such compensation upon an equitable scale."

Should the Chiefs of Orcha, Datia and Samthar be disposed to argue the question on its merits from the point of view from which they are thus invited to consider it, they might not improbably be inclined to question the completeness of the analogy between their position and that of the Government of India as regards the donation of lands for railways running through their territories. While admitting that, like the Government of India, though not necessarily in the same degree, they may expect to reap considerable indirect benefit from the construction of such works, they might, for instance, point out that they are not, like the Government of India, the owners of a great system of railways, and consequently directly interested in the effect which the opening of a new line may have on the general receipts of the system. And there are many other points of difference which they might possibly urge with effect. But leaving controversy of this kind out of the question, and accepting the arguments of the Government of India for what they are worth, the fact remains—and it is a most important fact—that they are ex post facto arguments. With whatever propriety they might have been urged, for the purpose of inducing the Chiefs to give their lands, in the first instance, it is something worse than impropriety to put them forward now, when the lands have been given conditionally, with the view of shaming them, or frightening them—for it really amounts to this—into granting the Government a release from its undertaking. We remarked that the Government had left the claimants no possible room for deceiving themselves as to the real purpose of the Memorandum. But, to make assurance doubly sure, it has, in the third sentence of the passage quoted by us from the Memorandum, had recourse to a remarkable expedient. "When * * the Government of India ask Native States to give the lands required for a railway free of cost, they are demanding, &c." Precisely. It has long been pretty well understood that, as between the Government and a Native State, "asking" and "demanding" are synonymous terms; but we hardly expected to find the fact admitted so frankly in an official document emanating from the Governor-General in Council.

THE INCOME TAX.

(Anglo-India.)

In their reply to the memorial of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on the income-tax, the Government of India have completely thrown off the mask. Not only do they admit that they regard the tax as a permanent feature in the fiscal system of the country, but they deny that it was ever intended to be anything else. It is as well, perhaps, that there should be an end to all dissimulation in the matter; for it is only the belief that the tax was imposed to meet a temporary necessity and would be abolished as soon as this had passed away, that has hitherto prevented all classes of the community from uniting their voices against it. Had they been reassured on this point, the public would have been content to leave things as they stood for a season; for, in spite of the prospect of a handsome surplus, there is a general feeling that the time has not yet arrived for any extensive remission of taxation. Now, however, the uncertainty of the future, instead of furnishing an argument for forbearance, will operate as a strong incentive to vigorous action; for no one will believe that it is for the sake of a paltry addition of some million sterling to the revenue that the Government has determined to retain so unpopular an impost. The inference on all sides will be that the tax is retained because it can be increased at any moment, by a mere stroke of the pen, to enable the Government to add to its revenues with a minimum of trouble to itself, and without offending either the susceptibilities of Exeter Hall or the pockets of Manchester.

RAILWAYS AND FEVER.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The fever epidemic has enormously raised the rates of mortality during the last few months, and will be responsible, we fear, for very many deaths of enfeebled persons during the coming winter. The circumstances, indeed, are grave enough, we think, to justify the deputation of a special commission of inquiry. The opinion largely prevails among the Natives that the embankment of the North-Western Railway has caused, and will continue to cause, an increased prevalence of fever in districts affected by it. The country above the railway in times of rain, they say, gets water-logged; the crops adjacent to the line—as anyone can see from the railway carriage windows—rot, and pestilence is engendered. The country below the line—we use the words "above" and "below" with reference to the natural drainage slope of the land—in fine weather suffers from premature drought, the supply of water for tanks and pools having been diminished, and the people are thus more quickly reduced to straits for water.

Lastly, owing to the places where the line is pierced, to let the flood water through, being so few and far between, each outlet has to serve so wide an area that the collected water becomes a veritable flood and the drainage current a torrent. Owing to this, portions of the land are devastated, by having the surplus water of large areas poured upon them. All these considerations seem to point to the necessity for very considerable expenditure in piercing the line throughout its length at much more frequent intervals, in order to restore as far as possible the natural drainage of the country. Until a commission has, after investigating the causes of the increased fever in the province, decided that no such measures are necessary, it will not be surprising if even the most intelligent Natives regard the railway system as anything but an unmixed blessing to the country.

A LADY DOCTOR AND LORD CONNEMARA.

(Pioneer.)

One of the chief speakers at the Madras Eurasian Association's meeting at which Lord Connemara presided the other day was Dr. Emma Ryder, an American Lady of Bombay. Her speech, we opine, must have rather bewildered any among her audience whose own views in life were shaping themselves towards the medical profession. No girl should "attempt the study of medicine," Dr. Ryder warned them, unless she had "the strength of a Hercules" and the sympathy of a sorrowing angel; "was not 'afraid of the dead and dying and of contagious diseases,' or 'of a man suffering from delirium tremens, or the lunatic who springs at you when you approach him.'" On the other hand she must be able to "administer the sacred rite of baptism to the dying child and to console the sorrowing mother," to write out the will of a dying father and then "walk the streets to find witnesses to the same," and to "calmly take the last messages from dying lips to be sent to loved ones far away." Besides this Goldsmith's catalogue of the qualifications required of an usher fades into insignificance, but the list does not end even here: she must "study the regular and the irregular, study the old school and the new, study allopathy, homœopathy, hydropathy, and electricity, and then study all he cures, the water cures, the sand, sun, mud, milk, blue glass, raw meat, faith, and other tenures," so that "When you have a nervous patient you can start from A to Z and then from Z back again to A," and—"when you have exhausted the entire category you have only to pray for new cures and systems." After such a speech Lord Connemara evidently considered the mind of the audience required a sedative, and proceeded to administer it in his happy way. "If I were a lady," said his Excellency, "I should almost be overwhelmed with the duties of life laid before me after that speech, because I feel that it would be perfectly impossible for any person possessed of the ordinary amount of human perseverance and human goodness to be able to come up at all to the ideal Dr. Ryder has laid before us"—and more to the same purpose. Whatever effect the lady's speech might have had on her hearers, it was at all events the means of exhibiting the present Governor of Madras as a ready speaker, for it formed the topic of a third of the Chairman's address. Speech-making is one of the many things in which Lord Connemara is a contrast to his pedantic predecessor, who never delivered a speech before it had been written out, revised, and carefully copied by an amanuensis ready to be given to the Press.

A NEW INDIAN INDUSTRY.

(Indian Engineer.)

Cast-iron ties are now manufactured at the Burrakur Iron-works, Burrakur, Bengal, and at the works of the East Indian Railway Company at Jamalpur, Bengal. The engineering Press advocates the establishment of more extensive works, so as to make the manufacture of ties and other material for railways and general use a home industry, instead of importing so largely from England as at present. There is abundance of good ore, with coal and limestone, all practically unworked, while thousands of tons of cast-iron ties are brought from England every year, and the railways have large stocks of old rails on hand. Experience at the railway shops and foundries has shown that Native labour can be utilised. The Government has been urged to assist in this enterprise, and there have been propositions to establish steel works at Burrakur. The Burrakur Iron Works supply pig iron and manufacture large quantities of railway chairs and ties. In February, 1888, it was reported that they were carrying out a large order for Denham-Olpherts plate ties, at the rate of 10,000 per month. The prices of chairs and ties was about 3 rupees 8 annas per 11½ pounds (about ninety-seven cents per pound); or fifty-five to fifty-eight rupees ($18.33 to $19.33) per ton. From Mr. Ritter von Schwarz, superintendent of the works, I have received a very full report. Jamalpur is, practically, a railway town, having the works of the railway company, while the majority of the inhabitants are employed in the offices or workshops. At the foundries attention has been given to the production of the Denham-Olpherts plate ties, the company using its own scrap, supplemented by pig iron from the Burrakur Iron Works. About 10,000 tons of castings have been worked up into 100,000 of these ties. During the year ending March 31st, 1889, 100,000 of these ties were made, and the men were then at work on a number for the Patna-Gya Railway. At the end of 1888 the shops turned out 400 or 500 complete ties per day. A large quantity of the Burrakur iron was used, the use of imported iron having been suspended. The wrought-iron for the tie-bars, keys, &c., is made from old rails and other scrap, and rolled by the company's rolling mill, which is said to be the only one in India, and is worked with marked success. Having found that considerable economy would result from manufacturing the ties for its own lines the company has engaged an inspector from England to superintend the work, and to carry out the tests required by the specifications adopted for similar ties manufactured in England.

THE AGE OF CONSENT.

(Pioneer.)

There are signs already that a certain section of the orthodox Hindus view with disfavour the agitation to raise the age of consent in the case of the marriage of young children. Their attitude is the more remarkable after the recent case in Calcutta, in which a Hindu jury showed that their judgment was not to be biased by religious prejudice; and we doubt if any but the most blindly conservative among the community will oppose legislation by the Government. The Bangabasi, a journal with the largest circulation of any vernacular print in India, has, however, taken up a most hostile attitude. It protests against the attempt to civilise the Native community according to Western methods, and attacks the Calcutta Health Society for having memorialised the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in favour of raising the age of consent. The high-caste Brahmin writer does not hesitate to speak freely, but there is a vein of exaggeration running through his remarks which will deceive no one. "God alone knows," he says, "what the result of the memorial will be, but we believe the Government will not excite fire throughout the country. It is true that we are a subject race, and the English Government are our rulers, but for all that they ought not to trample upon the feelings of their subjects." Then follow a mischievous reference to the Mutiny, a hint that even the common insect will turn if trampled upon, an expression of confidence in the Government, but of mistrust in the wicked men who are misleading it with false ideas as to the sympathy of the country generally being in favour of reform. The article is a significant one, and shows that orthodox Hinduism in its most bigoted form is still active. If further proof of this were needed it is to be found in the utterances of the same paper on the dangers which threaten the institution of caste owing to the mixing of Brahmins and Chamars, Vaisyas and Badias, Sudras and Mlechas in railway trains and in public schools. But these orthodox Hindus have to count with those in the community who have come directly under the influence of Western culture and education, and if they continue their opposition to such reforms as those connected with the age of consent and infant marriage they will effectually alienate the sympathies of their own educated countrymen and of the whole civilised world.

THE WARBURTON CASE.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The text of the judgment in the Warburton defamation case is in many respects disappointing. The essential part of the prosecution is dealt with in something less than half-a-dozen lines; the charges of a secondary importance—those relating to the brutal attack of the Lahore paper on Mr. Warburton's mother—are treated as though they were of the first importance. Now, however substantial may have been Mr. Warburton's right to bring to book the defamers of his family—and this part of the defamation is noteworthy only as it showed the animus with which the Lahore writer took up what he called a public question—it was mainly in order to vindicate his official character that he was allowed to enter upon the prosecution. And it is precisely upon this part of the case that the magistrate is silent. All that he says is that after comparing the evidence, and carefully testing it by the general probabilities of the case, he was not satisfied that he would have been justified in framing a charge. Anything like an effort to analyse the evidence—to weigh the evidence of two officials of standing against a convicted thief like Ved Kour and her convicted paramour—is carefully avoided, as though the magistrate was anxious not to hurt the feelings of the two leading witnesses for the defence. It is not for others to take up a task which the magistrate has so strangely neglected; but it seems to us, on a careful survey of the evidence, that the object of Mr. Warburton's assailants was to break him, much more than to constitute themselves the protectors of the criminal class whom he has been only too successful in keeping in awe. The singularly inconclusive resolution of the Punjab Government, which with timid discrimination divided compliment and blame between Mr. Warburton and his accusers, is only less satisfactory, from a public point of view, than this decision, in which the magistrate, by a process of "obvious comment and inevitable inference," establishes that a newspaper has no right to vilify the mother even of a British police officer, but at the same time gives a wide berth to all the questions in the case that challenged the exercise of a certain amount of perception and judicial courage.

THE CONGRESS.

(Statesman.)

The Congress will now soon assemble in Calcutta once more, and, from all we hear, the preparations for this great annual event are fairly advanced. But there are one or two important questions of a delicate nature which have yet to be settled. Who is to be the President of the next Congress? is still an open question. Is he to be an Englishman, as has been the case for the last two years, or is the honour to be conferred upon a native of India? It was thought, we believe, at one time that Mr. Herbert Gladstone might be induced to come out to India again and take the chair at the sixth session of the National Congress. It is impossible that he can do so, having regard to the fact that he is practically his father's Private Secretary, and that a General Election may take place any day. But the wisdom of having Englishmen to preside over the deliberations of the Congress year after year appears to us doubtful. It may be taken by unfriendly critics to imply an absence of capacity on the part of the Native community, that would be fatal to the cause which the Congress leaders have advocated with so much earnestness and ability. We appreciate the motives of our Native fellow-subjects in wishing that Englishmen should be associated with them in the responsible task of guiding this great national movement. They desire to make it clear that the Congress involves no antagonism of interests between Englishmen and Natives of India, and that its great underlying principle is the permanence to British rule, subject to those conditions which alone, in the long run, can make that rule enduring and endurable. It is in this spirit that the movement is conducted; and, therefore, it is that it appeals with an irresistible claim to the sympathies of all right-thinking Englishmen. In presence of the forces which we have set in motion, and for which our rule alone is responsible, it is no longer possible to govern India according to the ancient patriarchal principles. The Congress prepares the way for the introduction, with the full concurrence of public opinion, of such cautious reforms as the progressive circumstances of the country may demand. That the English rulers of India are fully alive to the necessities of the situation is sufficiently evidenced by the recommendations of Lord Dufferin for the reform of the Councils—suggestions which are acquiesced in generally, we believe, by the present Viceroy. If the Congress leaders would seek to enlist the sympathies of Englishmen they must be moderate in their counsels. Some of its best friends among Englishmen have been lost to the Congress by the adoption of the scheme for an electoral college in connection with the reform of the Legislative Councils. An electoral college is an innovation that will not be understood either here or in England. The practical statesman is not he who constructs ideally perfect schemes, but who works with existing materials, and, moving along the line of least resistance, develops a programme of reform which, while not startling people by its strangeness, is accepted as a welcome accession to the law of the land.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 29.)

SIR STEUART BAYLEY, who is at present on a short march in Sikkim with Mr. Paul and Sir A. Croft, returns to Darjeeling on Nov. 3, and leaves again for the plains a week later, reaching Calcutta on the 11th. Sir Steuart has arranged to leave India by the P. and O. steamer Oriental about the middle of December.

REFERRING specially to the prospects of gold mining in Chota Nagpore, the Commissioner says that the division appears to have "a great future before it." The Bengal Government "attaches considerable importance to mining operations in this division," and adds that "it should be the object of all Government officers in a position of authority to afford every facility for prospecting," to endeavour to obtain suitable candidates to fill the existing vacancies.

The Saturday Evening Journal writes:—"Whatever may be thought or said of the prospects of gold-mining enterprise in Bengal the local Government seems to be a believer in the mineral resources of the Chota Nagpore Division. Mr. Grimley, the Commissioner of the Division, who has exceptional opportunities of knowing, has declared his belief that the Division has a 'great future before it.' The Sonapat Valley, he tells us, is almost encircled by a belt of hills, and some of the reefs in these hills have been reported on favourably by mining geologists. Of course, the opening of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway has brought the district into touch with the commercial world, and has led to the epidemic of gold fever which is at present raging, not as the simple-minded imagine in Bengal alone, but throughout the length and breadth of India. Whatever may be the outcome of the gold speculation, there can be no doubt that it has stirred India to its depths. It is rather a curious commentary upon the attitude of the Press in Bombay that a large part of the capital of the new Companies has been provided by the western city. The Press indeed seems to me to be committed to rather a false position in this matter. It has spoken slightly of the Gold Companies, and yet they are supported with the names of the best business houses in India, and now the Bengal Government has signified its faith in the bona fides of the enterprise."

A COOLIE named Baber Ali, living in Paikparah, had lately married a nika wife, named Meahjan, whom he suspected of carrying on an intrigue with a man named Adoo. In consequence of a quarrel with her, Baber left the house a week ago, but before leaving was heard to threaten that he would "do" for Adoo. At 1 A.M., on Sunday Baber returned home, and found a man whom he thought was Adoo lying asleep in the verandah. Being armed with an axe he struck the sleeping figure on the head with it, inflicting four serious wounds, and then fled. Adoo, it appeared, had knowledge of the fact that Baber intended to attack him, and therefore, instead of occupying his usual sleeping-place, had vacated it, and it was occupied by the wounded man on the night he was attacked. The would-be murderer has been apprehended, and his victim lies in a precarious state.

At a meeting of the Armenian community held on Friday evening at the head quarters of the C.V.I., and convened by Captain M. Z. Martin, for the purpose of considering the proposal to add to the Presidency Volunteer Corps a company, consisting exclusively of Armenians, Dr. Moses was proposed to the chair, about thirty-five gentlemen being present. The chairman, in opening the meeting, said he regretted that no more influential member of the community was present to preside at the meeting. Nevertheless, with the indulgence of the meeting, he would do his best to inaugurate so great a project. He reminded his hearers that several years ago a prominent member of the community, Mr. Catchick Arakiel, had raised a company for the support of the British flag, and he hoped that this contemplated company would render even more signal service to the Government than the one in the days of old. The questions before the meeting was, whether this was to be exclusively an Armenian Company or not, and he would leave it to the meeting to decide. Captain Martin, supported by Mr. W. G. Gregory, suggested that in the event of the community not being able to start a company, the meeting should reserve to itself the right of adding members from other communities to complete the number required to form the company. Captain Avetoom, supported by Messrs. Shircore and Arratoon, held that there was sufficient material and numbers in the Armenian community to form a company, and keep it exclusively an Armenian one, and that the will was all that was wanted. This seemed to be the feeling of the entire meeting, and it was decided that only in the event of the endeavour to form an exclusively Armenian Company failing, the energetic mover of this proposal, Captain M. Z. Martin, should represent the difficulty to those who had joined, and, if agreed to, should recruit from other communities. At the close of the meeting, twenty-nine of the gentlemen present enrolled themselves as members of the new Company. These, with twenty of the bigger boys in the present Armenian Cadet Company, bring the numbers of the proposed new Company up to forty-nine—a respectable total, should they attend parade in anything approaching the above numbers.

MADRAS.

(Oct. 30.)

THE Asiatic Steam Navigation Company has just succeeded in obtaining from Government the contract for conveying convicts between Madras and Port Blair. Indian marine steamers have hitherto performed this work during the troping season, but as the Asiatic Company has the contract for conveying convicts to and from Calcutta, as also the contract for mails, it was thought by the Government of India, which was desirous of encouraging the Company, that the same rule might be applied to Madras.

THE Madras Medical Record is the title of a new and well got up journal which has just been started at Madras. The promoters of the new periodical explain that "the increasing demand for the medical profession necessitates an expositor, a medium by which medical knowledge and medical science should be of greater service to those in the profession than it has been hitherto, to represent the views, advancement, and working of the higher luminaries who are daily endeavouring to excel in the cause of suffering humanity in arresting disease and their cure. To supply this palpable and ever-increasing want the Madras Medical Record is now started, and its conductors confidently look forward with hopefulness to the medical public for their patronage and support, sufficient to sustain them in an effort so much needed in the past. At the present moment, when journalism of every description is being steadily developed, it is very strange—very strange indeed—to find that a calling, a profession of such incalculable value to the world as the Medical Profession, not to possess so serviceable and useful a factor as a Local Medical Journal, to aid and enhance the studies of those who have embraced the Medical Profession, a profession which carries the greatest amount of changes in its various constituted parts. Its changes and improvements are incessant. The discovery of some new theory, medicine, treatment, some new mode of surgical operation, the use of some new drug, are being daily sifted up from the granite of medical science; and we, therefore, think it expedient that a journal like the one we have now sketched out ought to serve the purpose of representing the glorious field of medical labour in the cause of suffering humanity, there being now no journal in Madras which could supply all such information as may come under the direct interests of those in the profession.

LIEUTENANT LOUIS ROBERT TUSON, of the 9th Madras Infantry, now stationed at Royapuram, died on October 27 from abscess of the liver. Only about eight months ago the deceased officer was sent on duty to Burma, but his health breaking down he was invalided and returned to Madras at the beginning of the present month. His first commission was dated the 14th January, 1880. He was appointed lieutenant in the Cheshire Regiment on the 1st July, 1881. In 1888 he was posted to the 9th Madras Infantry, in which regiment he became wing officer on the 24th April, 1884, and quartermaster on the 4th January, 1889. On the 6th January, 1888, he married, at Palamcottah, the second daughter of Colonel F. Middlecoat, Madras Staff Corps, by whom he has one child. Great sympathy is felt for the young widow and her infant in their bereavement.

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 1.)

MR. A. D. YOUNGHUSBAND, C.S., acts as Administrator of the Rajpipla State during the absence of Mr. A. Shewan, C.S.

COLONEL E. W. TREVOR acts as Commissioner in Sindh during the absence of Mr. A. C. Trevor, C.S., on three months' privilege leave. Mr. W. H. F. Bolton will act as Collector and District Magistrate, Hyderabad, and District Registrar, Hyderabad, during the absence of Colonel E. W. Trevor.

ON Saturday afternoon, Dr. Mylne, the Lord Bishop of Bombay, proceeded on a visitation tour to Aden by the mail steamer. Mr. Vernon Bayley, of Messrs. Crawford, Burder, Buckland, and Bayley, a son of the Hon. Mr. Justice Bayley, also left for Europe by the same boat.

MR. W. R. HAMILTON, Second Presidency Magistrate, having returned to Bombay from Europe on Tuesday, took charge of his appointment yesterday, and afterwards sat in the Girgaum Police Court and disposed of morning cases; while Mr. C. W. Richardson resumed his position as Acting Third Presidency Magistrate at the Esplanade Police Court.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay season report for the past week:—Slight rain during week in parts of Belgaum, Dharwar, and Kanara. Total fall insufficient over the greater part of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country, where more rain is required for late crops, and in a few talukas of Gujerat and Kattyawar, where supply of drinking water is insufficient. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing generally. Standing crops withering for want of rain in two talukas of Nassik, and of Poona and two of Ahmednugger; damaged by locusts in four talukas of Kurrachee, one of Hyderabad and two villages of Dharwar, and by other insects, rats or blight in parts of Kurrachee; cotton in one taluka of Surat diseased, and rice and jowari in taluka of Kolaba injured; crops otherwise good. Fodder scarce in parts of Nassik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Satara, Bijapore, and Dharwar. Agricultural stock good, except in three talukas of Nassik.

MR. AND MRS. J. COWASJEE JEHANGEER after a long holiday in England arrived in Bombay on Tuesday evening by the Italian Company's s.s. Raffaele Rubattino. Mr. Jamsetjee Jeevanjee Guzder, barrister-at-law, also arrived by the same steamer. Mr. Guzder, who is a Master of Arts of the University of Bombay, went to England about twenty-three years ago to be called to the Bar. After passing his examination Mr. Guzder began to practise in the London Courts and continued to do so the whole of the time he was here. With the assistance of some of the eminent barristers practising in London Mr. Guzder was soon able to secure large and lucrative practice. He was a candidate for the vacancy caused by the death of the late Mr. Nanabhai Haridas, a judge of the High Court of Bombay, and he was strongly recommended for the post to the Secretary of State for India by some of the Judges and other well-known members of the legal profession in London. It is said that Mr. Guzder failed to secure the appointment on the ground that he had no experience whatever of the Indian law courts. Mr. Guzder will stay here during the cold season, and will attend the High Court as soon as it re-opens, with a view to practise.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—"With reference to the interesting account of the fascination of snakes, I beg permission to quote one or two instances in which I was the victim of this strange irresistible power. I was residing with my brother at the Nawagala Coffee Estate, Ceylon, when one day a hurricane swept over the place. Large trees were uprooted, and much damage was done to the coffee-trees, some of which were partially uprooted and partially broken under the trunks of prostrate trees. We set out on the following morning to discover the extent of the damage. In some instances whole trees were uprooted, in others huge branches were severed from the main body, all this, of course, ruining the coffee plants. A large straight trunk, a hundred feet long, was lying on a hilly slope; and at the lower end—i.e., at the head of the tree, a huge black serpent had coiled itself round a little branch. My brother descried it, and directed my attention thither. I was only fourteen at the time, and, though the serpent was at the end farthest from us, I could not be induced to cross over the trunk over to the other side, so strong was the fascination. My powers of speech and locomotion were almost paralysed, and I felt a queer dizziness coming over my eyes. I was literally dragged away. After breakfast I thought I had got over the panic, but a raging fever towards the evening of the same day convinced me of the strange fascination of snakes on the human mind. I was one day crossing over a little wall when I descried a serpent of the harmless kind lying at full length. I was motionless with terror, and such a fright and a flesh-creeping sensation took hold of me that actually, for a minute or two, I was passively gazing on the reptile instead of getting away from it; and it really required a supreme effort to drag oneself away. Woe betide a man who happens to pass a cobra when he is casting off his old skin. At our estate in Panadura, Ceylon, I was returning from a walk in the paddy fields, when, at a distance of about ten yards to my right, I saw a beautifully striped cobra rushing with full force towards me. Prudence, of course, suggested a fast retreat. The next day a remnant of cast-off skin was found on the spot, and the disturbance caused by my appearance accounted for the attack."

WE quote from the Civil and Military Gazette:—"The good fortune which follows the arms of Umra Khan of Jandol might be quoted as proof of the adage that 'Heaven helps those who help themselves.' Information reaches us from Swat, that on the 16th instant the Khan of Dir gave his nephew, a son of the Khan of Sandrol, the command of a body of men and ordered him to attack Ramoora, a fort on the other side of the Swat river recently built by Umra Khan for defence against forays from Swat. The attack was to be by night, and the ex-Khan of Dir ordered the people of Jallala also to make an attack the same night on the fort. The people of Jallala and the Khan of Dir's nephew carried out these orders independently; and owing to the darkness of the night mistook each other for a force of Umra Khan's men, and fought. Seven men were killed on one side and six men on the other, including the Khan's nephew. Torches being brought later, they discovered that they had been killing their friends, and great grief was felt, especially for the loss of the Khan's nephew, who was a promising young man about twenty years of age. We hope, however, that Umra Khan's success will continue. He has all the qualities of a strong and successful dictator, worthy to found a dynasty in north-east Afghanistan. We have watched his career with interest from small beginnings: and we have always predicted that he would do great things, provided that his personal bravery, which always impels him to lead the foremost charges of his men in battle, did not some day cost him his life. He is ambitious, and rules with a rod of iron, but his character is strangely chivalrous, and even his enemies tell stories of him that would seem to belong to the era of King Arthur and his Knights. Lastly, Umra Khan has the highest appreciation of the value of the good-will and friendship of the Government of India."

CORRESPONDENCE CHIPPINGS.

IN PRAISE OF ADEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I have just read your correspondent's letter from Aden, of September 16, and I must say I coincide completely with the opinion expressed by him on this place. Aden has really been subjected to more abuse than it merits. I believe the place has not a very good reputation amongst strangers, but having much experience of the Red Sea ports, my opinion is that Aden is by far the best place to reside at on either coasts from Suez southwards. Of course, in summer time it is rather hot and cannot be compared to the Swiss valleys; but during the winter months the climate is most delightful, and beats, in my opinion, the charming Riviera of Italy. Cleanliness, fine roads, a nice and genial club where company is always found, constant and rapid communication with home, comfortable dwellings, a quiet Native population, amongst whom the European can walk alone by day or night with the greatest security, a healthy climate all the year round, though rather sultry for a few months, ought all to be taken into consideration. What, then, do people mean by abusing Aden—a place which in many respects is much better than some of the country towns of England? Your correspondent has pictured Aden so well that it is impossible for me to add much, though I must say there is one point in his letter I must refer to, as it slightly concerns me. In the first place I am not Count Panuzzi, but Count Pennazzi, and I am sorry to say that though concerned in the Aden Salt Works and having their management, I have not the good fortune to be their owner. They belong to Mr. Agostino Burgarelle Ajole, an enterprising gentleman from Erapani (Sicily), who with unbounded faith in the future of Aden has not hesitated to buy about £40,000 worth of land in the dreary plain between Aden and Sheikh Othman. Nor can I agree with your correspondent that we get the maximum of returns for a minimum of labour expended. So far as the maximum of returns is concerned, I own that we do our best to get them, and though we have not yet completely hit the mark, I hope that in the near future, owing to the steam-mills we are constructing for crushing salt and elevating water, we shall succeed, especially if Government, in consideration of the by no means small sum we pay yearly as export duty, will, when the works of Aden Harbour are finished, improve in some way the shallow and tortuous channel through which our boats must sail. Your correspondent is mistaken when he states that we get such returns by a minimum of labour. Of course, salt water and the sun's rays are not expensive matieres premieres in Aden. But I can assure you that to make a profit even out of these very cheap, indeed, natural, elements, a large amount not only of labour, but of money is expended. The Aden Salt Works employ about twenty European workmen, and from 200 to 400 Native hands daily, according to the season and the quantity of salt demanded. Of course, the returns are not to be complained of, but such returns are only to be got by a large expenditure of labour and energy, as may be ascertained from any person who has visited the salt works. Whoever wishes can ascertain for himself by visiting our works, where he will be sure of finding a hospitable, hearty, and warm welcome.—Yours, &c.,
Aden, Oct. 14. COUNT LOUIS PENNAZZI.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE CLAIMS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "PIONEER."

SIR,—It would perhaps have been wiser had the Simla Committee of the U.C.S. consulted with the Calcutta Committee before issuing the resolutions condemning the action of the London Committee, but I for one agree with much of the censure passed, and hope that a strong Committee will be formed in India to watch over our interests. It is, I think, much to be regretted that some duly authorised representative from India was not present at the inquiry, for more than one of the official answers given was, as one is unfortunately accustomed to in official answers, if not a suppressio veri, at any rate a suggestio falsi, and there was no one to point these out to the Members of the Parliamentary Committee. I have good authority for stating that the question of furlough allowances was greatly affected by a question put by Sir W. Plowden, and the answer given by Mr. Waterfield, regarding the rate at which furlough allowances were paid to Covenanted Civilians—namely, that such allowances were paid at the current rate of exchange. The members of the Committee were not informed that a minimum in sterling was fixed for such payment, which makes a material difference. The minimum rate fixed for pensions, though fair enough for men lately appointed, and for men who have nothing held out to them with regard to this point, can hardly be considered fair for men who joined earlier, and who were told by the India Office that the rupee was equal to two shillings. D. B. C.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS FAMILY PENSION FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "PIONEER."

SIR,—I have received a notification, dated Simla, July 17, 1890, covering a despatch from Lord Cross discoursing on the funds of the above, and showing a surplus balance of over £62,000, and in this document Mr. Sutton, the actuary who examined the fund, said that its state would allow of reductions in payments of 16½ per cent., and recommending that all payments should in future be in sterling, and further stating that for the five years to come the rate of exchange for Indian payments might be fixed at 1s. 9½d., the rate now in force. Lord Cross is kind enough to accept Mr. Sutton's suggestions, and in para 19 of his despatch he allows Indian payments to remain as they are at present in rupees, and says this is equivalent to a reduction of 16½ per cent. (Mr. Sutton's deductions are based on inquiries, dated March 31st, 1888, when the rupee was somewhere near 1s. 5d., and Lord Cross's concessions are based on Mr. Sutton's report.) As the difference between the actual present value of the rupee and its fixed value for Staff Corps payment is somewhere about 2d., I fail to see where the 16½ per cent. reduction comes in. It will be observed that, though the value of the rupee up to this year has been steadily decreasing, and though in India we have been paying in rupees remitted home at the ruling rate of exchange, the Fund has, in spite of all this, managed to amass a surplus of over £62,000. What will be the result of this so called "reduction?" Will it not be to still further increase the surplus? PIGEON.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

(The Times.)

The arrangements for the military work of the cold season in India are now completed. In October the troops awaken with a keen desire for stir and change from their summer slackness, and during the ensuing five months every cantonment in India becomes a camp of exercise. The regimental work and brigade days this year will culminate in a series of manœuvres on a great scale, by which an invading army will try to force its way into Northern India, and will, it is hoped, be destroyed or driven back upon the passes. But apart from the mimic campaign, which in India is conducted with the sternest practicable approach to the realities of war, the operations of the coming cold weather will mark the near completion of a long-continued military policy and the practical inception of a long-planned military innovation. The defensive measures for the frontier will be tested as they have not been tested before. The new system of incorporating the feudatory armies into the array of the Empire will be subjected to inspection and critical review.

The scheme of frontier defence, quietly but deliberately carried out during the past five years by Sir Frederick Roberts, Lord Dufferin, and Lord Lansdowne, embraces in its entirety three distinct series of measures. The first consisted in firmly connecting the frontier with our base in India by railway communication; the second of fortifications or protective works at carefully selected positions commanding the approaches to India from Central Asia. The third will consist in strongly fortifying certain great cantonments, which would form the immediate strategic base for a British force acting against an invading army. The first two series of measures are now rapidly approaching completion. It is stated that as soon as the lessons of the impending frontier manœuvres have been ascertained the Commander-in-Chief and the Defence Committee will meet at Rawul Pindi, with a view to the third. Rawul Pindi would form the arsenal, hospital base, and commissariat centre and reserve for an army charged with the protection of the Upper Indus. Its present defences are inadequate, and plans are under consideration for bringing them up to the modern standard. It is premature to discuss a measure of which only a general outline has yet been permitted to reach the public. But it points to the completion of the line commanding the Khyber. That line would then have at its western extremity the fortified passes and the strong outpost garrison of Peshawur; the fortress of Attock dominating the passage of the Indus, half-way; and the completely defended cantonment of Rawul Pindi, with arsenal, reserves, and hospital base, at its eastern end.

The new Imperial regiments of the feudatory States have a political as well as a military aspect. On the 6th of this month the Viceroy himself inspected the Imperial Service cavalry of Jodhpore, expressed his high satisfaction with the corps, and congratulated the officers on its efficiency. This magnificent regiment of pure Rajpoots forms a type of the new force, eventually to number 25,000 men, which the loyalty of the Indian Princes has contributed to the war strength of the Empire. Its review by the Viceroy marks in a public manner the change which has taken place in the relations of those Princes to the Suzerain Power. The Native States maintain about 360,000 men under arms, of whom one-third may be regarded as regular soldiers. Under the East India Company this large force was regarded as a standing menace to British rule. Forty years of conciliatory government under the Queen have enabled the feudatory armies to be now utilised as a great military reserve. The change is due to the policy by which the feudatory Princes of India have been incorporated into the Empire with a well-defined and indefeasible position of their own. That position they feel to be perfectly safe from encroachment or attack by the Suzerain Power. In this sense of security a whole generation of Indian Princes has now grown to manhood, many of them under the care of English tutors or guardians; and many more of them in the schools for Native chiefs, which form one of the beneficent memorials of Lord Mayo's Viceroyalty.

The improved state of feeling on the part of the Native chiefs to the Suzerain Power made itself apparent in the enthusiastic unanimity with which they came forward with free-will offerings of money, troops, and transport when a collision between Russia and England seemed imminent in 1885. On that occasion Lord Dufferin was able to review a fine division of troops from the Punjab States, in the presence of the Ameer of Afghanistan. Similar offers poured in from every part of India; and even our self-isolating neighbour Nepal, beyond the frontier, placed at our disposal at once, for service in the field, a force of 15,000 men. In 1887 the Nizam of Hyderabad pressed anew his claim to be allowed to share in the defences of the Empire, and similar offers again came from the other great feudatories. In 1888 a committee, with Sir Frederick Roberts, as Commander-in-Chief, at its head, was appointed to consider the possibility of accepting these proposals. Lord Dufferin in November of that year was able to announce to the Punjab chiefs assembled in Durbar that the Government of India had resolved on the new departure and that henceforth the Native States would be permitted, if they desired, to aid in the defences of India.

The new policy was carefully deliberated on by Lord Lansdowne upon his arrival in India in the following month. Last year, 1889, his Government submitted to Her Majesty's Ministry detailed proposals for working out the scheme. Under these proposals contingents aggregating about 25,000 men will be added to the effective force of the Empire. Up to last year the Native States had offered to maintain for our use in time of war a total of 17,276 picked infantry, with 7,046 cavalry, besides artillery and transport. The offers of artillery, which is an arm requiring a scientific training beyond the present resources of Native States, could not be accepted. But the value of the offers of transport may be realised from the simple fact that the Maharajah of Jeypore will maintain in constant readiness, under the inspection of English officers, 1,000 transport ponies. This body would cost us nearly a lakh of rupees a year.

The basis of the scheme is the general conviction among the feudatory chiefs that they are as vitally interested as ourselves in the security of Her Majesty's Empire. Their warlike traditions make them eager for service. The Punjab States, for example, do not forget that they have more than once served, and served with honour, side by side with English soldiers. The chiefs of Rajpootana remember that some of their ancestors were among the most illustrious and most trusted commanders of the Mogul Empire. In practically working out the scheme a small body of selected troops are brought up to a high state of efficiency in the feudatory States which offers to do so. Into these selected troops only Natives of the individual State are allowed to be enrolled, and the officers are derived exclusively from the gentry or nobility of the State. In special cases a chief may apply for the temporary loan of a British officer to command the contingent. But, as a rule, the only officers to be thus lent are instructors and adjutants. The Imperial service regiments of each Native State will be the flower of the whole army of that State, maintained and controlled by the chief, exclusively recruited from his own people and officered by his own nobility. These few regiments will be inspected by British generals and high political officers during the ensuing cold weather. The hearty praise which Lord Lansdowne found himself justified in bestowing on the Jodhpore contingent ten days ago will give an additional impulse to the movement. He will be a thoroughly welcome guest alike to the Government and the Native races.

The leading topic in India at present, however, is the Hindoo marriage question. Evidence of a remarkable and unexpected kind has lately come to light. The memorial presented to Government by the fifty-five ladies practising medicine in India is now supported by a complete public statement by Mrs. Pechey-Phipson, M.D. This statement was addressed to an audience of Hindoos, and is based upon her experience of seven years as a physician in Bombay. She declares that, as the result of careful medical observation, the age of physical maturity for girls is not earlier in India than in Europe, but later. No one can be more surprised by this declaration than Mrs. Pechey-Phipson was herself by the discovery and verification of the fact. Her evidence discloses the cruelty of child-marriage, and the inhumanity of our British made law in India, fixing the age of consent at ten, in a new and terrible aspect. It also contains statements of grave import to Hindoos, of good caste. The chief desire of such Hindoos, and the universal plea for child-marriage, is the necessity for male offspring to conduct the funeral ceremonies of the house-father, and the increased chances which the early marriage system holds out of male offspring. Mrs. Pechey-Phipson shows that the chances are strongly in the opposite direction. She affirms, on good grounds, that child-marriage acts as a cause of sterility; and that early consummation is precisely the system best calculated to deprive a Hindoo father of a son to survive him.

Even more striking are the revelations which have been drawn by Mr. T. N. Mukharji, a high-caste Brahman, from the census of British India. He shows that while up to ten years, the legal age of consent, the proportion of boys to girls in India is 50.5 to 49.5 per hundred; the proportion between the ages of 10 and 14 is 55.7 per cent. of boys to 44.3 per cent. of girls. During those four years, the first four years of child-marriage, with its train of cruel incidents to the child-wife and its strain on her immature constitution, the normal proportion of the sexes undergoes a violent perturbation, caused by the disappearance of 2,000,000 girls. He rejects the explanation that the disparity arises from the neglect of householder to give correct returns of their female children. This neglect, he argues, would apply to female children of all ages, and not merely between the ages of ten and fourteen. He points out that in provinces like the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, where early marriages are almost universal, the disproportion is greater than in parts of India, like Madras, where child-marriage is less general. The inference to which his figures point is that in Madras nearly four girls in every hundred die from premature marriage and its incidents, and nearly six girls in every hundred die from the same causes in Bengal. It is not possible at the moment to test these figures, or to pronounce upon their true significance. But Mr. T. N. Mukharji was trained in the late statistical department of the Government of India, and his own prejudices as a Brahman were in favour of the system of child-marriage, until his inquiries revealed to him the appalling price which has to be paid for that system by the girl-victims.

"GREAT THOUGHTS" CHRISTMAS NUMBER, price 6d., will be published December 1st, and contain 96 pages, bound in a coloured wrapper. With each copy will be given a beautifully executed plate, printed in sixteen colours, entitled "The Great Healer," from a painting by that celebrated painter, Gabriel Max. The picture from which this plate is copied has been sold to the Berlin National Gallery for £3,000.

THE editor of Great Thoughts has made arrangements with the Countess of Meath to contribute a series of articles for the new volume of Great Thoughts, which commences January 3rd, 1891.

THE Pioneer, in closing an article on the sittings of the Factory Commission in Bombay, says:—"The Native millhand may depend upon it that if ever the day comes when he shall be chained down, like his English peer, to fixed hours and continuous work, keenly supervised, he will be far less comfortable than he is at present. Evidence, indeed, like that which we have cited, makes it more than doubtful whether in such circumstances the work of an Indian factory could be carried on without most undesirable and most injurious friction."

COLONEL FRANCIS MAYNARD, who has just met his death through misadventure while shooting in Kashmir, joined the Service in the year of the Mutiny, and also served in the campaign of the following year, at the action of Ramganga and the siege and capture of Biswah, Rewah, and Lucknow. At the end of 1858 he entered the Foreign Department, and, after being employed on military police duty, became an officiating District Superintendent of Police in 1859. He has died a District Superintendent of Police in 1890. During his long service Colonel Maynard was frequently employed on special duty. He was transferred to Mysore in the Famine, and in 1886 was engaged in recruiting military police for Burma. Colonel Maynard was bear-shooting beyond Islamabad, and, after receiving his wound, he remained until the third day without medical assistance, which had to be sent out to him from Srinagar. His case was hopeless from the first, as extreme gangrene had set in, and he was quite delirious. He was put on board a boat, and taken down quietly to Srinagar, but died in Dr. Neve's house a few minutes after arrival.

THE TIMES ON "INDIAN AFFAIRS."

THE Times of this morning gives in prominent type a sort of summary of what the position is in India to-day with regard to some of the more important circumstances connected with our rule there. Although in on part of the article it states that "the essential feature of our Indian rule is that it is a civilian and non-military administration," the greater part of the said article is taken up by details of military organisation, preparation, and exercises. It is satisfactory to think that the military element does not altogether represent the stability of British sway, as in the minds of many friends and foes of England it one time did. The oft-repeated saying that India was won by the sword, and must be held by the sword, does not happily carry such weight to-day as it did in days which some of us are old enough to remember. It is pleasant to think that the peoples of India are regarding their English rulers in a kinder mood than that of looking upon them merely as their conquerors. They may be a far way yet from loving us; but if we are winning their confidence in the justness and honesty of our rule, we are advancing on the way to win their hearts in time. The sword is happily in its scabbard, and not likely to be drawn therefrom except against a foreign foe; but it is well that it should be kept bright and ready for that use—if required. It is to be hoped that it will not be. The Russian Press hopes that the approaching visit of the Czarewitch to India may be productive of a good understanding between England and Russia, to the effect that they will come to the conclusion that there is room enough in Asia for both of them. This is a hope which even the most rabid of Russophobists may express also without doing any wrong to his political conscience. It may further be hoped, also, that the assurance of the Russian Press of to-day that Russia has no dreams of aggression against British India may be founded on fact, and that those who have imagined that she ever contemplated an invasion of our Empire there have been altogether in the wrong. When, however the illustrious visitors sees the preparations which have been and are still being made against a possible invader it is to be hoped that the sentiments of the Russian Press will be more thoroughly appreciated and understood on both sides. But is the Czarewitch to see such preparations, or is he only to be permitted to view India under British civil administration? The Times makes some curious remarks on this point. After stating that during the winter months every cantonment in India becomes a camp of exercise, and that the regimental work and brigade days this year will culminate in a series of manœuvres on a great scale, by which an invading army will try to force its way into Northern India, and will "it is hoped" be destroyed or driven back upon the passes, the Thunderer touches upon the approaching visit of the Czarewitch in this fashion:—

"The visit of the Czarewitch to India is exciting much interest. The Government has been particularly happy in selecting Sir Mackenzie Wallace to attend on its Imperial guest. Sir Mackenzie Wallace is, perhaps, the only living Englishman who combines a really practical knowledge of India and of Russia. It may be regarded as significant that neither he nor the other gentleman chosen for the duty is a military man. For, although the Czarewitch will hear much of the stir and din of the camp in the great strategic centres of India, those centres are few and far between, and the essential feature of our Indian rule is that it is a civilian and non-military administration. What will probably strike his Imperial Highness most is the marvellous absence of soldiers throughout vast tracts of the country."

Is it intended, therefore, to keep the "military administration" out of the sight of the "Heir of all the Russias?" Is he to see nothing of the fortifications on the frontier, of "the carefully selected" positions commanding the approaches to India from Central Asia, of the guarded passes, and the strong outposts? Are the British troops and their feudatory allies of whom the Times writes so encouragingly to-day to be kept out of view, and the Czarewitch to be treated only to dinner-parties, balls, nautches, fireworks, and the other adjuncts of "civil administration?"

It is to be hoped not. Our "Imperial Army of India," European and Native combined, may seem a small one in the eyes of the lord of many battalions, and one utterly inadequate for the defence of the vast territory it has to guard. But there will be no harm in letting him see it, and allowing him to see also the entente cordiale between the soldiers of the Crown and those of the Native Princes and Chiefs. The hidden strength on which England depends for the stability of her rule in India may not be altogether comprehended by an autocrat who knows only of the powers of numbers; but in the quiet confidence which he will find throughout India amongst Englishmen and Natives, in that hidden strength, the Czarewitch will have something to notice and to ponder over. It will be a hint worth taking by him.

MADRAS.

GENERAL ORDERS OF THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT

BY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

(Adjutant-General's Office, Ootacamund, Oct. 24.)

DEWINTON, 2nd Lieut. R. S., 19th Field Battery, R.A., is directed to proceed as early as possible from Bangalore to Wellington for duty.
 SCOTT, Lieut. A. de C., 1st Battalion Cheshire Regiment, to be wing officer (sub pro tem.) 22nd Regiment Madras Infantry, and, with the sanction of Government, a probationer for the Staff Corps, dated Sept. 23.
 The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct the following postings:—
 BRODIE, Surgeon Major J. F., on arrival from England, to the medical charge of the Station Hospital, Madras.
 SYMONDS, Veterinary Surgeon T. J., to do duty Central Veterinary Hospital, St. Thomas' Mount Circle, on being relieved at the Remount Depot, Oosoor, by Veterinary Surgeon Adams.
 HAZELTON, Veterinary Surgeon E. H., doing duty Station Veterinary Hospital, St. Thomas' Mount Circle, to do duty Station Veterinary Hospital, Secunderabad.
 THWATTES, Lieut. F. C., wing officer and quartermaster 24th Regiment Madras Infantry, has been granted leave of absence for 182 days from Sept. 19, or date of departure.

ENGLISH AND AUSTRALIAN RACING PONIES.—The Civil and Military Gazette, which invariably expresses sound views on racing matters, has exploded a bombshell in the pony racing world. It says that a great proportion of English and Australian ponies that had been running and recently landed in India are, from having run at race meetings, barred from running in India, and if the antecedents of these ponies are investigated a large number of them will have to be put on the default list. An enforcement of this rule cannot but benefit the Arab and country-bred pony racing.

BOMBAY.

GENERAL ORDERS OF THE BOMBAY GOVERNMENT

BY H.E. THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Lahore paper contradicts the statement made by a Sima paper, that a serious émeute had occurred among the Royal Horse Artillery at Umballa.

THE Government of India has sanctioned an increase of 50 per cent. in the travelling allowances of officers beyond the frontiers of Peshawar and Derajat.

CAPTAIN L. J. HOWELL, 16th Bengal Cavalry, has been detailed for temporary duty in the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster-General's Department, Army Head-Quarters.

MAJOR H. E. GAULTER, 1st Battalion Hampshire Regiment, will be promoted to a half-pay Lieutenant-Colonelcy on 20th December next, and has been permitted to proceed to England on or after that date.

THE King's Royal Rifles left Allahabad on Oct. 26 en route for Burma. The men were despatched in two special trains, and as each left the station the band of the 13th Bengal Infantry played "Auld Lang Syne" and other appropriate music. A large number of friends that the regiment has made in Allahabad were present on the platform.

THE event of the week at Lucknow has been the farewell ball to the Royal Welsh Fusiliers at the Chutter Munzil. About three hundred invitations had been issued, but owing to sickness, the Dussarah, the early period of the season, and lastly perhaps to the shortness of the notice, many were unable to appear. The ball was given by the General and staff and the residents of the civil lines. At the supper the toast proposed was that of the departing regiment by Mr. Burkitt, C.S., in a humorous speech, which was responded to by Colonel Williamson very neatly.

THE cold weather tour of Colonel Deane, head of the Army Remount Department, will be as follows:—Inspect the Saharunpur Depôt and visit Hapur, arriving in Calcutta, November 12th. Then Sonapore Fair November 22nd; Batesar 25th; Saharunpur 30th; Attock Camp, December 2nd; Bombay purchasing depôt 7th; Ahmednagar Depôt 15th; Kurnal Depôt 18th; and subsequently the horse fairs at Dera Ghazi Khan, Sibi, Jacobabad, Shikarpur, Aligarh, Bulandshahr, Mozuffernagar, Rawal Pindi, Nowchandi and Hardwar. Colonel Deane will also inspect such regiments and batteries in the three Presidencies as require special reports regarding their remounts.

THE Lahore paper believes a proposal is now under consideration for an appointment of an officer in each Presidency, whose sole duties will to superintend British Army schools. At present the superintendence of these schools is worked under a different system in each Presidency, and by officers who have other duties to perform in addition to the very responsible one of supervising the education of British soldiers. British Army schools should be something more than civil educational institutions of a moderate standard; they should certainly also be able to give a military education up to the warrant officer's standard. It is not to be expected that the present army schoolmasters can do more than give a civil education, but there is every reason to presume that under a good system instruction might be given in the schools, by officers and good warrant and non-commissioned officers, in all practical military knowledge under regimental arrangements. Perhaps, if as proposed, a field officer were appointed in each Presidency, whose sole duties were those of supervising and encouraging the schools, they would be utilised in the manner indicated, that is, to give a military as well as a civil education, or to develop them to meet modern military requirements.

THE ATTOCK MANŒUVRES.

The staff for the Attock manœuvres with General Elles, commanding the Rawal Pindi Force, are:—Colonel G. Shakespeare, 10th Bengal Lancers, A.A.G.; Captain Carter, Northumberland Fusiliers, D.A.A.G.; Colonel Martelle, commanding R.A.; Field Engineers, Major Shore and Captain Hilliard; Chief Commissariat Officer, Captain Sparling; Deputy Surgeon-General Brawshaw, Principal Medical Officer. General Elles' Force command the Cavalry Brigade—Colonel Biscoe, 19th Bengal Lancers; Captain Lushington, 3rd Dragoon Guards; Brigade-Major Heath, 11th Bengal Lancers, D.A.A.G. Infantry Division Command—Brig.-Gen. Sir W. Lockhart, with Major Egerton, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, A.A.G. First Brigade Command—Colonel Waterfield, 4th Sikhs second; Colonel Walker, 10 Punjab Infantry, third; and Colonel Williamson, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Peshawar Force Command—Brigadier General Keen; Staff Major Jenking, West Riding Regiment, A.A.G.; Captain the Honourable U. De Roche, D.A.A.G.; Colonel Yeatman, Commanding R.A.; Field Engineers, Captain Finnis, and Lieutenants Haggett and Duff, R.E.; Assistant Chief Commissariat Officer, Major Keighley; and Brigade Surgeon R. Harvey, Principal Medical Officer, Infantry Division. The attacking force was commanded by Brigadier-General Auchinleck, with Major R. Ridgeway, V.C., as A.A.G. The three Brigades of the Division were commanded respectively by Colonel Molloy, Second Fifth Gurkhas; Colonel Rogers, Royal Irish; Colonel Hammond, V.C., of the Guides Cavalry Brigade; and Colonel Atkins, 15th Bengal Lancers. Major-General Galbraith, Major-General Sir James Browne, General Nairne, and General Luck, with their Brigade-Major, will be umpires ex-officio whenever present. Colonel Princep, 11th B.L.; Colonel Hare, R.E.; Lieutenant-Colonel Elles, R.A.; Colonel Anderson, R.A.; and Colonel Vousden; Majors Neville, 14th B.L.; Stowell, Devonshire Regiment; and Sadlier, 2nd Dragoon Guards; Captain Jenkinson, Derby Regiment; and Captain Macdonnell, R.E., will be added as umpires. The Staff of other officers will also be detailed for duty from the Head-Quarters. The Rawalpindi Force will wear a red patch on the helmet or pugree; the Peshawar Force, blue patch.

ARRIVAL OF HER MAJESTY'S TROOPSHIP MALABAR.

Her Majesty's troopship Malabar, Commander J. G. Jones, arrived in Bombay harbour on Monday morning, October 27th, from Portsmouth, which port she left on October 1st, calling at Malta on the 10th, Port Said on the 14th and Suez on the 15th inst. She brought seventy-four officers, 16 ladies, 3 children, 1,149 European rank and file—80 women and 103 children. The Malabar put back to St. Helen's Road in the Isle of Wight on the 1st inst., and was detained for four hours on account of the stress of weather. During the voyage there were two deaths—one of a soldier and the other of a child. The soldier died from enteric fever and the child from tubercle. H.M. troopship Serapis, homeward bound, was passed on the 17th inst. in the Red Sea. The Malabar experienced fine weather throughout the voyage. THE Bombay Gazette, in a long article, says that Mr. J. D. Rees's narratives of Lord Connemara's tours tell much more about India than the dreary blue-books. "As the historiographer of His Excellency he has a keen perception of all worth hearing and seeing. Lord Connemara is no longer young save in his energy and spirit, and the late tour during the hot weather shows that His Excellency does not spare himself in the public service. The narrative gives incidental illustrations of the excellent good sense which Lord Connemara applies to the work of administration."

THE other day, says the Secunderabad paper, after having attended a sermon preached by a fakir at Hyderabad to a large concourse, a Hindu stepped forward and said that he wished to become a Mahomedan. The formula:—"There is but one God and Mahomet is his Prophet" was then repeated by him, and he was proclaimed to be a "true believer." The audience at once subscribed Rs. 500 for the new convert, and gave him the clothes they were wearing. One nobleman took off his velvet coat, in which was a gold watch and chain, and gave it to him. Three carriages full of cloths were also sent to the new convert's house.

THE MADRAS WALHALLA.

A fearful and wonderful painting has been added to the specimens of pictorial art at the Banqueting Hall, says the Madras Mail, and was much observed and commented upon at the Governor's breakfast recently. It is intended to depict the lineaments of Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff, the late Governor of Madras, but so lamentable is the result that the friends of that right honourable gentleman may well exclaim, "An enemy hath done this!" and one of the victims of the most unlucky Administrations that Madras has ever known was overheard to mutter a chuckle:—"At last I am avenged of my adversary!" When he left Madras, after five years complacent, if not conspicuously successful, proconsulship, Sir Mountstuart was the owner of highly intellectual features, which, when in repose, wore a "hue of resolution sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought." His "face was wrinkled, and his hair was turned grey," but in no inordinate degree, and he looked a man of refinement, with a delicate physique. The portrait, if so it may be called, represents the late Governor sitting on a chair covered by a tiger's skin. It is difficult to interpret the meaning of that skin, for his late Excellency, though a naturalist was not a sportsman, and the tiger is more symbolical of Bengal than Madras. But this is a mere detail, as also is the broad pale blue sash of the Star of India which is depicted. No serious objection can be taken to the accessories of the picture; but the face—well, it is not the face that the late Governor owned when he left Madras, nor does it distantly resemble it. It shows an elderly gentleman, whose silvery locks, moustache and beard are in great need of clipping, in an exceedingly bad temper, and frowning at all and sundry. As a rule artists give a childlike and bladd air to the individuals who sit to them, let the latter look never so stern and uncompromising; but the painter of the picture under notice has exaggerated the occasional expression of the late Governor when some one presumed to cast the suspicion of a doubt upon his encyclopædic knowledge. The painting is the gift of Sir Mountstuart himself, and we do not forget the adage about looking a gift horse in the mouth; yet we regret that a Governor who, with all his defects, was a very clever man should be memorialised in the local Walhalla by a picture that does justice to his coat, but not to the man inside thereof. The gift was made at the suggestion of Lord Connemara, who, seeing that no efforts were being made by the local public to pay his immediate predecessor the compliment of inviting him to have his portrait taken at the public expense, in order that it might be preserved as a local memorial of his reign, invited Sir Mountstuart to have the portrait done, and thus to afford his lordship the gratification of placing it in the hall. The characteristic thoughtfulness and good feeling that prompted this offer must have been welcome to Sir Mountstuart, and it is a pity that the picture is not more worthy than it is—both of the Governor who asked for and the late Governor who presented it. The full-length portrait of that baron bold, Lord Napier and Ettrick, which occupies a large space below, and a little to the left of the newly-arrived work of art, went down to the bottom of the Thames in the ship that was bringing it out, was recovered with the ship, was cleaned, and repaired. It would not have been matter for much regret if Sir Mountstuart's portrait had found its way to the bed of the Thames—and remained there sine die.

THE COTTON CROP OF THE PUNJAB.

The second report on the crop up to the end of September, 1890, is as follows:—"The area under cotton last year was finally reported as 964,000 acres. The first forecast for this year gave the figures as 868,600. The forecast now submitted estimates the total area under cotton in the province as 881,300.

"In the first report published in August last it was stated that at present the prospects of the crop are: a smaller area with a better outturn per acre than in 1889. It is thought that this is true, but in some places the excessive rainfall of July and in the first half of August injured the crop, and in the larger portion of the districts, the cessation of the rains in the middle of August and the long break which followed has done much harm and caused much anxiety as regards crops grown on unirrigated land. This is especially true of the districts of the Delhi Division.

"On the other hand, in the submontane tracts, where the cessation of rain was not so complete, and where showers fell up to the end of August, the prospects of the crop are good, both on irrigated and unirrigated lands. On the whole, although the area under cotton is smaller, it is hoped that there will be a better total outturn than was the result of last year's harvest."

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—THE IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1ld., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Gt. Russell St. W.C.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every mess in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

BROAD ARROW AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.
ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on especially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies.
It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may be; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth's many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 8th November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 6th November; and from Calcutta to the 5th November.

THE VICEROY distributed the prizes to the successful students of the Mayo College, Ajmere, on October 30th. His Excellency subsequently visited Oodeypore, where, on November 3rd, he inspected the Meywar Bhil Corps, which mustered about 420 strong. At the close Lord Lansdowne expressed his satisfaction with the appearance of the corps, and emphasised his approval of the manual and bayonet exercise.

DURING the week the Viceroy has also been at Jodhpore, and has seen the Sirdar Rissala, the local contingent of the Imperial Service Cavalry. Their clever manoeuvres on parade were much admired. The Viceroy complimented the Maharajah on the soldier-like bearing of the force, and the manner in which it was mounted and equipped.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY has started on his first gubernatorial tour. He will visit several parts of Guzerat and Kattywar.

MANŒUVRES on a large scale will take place at Poona in January next.

SIR GEORGE CHESNEY, R.E., has arrived in Bombay to see the Harbour Defence Works, and is a passenger by the mail steamer to Aden to inspect the fortifications there.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY will resign the Service, and hand over the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal on December 16th, leaving Calcutta on the same day. He will leave Bombay on the 20th by the mail steamer Clyde for England.

MR. ALEXANDER MACKENZIE has abandoned his intention of taking furlough, and leaves the Central Provinces at the end of the current month, meeting Sir Charles Crosthwaite at Calcutta on his way to Burma.

MR. J. W. NEILL will act as Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, pending Mr. A. P. MacDonell's arrival from England in January or February.

THE Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army has gone on a tour of inspection in the Nagpore and Mhow districts.

THE Secretary of State for India has decided that it will henceforth be a condition of appointment to the Indian Medical Service that an officer retiring on pension before completing thirty years' full pay service shall be liable, till he completes fifty-five years of age, to be recalled to duty in case of any emergency.

THE Zhub force has moved out again from the Apczai towards the Shirani country.

ON the morning of October 30th, a cavalry reconnaissance party from the Durband column came into collision with a group of about forty Shadizai Shiranis, who opposed their advance at the entrance of the Draband pass. The Shiranis were dislodged with a loss of three killed and several wounded, without any casualty on our side. The force was to occupy the pass on October 31st.

THE Hon. Mr. Andrew Scobel, Legal Member of Council, resigns his post next April.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT with Mr. F. L. O'Callaghan, Consulting Engineer, has left Quetta to inspect the works at Khojak and New Chaman.

THERE are 6,546 Savings Banks in India, comprising 431,840 accounts, which received last year from Government in the shape of interest Rs. 27,19,057, and possesses balances amounting to Rs. 7,54,17,213.

THE survey work in connection with doubling the G.I.P. Railway line from Khandwa to Itarsi has commenced, and is expected to be completed in about three months.

THE floods on the Palghat are heavier than they were ever known before. The railway line is very much cut up.

GREAT dissatisfaction exists among employes on the East India line, owing to the reduction of salaries. Mr. Rendall, Chief Locomotive Superintendent, was fired at by a discharged employe a few days ago.

SEVERAL attempts have been made to wreck the trains on the new line between Umballa and Kalka by some people belonging to a village in Patiala because a level-crossing was not put exactly where they wanted it.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF INDIA will return to Poona in January to witness the military manoeuvres and sham fight, which are to be carried out on an extensive scale between the 12th and 17th of that month.

THE staff and commands for the Attock manoeuvres are now finally settled. With General Elles as Commander of the Rawal Pindi force are Colonel G. Shakespear, 10th Bengal Lancers, A.A.G.; Captain Carter, Northumberland Fusiliers, D.A.A.G.; Colonel Martelli, Commanding R.A.; Major Shore and Captain Hilliard, Field Engineers; Capt. Sparling, Chief Commissariat Officer; and Principal Medical Officer, Deputy Surgeon-General Bradshaw.

THE commands in General Elles's force are assigned as follows:—Cavalry Brigade, Colonel Biscoe, 19th Bengal Lancers, with Captain Lushington, 3rd Dragoon Guards, as Brigade-Major, and Major Heath, 11th Bengal Lancers, D.A.A.G. The Infantry Division is commanded by Brigadier-General Sir W. Lockhart, with Major Egerton, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, A.A.G. The 1st Brigade is commanded by Colonel Waterfield, 4th Sikhs; the 2nd by Colonel Waller, 19th Punjab Infantry; and the 3rd by Colonel Williamson, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

THE Peshawar Force, under the command of Brigadier-General Keen, has for staff Major Jenkins, West Riding Regiment, A.A.G.; Captain the Hon. U. de Roche, D.A.A.G.; Colonel Yeatman, commanding R.A.; Field Engineer Captain Finnis, with Lieuts. Haggitt and Duff, R.E., as assistants; Chief Commissariat Officer, Major Keighley; Principal Medical Officer, Brigade-Surgeon R. Harvey. The Infantry Division in the attacking force is commanded by Brigadier-General Auchinleck, with Major R. Ridgeway, V.C., as A.A.G. The three brigades of the Division are commanded respectively by Colonel Molloy, 2nd Battalion 5th Gurkhas; Colonel Rogers, Royal Irish, and Colonel Hammond, V.C., of the Guides. The Cavalry Brigade is under the command of Colonel Atkins, 15th Bengal Lancers.

THE arrangements for the umpiring have been, like most of the above appointments, anticipated by previous announcements. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will be the head arbiter and final court of appeal. Major-General Galbraith, Major-General Sir James Browne, General Nairne and General Luck, with their brigade-majors, will be umpires ex-officio wherever present. Colonel Prinsep, 11th B.L.; Colonel Hart, R.E.; Lieutenant-Colonel Elles, R.A.; Colonel Anderson, R.A.; and Colonel Vousden; Majors Neville, 14th B.L.; Stawell, Devonshire Regiment, and Sadlier, 2nd Dragoon Guards; Captain Jenkinson, Derby Regiment, and Captain Macdonnell, R.E., are also added to the umpire staff. Other officers will also be detailed for the duty from headquarters.

OBITUARY.—Lieut. H. M. Partridge, R.E., at Quetta.

NOTES.

THE importance of the latest news from India may be judged from the Times telegrams of to-day, which we reprint in another column. From Calcutta comes the startling discovery that "some deep-sea crustaceans are highly luminous." There can be no doubt of this, for "a large prawn lying in a bucket of sea water on deck was observed to be shining brightly." The Times correspondent, it will be seen, goes into some ecstatic details about this discovery, "the first positive proof that the source of light in the dark abysses of the ocean is the self-luminosity of the animal inhabitants." This is no doubt highly satisfactory intelligence to receive by telegram from India. But it has been said that other crustaceans—a lobster, for instance—will shine in the dark if kept sufficiently long.

FROM Burma the Times correspondent wires hardly less important and sensational intelligence. "Mandalay is greatly infested by pariah dogs." But so is Constantinople, and even Calcutta. It is, however, hard on the Municipality of Mandalay to find that, although they are killing off the dogs at the rate of 2,000 a month, the canine population still increases. Cannot the Times suggest a remedy?

OR, failing to do so, might not some of its readers suggest a change from this kind of "Latest Intelligence?" Telegraphing from India costs a good deal of money, and the Times has been the only London paper—with now and then the exception of the Daily News—which, for a long time has gone to the expense of furnishing its readers every Monday morning with news from India up to the day previous. Anglo-Indians at home have, no doubt, been grateful for this exhibition of journalistic enterprise, and, on their behalf, we may be allowed to express the hope that we shall have something better by wire from India "next time."

It is not, perhaps, generally known that the Czarevitch is a Scotchman. At least, he is to be claimed as such by the Bombay Scotchmen when he arrives in India, which he is expected to do about the end of November. The last day of that month is St. Andrew's Day, and the Bombay Gazette says:—"Thereby hangs a suggestion. It is four years since the Scotsmen of Bombay did honour to their patron saint and pleasure to themselves, and though the hint comes from St. Petersburg, of all places in the world, it gives them an opportunity of asking if the time has come for another St. Andrew's Dinner. The hint may well be left for them to answer, but it has been complicated somewhat by the ill-concealed desire of the writer of the Pioneer letter from St. Petersburg to suggest that the Czarevitch is a Scotchman, a desire which reveals itself in a plain hint that his Imperial Highness ought to be asked to the St. Andrew's Dinner, and in the interesting piece of information that his brother, the Grand Duke George, speaks English with a Scotch accent."

WHETHER the Czarevitch identifies himself or not with the Scotchmen over haggis and whisky, it is certain that he and his brother will meet with a cordial reception from all classes in India—and we are glad to notice the tone of the English Press there regarding this visit. The same journal from which we have quoted expresses the hope that the reception will indicate a freer disposition than there used to be in India, that Russia is a neighbour with whom it may be possible to live on terms of friendship and of mutual understanding. This will be to the advantage of both countries.

AND the writer goes on to say:—"There has been nothing in the acts of Russia as an Asiatic Power during the last few years which has awakened old animosities or revived the old distrust. The Czar has expressed his strong personal desire that the work of the Anglo-Russian Boundary Commission shall endure, and nothing that has happened since the completion of the undertaking has reduced the efficacy of that personal guarantee. The forthcoming visit of the Czarevitch is not so entirely without political significance as it has been represented to be. There was a time when it would have been impossible, and the fact that it is possible now is a proof that there has been on both sides a change in tone and temper which may be fruitful of future good."

A MADRAS correspondent, writing on November 3rd, says that nothing has been yet done there towards the election of delegates for the Congress. "It looks," he says, "like the dropping of the Congress so far as Madras is concerned. Sir Madhava Rao suggests that the approaching Native Social Conference should pass a resolution consigning the writings of Messrs. Hunter and Rees to the flames, with a commemorative stone erected on the spot bearing the inscription, 'Here lies Truth, strangled by enthusiasm.'"

THE news of the death of Major General R. Gillespie, C.B., on the 16th inst. at Mhow, where he was in command of the Division, will be received with regret throughout the Service, in which he had so many personal friends.

THE Gold Gazette, referring to the Bengal Gold Mines, states that it has "good reason to believe that we are working a field which is incomparably richer than the best thing that has survived the crisis in the Southern Presidency."

IN the list published on Saturday of the solicitors who have passed their "final" there is the name of Mr. Francis Travers Birdwood. This gentleman is the youngest son of the well-known and esteemed Anglo-Indian, Sir George Birdwood, whose many friends here and in India will be glad to hear of his son's success.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(BY TELEGRAPH.)

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 23.

The Viceroy spent last week in visiting objects of interest in Delhi and the vicinity. Yesterday morning he arrived at Agra, where he will remain about a week and hold a Durbar. The Indian Marine Survey steamer Investigator, which left Bombay on Oct. 18th, has on her way to the working ground dredged with great success.

The naturalist on board has made the interesting and—from a biological point of view—important discovery that some deep-sea crustaceans are highly luminous, thus furnishing what is believed to be the first positive proof that the source of light in the dark abysses of the ocean is the self-luminosity of the animal inhabitants. A large prawn lying in a bucket of sea water on deck was observed to be shining brightly, and, being seized, it emitted copious clouds of phosphorescence from the orifices of the genital glands. By the light of this luminous secretion Mr. Alcock was able, though otherwise in perfect darkness, to see the details of the interior of the bucket, and his own hands, as well as the position and shape of the animals in the bucket. After the removal of the animal the water remained luminous for some time. Other crustaceans were also luminous, but to a less extent.

BURMA.

RANGOON, NOV. 22.

The Mandalay Herald, while recognising the existence of discontent in Upper Burma, disputes the statement made by the Rangoon Times that the regilding of the pagodas shows a widespread political excitement.

General Steward has left for Upper Burma to visit the stations in the Chin Hills.

The 3rd Gorkhas have arrived at Rangoon to relieve the 4th Gorkhas, now garrisoning Taka and Fort White. It is reported that it has been decided to disband the 8th Madras Infantry.

Mr. Pascal, a law agent practising in Mandalay, has been convicted of defrauding the Government of 3,500 rupees. He induced certain Shans to personate claimants to whom an amount had been awarded. He was sentenced to eighteen months' simple imprisonment, and to pay a fine of 5,000 rupees. His Burman accomplice was sentenced to four years' rigorous imprisonment. Very grave abuses exist in Upper Burma owing to unqualified persons being allowed to practise as advocates. Mr. Hodgkinson, the Judicial Commissioner, is taking steps to terminate the existing abuses.

Mandalay is greatly infested by pariah dogs. Although the municipality have been killing them at the rate of 2,000 a month, there is no perceptible reduction.

Burma revenue returns for the financial year 1889-90 show a net increase in revenue assessed at 41 lakhs in Lower and 11 lakhs in Upper Burma. For the present year the receipts, according to "actuals," for six months show an increase of 17 lakhs in Lower Burma and a falling-off of 2 lakhs in Upper Burma, due to the decreased receipts under the head of Forests and Excise. The number of assessable households in Upper Burma, where the tax on households is the principal source of revenue, has increased.

TOUR OF THE CZAREVITCH.

ISMAILIA, NOV. 22.

The Russian ironclad Pamiaty Azova, escorted by three other war vessels, with the Czarevitch, the Grand Duke George of Russia and Prince George of Greece on board, arrived at Port Said at eight o'clock this morning, and entered the canal three hours later.

CAIRO, NOV. 23.

The Czarevitch, the Grand Duke George of Russia, and Prince George of Greece, with their suites, arrived here at half-past twelve to-day. The Khedive, with the Ministers and General Sir Francis Grenfell and staff, received the illustrious visitors at the railway station. There were also present Major-General Sir J. C. Dormer and staff, Sir Evelyn Baring, Mr. Gerald Portal, and the Russian, Greek, and Swedish diplomatic agents. Egyptian and English guards of honour were drawn up on the platform.

The distinguished party subsequently drove to the Russian diplomatic agency, the procession being witnessed by large crowds.

FURLOUGH ALLOWANCES.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—I observe that you have republished a letter addressed by "D. B. C." to the Pioneer, in which the following passage occurs:—"I have good authority for stating that the question of furlough allowances was greatly affected by a question put by Sir W. Plowden, and the answer given by Mr. Waterfield, regarding the rate at which furlough allowances were paid to Covenanted Civilians, namely, that such allowances were paid at the current rate of exchange. The members of the Committee were not informed that a minimum in sterling was fixed for such payment, which makes a material difference."

Allow me to draw your attention to the answers on this subject which I gave to the Committee.

SIR WILLIAM PLOWDEN.

Q. 2565. It is not necessarily a covenant, is it?—A. The Covenanted Officers draw their furlough pay at the official rate of exchange; but they are to a great extent protected by the minimum rates that they may draw in sterling. A Covenanted Officer whose furlough pay would be between £500 and £1,000 a year would receive it at the fluctuating rate. Suppose his half salary was 7,000 rupees, he would receive £700 if the rate happened to be 2s. at the time, and he would receive only 6,000 rupees if the rate brought out that proportion. It varies, but he has the great advantage of having the minimum of £500, whether the fluctuating rate would bring it below that amount or not.

MR. BUCHANAN.

Q. 2566. I do not quite understand that. At the present moment the Furlough Allowances of the Covenanted Civilians are paid partly at the rate of 2s. to the rupee and partly at the official rate?—A. No, they are paid all at the official rate; but an officer in the Covenanted Service receives not less than £500.

Q. 2567. Paid at the official rate, but guaranteed to be not less than £500?—A. Yes.

Yours faithfully,

Nov. 20, 1890.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

"CRACK US UP, SIRREE."

(Madras Times.)

Bengal is angry with Madras and is getting sarcastic. Bengal would be considered the fountain head of all wisdom and progress, and would have Madras bow down, worship and obey. But Madras has had the temerity to offer Bengal some practical advice, and the mouth of Bengal is bitter. A Madras man, says Bengal brought out the other day a "royal road to Sanscrit"—and Bengal pauses for a laugh. But wanting the laugh, the gall thickens. "One hears in these days of great activity among educated Natives of Madras in reforming their social evils, and the news comes from the south of the marriage of an educated Hindu girl to a Pleader suffering from white leprosy. The girl was bargained for Rs. 500 to be paid in hard cash, in which work, we are told, 'a Court Sheristadar and a few Native Pleaders acquitted themselves most zealously and disinterestedly.' Bengal is very angry. "Shall the land of Ram Mohun Roy, of Ishwar Chunder Vidyasagore, and of Keshub Chunder Sen be led by the nose?" If Bengal has to be led, and there is no other handle protruding through its thick envelopment of self-righteousness and conceit, then why not by the nose, if it is long enough, and strong enough and sensitive enough? Bengal professes to have done much and is proud. "Sutti was put down on the representation of Ram Mohun Roy. The Widow Re-marriage Act was passed on the representation of Ishwar Chunder Vidyasagore. The Civil Marriage Act was passed on the representation of Keshub Chunder Sen. Now, has any body in print or speech prayed for the revival of sutti, or for the repeal of the Widow Marriage Act and Civil Marriage Act? If, then, Government will trust the leaders of the Hindus of Bengal in the matter of social legislation now, as they did in the past, they will have no reason to regret it." How very nice—for Bengal! But we are not all Bengalis, and we happen to have our own ways of thinking, and we would rather Bengal did not think for us. But Bengal concludes:—"There is no apprehension whatever of Bengal losing the lead in the matter of social and religious progress, such as she has maintained from the days of Rajah Ram Mohun Roy." Verily, there is much of the Yankee about Bengal. It is not, however, the push, the inventive genius or the level-headedness of our trans-Atlantic cousin that she possesses; it is not his wit and dry humour—it is his conceit, his inane conceit.

THE DEFENCE OF INDIAN PORTS BY THE ROYAL NAVY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

We have always been of opinion that in time of war we should not be able to look for much assistance from the Royal Navy in the defence of our Indian ports. Our opinion has been based chiefly upon the liability of the vessels of the Indian squadron to be moved elsewhere just when we shall be most in need of their protection. Probably very few of our readers know how great the liability really is, but a statement recently made by the War Office shows the matter in its true light. The War Office states that no definite rules for the co-operation of the naval and military forces in the defence of a sea port have ever been laid down, nor have the relative spheres of the two ever been precisely determined. The Admiralty have always claimed the right to remove all their forces from a sea-port at any time to fight a naval battle elsewhere. The army and navy are thus entirely independent as regards the defence of a sea-port, and their working together depends solely on their respective commanders. This plain statement of the situation shows pretty clearly what assistance we may expect from the Royal Navy in time of war; and more than ever convinces us that the only safeguard in this direction for India is the possession of a local navy of its own. Of course if England is to maintain her supremacy upon the sea her navy must be given a free hand; and the first duty of the navy is to keep clear of the enemy the waterways round Great Britain and those leading thereto. Still we must consider that our Indian ports require defending; and that it is obvious that the landing of an enemy on the coast of England and the landing of an enemy on the coast of India would have very different results. We need not have much fear of a landing in England, but a landing in India even of a small force might have a very serious result. Would every man's hand be against the enemy? The question does not bear inquiry into, and there is nothing for it but to make an honest endeavour to prepare for the contingency without depending upon the Royal Navy. In other words it is imperatively necessary for the safety of India that it should have a local navy of its own, able to co-operate with the Indian army, and subordinated to the supreme authorities in India.

THE PUBLIC AND THE POLICE.

(Madras Mail.)

Some time ago the Government of India came to the conclusion that crime in India had increased during the last few years, and that at the same time the number of crimes which had not been brought home to their perpetrators was also growing larger. And with all the appearance of alarm it set about proposing remedies for this unpleasant state of things. It is not our intention to discuss whether the conclusions of the Government are well founded or not; but we wish merely to consider the most important of the remedies suggested by Government, and to see whether by itself it is likely to bring about the results which seem to be so confidently expected of it. The remedy by which the Government set the greatest store is the increase in the pay and prospects of the Police. This, it is hoped, will attract to the force a more intelligent set of men, and no one can doubt that when we have a more intelligent Police crime will be prevented to a much larger extent, and a greater number of the crimes actually committed will be punished. But it may well be asked whether any really extraordinary improvement may be expected. It seems to us that though there will be some improvement, there will not be very much. Some may think this a strange assertion; but a little reflection will convince any one that the success of the Police in grappling with crime depends as much—one might almost say far more—on the assistance which the public is prepared to offer them than on any mental or bodily gifts with which they may be endowed. The sagacity of a man in being able to piece scraps of evidence together to fix a crime upon its perpetrator is useless without some information. Though a more intelligent policeman does not require so bright a light as one who is less intelligent, still he cannot do without light of some sort. Detection, in fact, is only possible when the public is ready to come forward and assist the Police with information. In no instance is the want of public spirit in the people of this country so conspicuous as in their reluctance to give information to the Police. It may be said, with some degree of certainty, that most of the failures in detection are due to this reluctance. If that be the case, how is an intelligent Police to do better than an unintelligent one? There are unquestionably some very intelligent men in the Police, but do they detect any better than the unintelligent men? Is there any one, even among the best officers in the Police, who is not helpless unless an accomplice turns approver? But there is another difficulty with which the Police have to contend, which is even more serious and deplorable. Most of those natives who are considered respectable by their neighbours, and whose evidence would carry weight in a Court of Justice, think it derogatory to go into the witness box. These men could in many cases give most valuable evidence. They know, as well as any other villager, the factions and disputes which have resulted in the crime, and they have seen, as much as any other villager, the preparations for the crime going on in the village; in short, they could, in the majority of cases, probably tell the Police as much about a crime as any man who is not himself the perpetrator; and yet these people, whose evidence would be treated with respect, will not give evidence, and even if summoned to do so will frequently deny all knowledge of the matter. What is the result? The Policemen put forward the evidence only of those whose circumstances render them open to temptation, or those whose character is not above suspicion. And when the case comes to be tried the Court considers that the witnesses for the prosecution are not respectable persons, and accordingly dismisses the case.

The reluctance of the people to assist the Police, and the idea that it is degrading for a respectable man to go into the witness box are the two principal difficulties with which the Police have to contend. And it seems to us that they will be as insurmountable to intelligent as they are to stupid policemen. We are not arguing against an intelligent Force. Such a Force we should like to see, and the public would no doubt gladly pay for it—but we wish to warn the public that has to pay for it not to expect too much.

GRATUITIES TO RAILWAY OFFICERS.

(Times of India.)

The senior officers of the Indian railways have good reason to complain of the new ruling issued by the Governor-General in Council, which virtually abolishes the grant of gratuities on retirement to officers of Guaranteed and other Assisted Railway Companies. There seems no reason why Circular XIII. of the 25th July, 1890, should have been suddenly introduced. The senior men whom it affects are few in number, and in many cases are the pioneers of railway enterprise in India. The shareholders owe them a debt of gratitude which the directors are quite willing to acknowledge. On the other hand, the saving that can be effected by this new ruling is paltry and almost infinitesimal. We think, in common with most Anglo-Indian papers, that an exception might very well be made in favour of the officers who served—in some cases for many years—before the Companies began to assist the Provident Funds. We will turn for an example to the B. B. & C. I. Railway. Had a Provident Fund, on the basis of the State Railway Provident Fund, been formed simultaneously with the formation of the Company, and had the Company contributed to it by a sum equivalent to the number of subscriptions, the senior officers could hardly look for any gratuity on retirement except in the case of “specially distinguished” service which could be shown by the records; but as the present fund was not formed for several years (say, from ten to fifteen) after some of the officers joined the service, and as the company did not begin to contribute to it (with the exception of £1,200 transferred from the Fines Fund) until ten years after the fund was formed, it would certainly seem that some suitable allowance should be made for that period, according to the length and the nature of the service of each member.

• AURUM POTABILE.

[A SHAREHOLDER'S CRY FROM BENGAL].

(Times of India.)

O Golden Sweet Virginal Goddess,
That searest men's souls with a breath,
Whose heart is as cold as the sod is,
Whose love is our life and our death;
Speak! tell us Where art thou. Our lust is
But virtue in darkest eclipse—Dendritic and crystalline dust is
The taste on our lips.

Where art thou, O Virginal Goddess!
O mistress of virtue and vice?
Art thou clad in ferruginous bodice,
Or sleep'st thou in quartzite or gneiss!
Though they damn thee from pulpit or forum
We still must pursue thee with pain,
O elusive but eloquent Aurum,
Our Goddess of Gain!

Shall we seek sands Pactolian, Borphic,
Or wilt thou gleam out of the mist
O'er the rocks that are submetamorphic,
Or in mystic magnesian schist?
O say in what happy nook was it
Thou wast born in these far Eastern Ghauts,
In what ancient alluvial deposit,
What ferruginous quartz?

Speak, sweet; we will make thee requital;
We will kiss thine auriferous locks—
Art thou “pocket,” or merely detrital,
From the old sedimentary rocks?
Speak, sweet; we will brew us a jorum,
We will toast thee again and again,
O mystic and maddening Aurum,
Our Goddess of Gain!

Have we left thee, O Government Paper
A will-o'-the-wisp to pursue?
Is it fated that this, the last caper,
Shall bring us nought better than rue?
Leave us seamed with sharp lips and sharp fingers
In a permanent fit of the blues?
When all shall be gone that now lingers,
Ah! what shall we lose?

Thou wert fair in the fearless old fashion,
What cared we for bulls or for bears!
When we knew only thee and thy passion
As light as our love were our cares!
What ails us, O gods, to desert you,
What madness invaded our brain?
O why hast thou lured us from virtue,
O Goddess of Gain?

O Dhádka, Pat Pát, Soobunréeka,
O Jut-Put, O Chota Nagpore!
What Gifts givest thou to the Seeker?
What happiness hast thou in store?
Shall we bag any game in Bhagmundi?
Shall we Snatch it in Western Patkoom?—
Wilt thou linger for yet one more Sunday,
O Bengali Boom!

Sonakhán—Juggetpore—Lohardága—
Bengal G. and S.—Sonapet—
We will drink thee in Simpkin and Lager
Till the sun of thy booming is set.
Ye alone, ye are wise, and none other—
How dare we believe thou art vain,
O our sister, our spouse, and our mother
Our Goddess of Gain!

A BROWN STUDY.

BY LATAKIA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

[“A frontier police flanking party killed an armed Lushai in Thanrumba's burnt village on the 10th, whose flint-lock musket bears the name of Private Brown, 67th Regiment.”—Telegram Civil and Military Gazette. October 17th, 1890.]

The world is old. The ways of Fate are strange.

Dread Atropos still wields the accursed shears ;

But Lachesis will often thus arrange

Her threads, that after fleeting of long years

Some token from the buried past appears.

Recalling to men's minds in subtle way

Some name inglorious in its short-lived day.

And such a token has been lately found

In far Thanrumba's village, when there fell

A robber chief, and by him on the ground

An ancient flint-lock, so the victors tell,

Whereon was writ right curiously and well

The name of one that never had renown,

A simple Hampshire soldier, Private Brown.

A gruesome story might that antique arm

Relate, had it but speech, of border fray,

Of midnight leaguer and the wild alarm

Of shrieking women in the dawning grey ;

And ruthless men that little children slay

For greed of blood and many another thing

Whereof for very shame I may not sing.

Where now is Private Brown ? How did he lose

His trusty weapon ?—Did he, haply, die

'Mid din of battle, or did fate refuse

To him so fair an ending ? No reply,

Nor any record of his history,

To such-like queries from the past is sent.

Perhaps 'twas simply stolen from his tent.

But why should Brown be dead, tho' "Brown Bess" fall

To alien hands ? Perchance even now he stands,

Quaintly attired, in Chelsea's ancient Hall,

Where, 'neath the elms, an audience he commands

Of wondering wights, with tales of many lands.

He never saw :—or in some quiet square,

Club-bordered, lives an old Commissionaire.

But then, again, he may have quickly gained

The golden chevrons, and in course of time

To Ensign's dignity may have attained,

Or even Captain's rank. Were it a crime

To raise him higher in my simple rhyme ?

Then, gentle reader, strive to think that he Is Major-General now, and K.C.B. !

A CORRESPONDENT to the Times of India writes :—"Fakir Rajendra Nath Datta, one of the renowned political agitators of Bengal, is on the eve of departure from this town to England, accompanied by two Hindoo and three Mahomedan preachers, for the purpose of representing the grievances of the people of India by loyal and constitutional agitations in the 'Land or Liberty,' to the British public, the British Press, and the British Parliament. The Fakir carries with him a heavy bundle of papers containing some important documents and two memorials, one addressed to the Secretary of State for India and the other to the Imperial Parliament. As regards the memorial to Parliament, it contains about two million signatures in twelve strange characters. This memorial is, perhaps, the largest and longest of all memorials that Asia has ever produced ; it will cover the floor of the House of Commons from end to end. Two of the Fakir Datta's colleagues will fix Dublin and London as their permanent head-quarters, and so you will see that our agitation in England shall never know an end."

THE total number of deaths registered during the week ending 18th October was 179, against 199 and 205 in the two preceding weeks, and lower than the corresponding week of last year by seventy-one. There were two deaths from cholera against three and four in the two preceding weeks ; the number is lower than the average of the past quinquennium by twenty-five. There were no deaths from small-pox during the week. There were eight deaths from tetanus against six in the previous week. The mortality from fevers and bowel-complaints amounted to seventy-two and twenty-four respectively, against eighty-two and sixteen in the preceding week. The general death-rate of the week was 21.5 per mille per annum, against 28.9, the mean of the last five years.

AN impressive scene was witnessed on Sunday at the funeral of Mr. Coyne, a Volunteer of the E.I. Railway V.R.

Corps, Howrah detachment, who was held in high esteem among his fellow-workmen. As many of his brethren-in-arms as could receive intimation turned out to pay their last respects to the deceased. Mustering over forty strong, and commanded by Major G. Burbidge, they were driven in gharries to the deceased's residence in Bow Bazar-street. The procession being formed, the firing party, with reversed arms, in front of the hearse, and the remainder in rear, proceeded to the Roman Catholic Chapel in Lall Bazar-street for the service to be solemnised, and thence to the cemetery in Circular-road. Along the way crowds of people stood to witness the unusual but solemn sight. The Volunteers did their duty in a very soldierlike manner, and it reflects credit on their Sergeant-Major Sydney that so considerable a portion of the detachment could turn out at so short a notice for a funeral parade, and go through it with precision.

MADRAS.

(Nov. 6.)

HIS Excellency the Governor, in company with Mrs. Smaith and Mrs. Stopford, visited the Leper Hospital on Nov. 2. The party on arrival was met by Surgeon-Major H. D. Cook, Surgeon of the First District, who showed them round the wards and grounds, and his Excellency was much pleased, noting particularly the improvement of the grounds. He noticed several of the European patients when he inspected the hospital last year, and spoke to them kindly, &c. He took particular interest in the Jail of the Asylum, and asked Dr. Cook many questions. The patients appreciated his Excellency's visit immensely, and it is a great pity that more of the "powers that be" do not take the same interest in the Asylum as his Excellency the Governor. The party also visited the Lying-in-Hospital and Native Infirmary, and were pleased with everything. This terminated the Governor's visiting, and the party afterwards drove off to Government House.

THE Bangalore Spectator says :—"We notice with satisfaction that the Government of his Highness has resolved to make a further advance in the path of constitutional liberty, taking the English system as its model. The wealthier and more enlightened classes are to be entrusted with elective rights—power and privilege to send members of their own choosing to the Assembly. Doubtless we shall find that this measure will be introduced cautiously, and perhaps be at first surrounded by safeguards ; but it is clear that the advance has been resolved upon and will be made."

It is rumoured that the offices of the Mysore Government, at present in the public office buildings, Bangalore, will be removed to Mysore. The offices were located in Mysore till some forty or fifty years ago. In the time of Sir Mark Cubbon they were removed to the Fort buildings in Bangalore, and it was not till the régime of Mr. L. B. Bowring that the present public office buildings were built. The Mysore Government offices were then moved into them. After a lapse of fifty years they are to be removed to Mysore, to make room, it is believed, for British Government offices.

It is probable that Colonel Kenny-Herbert will accept the appointment of commandantship of the Bangalore Rifle Volunteers, and the men are anxious he should assume the appointment. The very rumour that he was likely to take it has acted like wildfire, and enrolments are very numerous. Within the last month upwards of fifty recruits have joined, and as soon as it is definitely known that he takes up the command, we feel sure 200 would be the least addition to the ranks—so much is there in his name. We are told that that gentleman means to take up his residence in Bangalore, and he has already taken a house on Richmond-road near the Shoolay tank, and has further expressed his desire to be introduced to the men of the regiment. With such a commandant the success of the corps is ensured.

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 8.)

THE REV. H. W. GRIFFITH, M.A., officiates as Chaplain of Kurrachee.

THE Punitive Police Post established in Belgaum in June last is to be continued for a further period of eight months.

At the Oothumna ceremony, performed on the third day after the death of Mr. Muncherjee Dorabjee, Engineer, which took place on Saturday night, Rs. 17,030 were subscribed by the relations of the deceased towards the maintenance of the various Parsee charitable institutions.

DR. THOMAS BLANEY having expressed his unwillingness to serve on the Standing Committee on account of pressure of work in connection with the Joint Schools' Committee, the proposal to nominate him to the vacant seat on the Standing Committee in the room of the late Mr. Muncherjee Nowrojee Banajee has been withdrawn.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay season reports for the past week:—Rain during week in parts of Bijapur, Belgaum, Dharwar, and Kanara. Total rainfall generally insufficient, and more wanted for crops in most parts of the Deccan and the Southern Mahratta Country. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing generally. Standing crops withering for want of rain in two talukas of Nassik, two of Poona, and four of Ahmednugger; damaged by locusts in one taluka of Kurrachee, one of Hyderabad, two of Poona, and one village of Dharwar, and by blight, rats, or insects in parts of Kurrachee, Hyderabad, and Kolaba; cotton in one taluka of Surat diseased; crops otherwise good. Fodder insufficient in parts of Ahmednugger and Belgaum, and in one taluka of Poona, one of Khandeish, two of Nassik, three of Bijapur, five of Dharwar, and six of Satara. Agricultural stock good, except in two talukas of Nassik and one of Ahmednugger.

THE Indian Daily News, in reviewing the Bombay Municipality's administration report for last year, points out that "the corporation complains, that they are handicapped in the matter of carrying out the large works necessary for improving the health and conveniences of the town by the refusal of the Government of India to allow municipal loans to run over a period of more than 40 years. Sixty years would be more convenient, and would place the corporation in a much better position to face the necessary outlay on drainage, water-supply, and other works which is before them. Whilst works of great magnitude require to be provided for out of loans, the corporation are already so heavily handicapped in regard to the provision of ways and means that, without the relief sought for, it will be impossible to arrange for the carrying out of many much-needed improvements."

THE EUROPEAN CIVIL SERVICES ASSOCIATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "PIONEER."

SIR,—I observe the Simla members have been holding another meeting and firing off more resolutions. No member of the services, I suppose, has or ever had any doubt about the necessity of maintaining the organisation or of continuing to press for all the things the Simla men enumerate. Every one must be agreed that we should hold together and continue to fight for every one of these things till we get them. But there are two ways of doing most things, and the action of the Simla Committee rather tends against that bond of union which is so essential. Why have they completely ignored the Central Committee, condemned the Home Committee, and pronounced the cross-examination by Mr. King of the India office, representatives to have been defective, off their own bats, and without consulting the services? The bad taste of the whole thing is what is so painful to most men. Surely they could have waited a few weeks until they got to Calcutta, when a general meeting might have been held for the confidential discussion of the complaints made, when resolutions could have arrived at. Had this been done wiser counsels would probably have prevailed: no mischief, at any rate, would have been done, and whatever was resolved upon would have gone to the services with the authority of a full and representative meeting. Instead of this they placed themselves in a position of antagonism to the central and London Committees to start with, and adopt a course which way make it difficult for us to obtain Parliamentary assistance in future if it should be needed. This is hardly the way to secure union. I for one feel ashamed of the whole thing. The members scattered throughout the country naturally look to the Central Committee for information and advice. The Simla Committee has shown scant courtesy to the President of the Association, Sir Alfred Croft, and to his Committee, and unless the other Committees and the services take steps to mark their disapproval of the whole of the Simla proceedings great mischief will be done. I hope a large and representative meeting will be held in Calcutta in the cold weather, when all differences may be settled, and a strong central committee reappointed, but it will also be necessary to have a stringent rule forbidding independent action on the part of individuals or Local Committees except through the Central Committee. A MEMBER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "PIONEER."

SIR,—I notice that the Simla Committee have been taken to task by correspondents of various newspapers for passing resolutions on certain recent events. I do not see that in the report just issued by the Simla Committee there is a single word which logically can be gainsaid. Simla is India. Calcutta is not so much India as Bengal. Simla and not Calcutta has done the thinking on the whole question. Accidents, for which neither the London committee nor any Indian Committee was responsible, delayed the formation of the Parliamentary Committee, and interfered with the entirely wise programme of having the general claims of the various services placed before the Parliamentary Committee by witnesses specially accredited. Where is the use of our pretending a satisfaction which we do not feel? Moreover, it was necessary that the brain of the movement should speak out, before the Government, either here or at home, proceeded to deal in detail with the various divisions of the question. The centre of gravity of the movement has been shifted from London to India. And where in India the centre of gravity should finally settle has become the question. I, for one, am no Simla man, but I cannot for a moment hesitate to vote for the placing at Simla.

POTENTIAL.

THE CONVERTED BENGAL REGIMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "PIONEER."

SIR,—In writing of the rumoured proposed conversion of certain regiments of the Bengal Infantry into Gurkha, Dogra, Pathan, and Punjabi regiments you apparently are not aware that the regiments referred to are recruited from fighting races—their organisation having been revised in 1882 and 1884, and contain but very few of the classes formerly enlisted when their regiments were first raised as levies. The classes of which these regiments are composed are mainly Rajputs, Jats, Brahmins, Mahomedans of the North-West, hill-men from Gurhwal, and a sprinkling of Hindustani Hindus of other classes (remains of the old system of enlistment). They, in fact, do not differ materially from any of the first thirteen regiments of Bengal Infantry, or from the 16th or 18th Regiments. They are the junior regiments of their class, and, therefore, as it has been apparently decided to restrict the enlistment of Rajputs, Jats, Brahmins, and Hindustani Mahomedans to certain limits, and raise other regiments of other races instead, the juniors have to go; but it is not necessarily to be inferred that they are inferior regiments, or composed of inferior races—for, as I have said above, they do not differ in any material point from the 1-13th Regiment or 16th or 18th Regiment, Bengal Infantry, as regards organisation, nor, as far as my own personal experience of them goes, in any of the qualities that go to make up a good regiment. A regiment is very much what its officers make it. Good regiments can be made out of Rajputs, Jats, or Brahmins quite as much as out of Sikhs, Gurkhas, or others. The old Indian Army, composed almost entirely of the three classes I have named—Rajputs, Brahmins, and Jats—helped British troops to conquer Afghanistan and the Punjab in the old days, and in other fields showed itself a match for Gurkhas and other nationalities and tribes in our various frontier wars, and there is no reason to believe that the classes from which it was recruited have deteriorated as regards fighting qualities since then.

ENCOURAGING THE STUDY OF LANGUAGES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

SIR,—With regard to the last examination of officers under the so-called "new test" Lower Standard in Hindustani, I think it well worthy of notice that, as I am credibly informed, no officers in the Presidency succeeded in satisfying the examiner in Bombay, except those who had the good fortune to attend for examination in Bombay itself; and concerning these a friend of mine informed me, within a few days of the examination, that "they had all passed"; whilst I now learn that no others were successful. What I would ask is this: Is it the object of the authorities to discourage the study of the language or the reverse?—for it seems to me pretty clear that the latter is the real outcome of a system which makes it necessary for those who wish to qualify to first of all proceed to Bombay to undergo examination. I am unaware to whom the correction of the written paper is entrusted; but, I presume, to a Native in Government pay; and, if this be so, it would be as well if a duly qualified officer were appointed specially to revise his decisions (and, oddly enough, candidates nearly all fail in this paper), since these decisions, apparently systematically, exclude those officers, non-commissioned officers and men who have been unwise enough to waste their private means upon fruitless tuition elsewhere. I could name half-a-dozen men I know who were told by the Board of Officers that they had "passed" them all right, and who have done a very fair paper, only to be curtly informed from Bombay that they "do not come up to the standard required," without any chance of ascertaining by what, or whom, this wonderful "standard" is fixed. It is all wrong to make these examinations a "farce," as they may have been in years gone by—in some instances, at all events; but it is equally foolish to discourage future candidates as they now do, and wrong to beguile them into spending money upon study, which must, apparently, be fruitless, unless a "finishing touch" is put by the local moonshees in Bombay.—I am, &c.

Oct. 29th.

A POOR TOMMY

THE LATE SIR RICHARD BURTON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

Sir,—Unlike your correspondent Mr. Levick questioning Sir Richard's visit to Medina since 1853, I merely want to say that in Sir Richard the scientific world has lost a bright star. In linguistic attainments there was not his equal in the world. He could not only speak the language, but act so well that his most intimate friends were often deceived. I was often witness to this feat of his while at Kurrachee in 1847, as I happened to be employed under Dr. Stocks, botanist in Sind, as his botanical draftsman. Sir Richard (then a lieutenant) and the doctor occupied the same bungalow. I had necessarily to work in the hall, and consequently had the opportunity of seeing and admiring his ways. He was on special duty, which in his case meant to perfect himself for some political duty by mastering the languages of the country. When I knew him he was master of half-a-dozen languages, which he wrote and spoke so fluently that if a stranger who did not see him and heard him speaking would fancy he heard a native. His domestic servants were, a Portuguese with whom he spoke Portuguese and Goanese, an African, a Persian, and a Sindi or Beloochee. These spoke their mother-tongue to Sir Richard, as he was engaged in his studies with moonshees, who relieved each other every two hours, from ten to four daily. The moonshees would read an hour and converse the next, and it was a treat to hear Sir Richard talk; one would scarcely be able to distinguish an Englishman from a Persian, Arabian or a Scindian. His habits at home were perfectly Persian or Arabic. His hair was dressed à la Persian—long and shaved from the forehead to the top of the head; his eyes, by some means or other he employed, resembled Persian or Arabian; he used the Turkish bath and wore a cowl; and when he went out for a ride, he used a wig and goggles. His complexion was also thorough Persian, so that Nature evidently intended him for the work he afterwards so successfully performed, namely, visiting the shrine of the Prophet Mahomed—a work very few would have undertaken unless he was a complete master of the art of deception.

I was witness to his first essay in disguising himself as a poor Persian, and taking in his friend Mr. Moonshee Ali Akbar (the father of Mr. Mirza Hoosein, solicitor of this city). The moonshee was seated one evening in an open space in front of his bungalow in the town of Kurrachee, with a lot of his friends enjoying the evening breeze and chatting away as Persians are wont to do. Sir Richard, disguised as a Persian traveller, approached them, and after the usual compliments, inquired for the rest-house, and, as a matter of course, gave a long rigmorole account of his travels and of people the moonshee knew, and thus excited his curiosity, and got him into conversation; and when he thought he acted his part to perfection, bid him the time and left him, but did not go far when he called out to the moonshee in English if he did not know him. The moonshee was completely taken aback; he did not know where the voice (his friend Burton's) came from till he was addressed again, and a recognition took place to the great astonishment of the moonshee and his friends. Such a jovial companion Sir Richard was that his bungalow was the resort of the learned men of the place, amongst whom I noticed Major (afterwards General) Walter Scott, Lieutenant (and now General) Alfred De Lisle, Lieutenant Edward Dansey of Mooltan notoriety, Dr. Stocks, and many others, but who, with the exception of General De Lisle, are all gone to their home above, where Sir Richard has now followed. May their souls rest in peace!

Some time or other Lady Burton may write a memoir of Sir Richard's life, and a slight incident as the one I have related may be of use to her, and if you think as I do, and consider it worth inserting in a corner of your paper, I shall feel very much obliged to you if you will do so.—Yours, &c.,
Oct. 31. WALTER ABRAHAM.

SALES of Government salt throughout India during the month of September amounted to twenty-five lakhs of maunds, on which the duty was fifty-nine and a-half lakhs of rupees, against a little less than twenty-seven lakhs of maunds during the same month last year. For the six months ending the 30th of September, however, the total consumption has been 15,838,000 maunds, against 15,817,000 maunds during the same period last year.

EIGHT Parsee girls attending the Alexandra Native Girls' English Institution, Bombay, have enrolled their names as candidates for the forthcoming matriculation examination of the Bombay University. Miss Rattonbai Ardasir Framjee Vakil appears as candidate for the second or final B.A. examination, her sister, Miss Meherbai, having already obtained the B.A. degree of the University. Miss Hirabai and Miss Jerbai Burjorjee Parakh, who passed the matriculation examination last year, present themselves as candidates at the previous examination this year.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

GENERAL officers commanding have been reminded that all applications for general leave from officers of the Indian Service should be submitted to Army Headquarters for notification in General Orders.

THE death is reported from enteric fever of Lient. Stone, R.E., on the 28th ult. He joined the Rawalpindi Military Works Division last year, and was in charge of the water-works up to the time of his illness. He was a most energetic and promising young officer, and had made himself very popular with all ranks, and his death has cast a gloom over the station. His funeral took place on the morning of the 29th, and was attended by all the officers in garrison. The bands of the Seaforth Highlanders, Northumberland Fusiliers, and 2nd Dragoon Guards played in turn.

THE regulations relative to the grant of free conveyance for the servants, horses, baggage, &c., of officers invalided to England from field service have been revised, and are as follows:—Officers when employed on service in the field and invalided owing to wounds or ill-health will be allowed conveyance at the public expense for themselves and the regulated amount of baggage for one adult passenger, according to the mode of conveyance (one servant will also be allowed by horse dak), and for journeys by rail or river steamer for the complement of servants, chargers, baggage, and camp equipage, according to the scale sanctioned for the field service on which employed to their original stations, or to any station in India to which specially ordered, and similarly from the station to which they were granted sick leave when proceeding on recovery to rejoin their employment in the field. In the event of an officer being invalided to England from field service he will be allowed his full complement of baggage, and one servant by rail or river steamer to the port of embarkation. (The difference between the field service and full complement will be conveyed free from the original station to the port of embarkation.) He may also be given a warrant to his original station, or to any station involving less cost to Government, for his complement of chargers, camp equipage, and other servants sanctioned for the field service on which he was employed. Should his regiment or dépôt have moved during his absence on field service, "original station" will be held to mean the station at which the regiment or dépôt is located.

WRITING on Volunteering in India the Madras Mail expresses the opinion that any means short of conscription, which will strengthen the numbers and efficiency of a force on which the country would be practically dependent for its internal defence in case of a big war, and which would add directly to our powers of offence in that it would permit of a greater denudation of regular troops, should be developed to the utmost. One of the simplest and most effective of these means is for the leaders of society to take a personal interest in the matter. Compulsory Volunteering, paradox though it may sound, is by no means unknown in India, and many of the Railway Volunteer Corps furnish examples of what can be attained by the exercise of a little of what is sometimes rather more than moral pressure. A proposal was made to Government a few years ago by Major Bisset, R.E., the manager of the Bombay, Baroda and Rajputana Railways, to make it compulsory on every European and Eurasian employé of the Railways, except in cases of physical disability, to be an efficient member of the Volunteer Corps of his line. There is much to be said for his argument. Many railway colonies are far from a military station, and circumstances might easily arise when they would be entirely dependent upon themselves for the defence of their own and their employers' lives and property. It is in reality no interference with the liberty of the subject as is sometimes stated. Many Departments of Government, and some private employers also, make it a condition of the service that their employés shall contribute to a pension or retiring fund. This is an insurance against penury in old age, and any servant who does not like the condition need not accept the service. In the same way the acquiring of a power of self-defence is an insurance against riot and pillage, and employers may say that any man who will not make himself competent to defend their property shall be no servant of theirs.

IN England, adds our contemporary, drills are mostly held in the evenings after work is done, or on Saturday afternoons, and camps, &c., during public holidays; but in this country, partly from the enervating nature of the climate, more, perhaps, from the nature of the people, any attempt to do this would result in a speedy depletion of the ranks. Most of the training would have to be done in the time that belonged to their masters, and the masters would have to accept the cost of it as a form of assurance, and a much cheaper form than the alternative one of a larger standing army. Holding some such views as these the heads of departments of many of the great India railways have, with the large number of employes under them, been able in a greater or less degree to give effect to their opinions, and to such cause is due the superior efficiency of the railway corps over those drawn from the general public. A sneer has sometimes been levelled at these men that they take advantage of their position to indulge in an expensive hobby of playing at soldiers at their employers' expense. This is, it is true, generally made by disaffected employes, who do not like the hard work entailed by real volunteering, but the fear of laying themselves open to such charges deters many men who would otherwise be zealous in the movement, and it cannot, moreover, be conducive to efficiency for the necessary expenditure to have to be incurred sub rosa, as it were. If the term Volunteer were done away with, and the corps, which would really be a species of militia, were called "Railway Rifles," or some such name, the apparent inconsistency of making service in it a condition of service in the railway would disappear, and when once made compulsory by Government the necessary expenses would be considered as part of the ordinary expenditure on insurance. It would then be possible to demand a higher standard of efficiency both in the men and in the equipment. Much is wanting at present in the latter direction, but this does not form the subject of our present remarks. When the experiment has been fairly tried on the railways the same principle might be extended to all Government servants. The Government has tried the experiment of a Volunteer Reserve, and found it more or less of a failure in most places. Some such scheme as that roughly sketched above might secure a more favourable issue.

ARRIVAL OF I.M.S. MAYO.

The Indian Marine steamer Mayo, Commander W. Aves, arrived in Bombay harbour on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 5, from Aden, which port she left on Oct. 28, bringing No. 4 Company Bombay Sappers and Miners. For the last six months she was stationed at Aden. She brought the following officers and troops, &c.:—Capt. B. B. Russell, R.E., Lieut. E. M. Burn, R.E., Lieut. A. L. Watson, Leicester Regt., 6 warrant officers, 2 women, 8 children, 20 men, 1 woman, and 5 children, Europeans, and 160 men, natives. During the voyage she experienced fine weather.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

LORD CORNWALLIS.*

The ungrateful task of expounding the principles and nature of the Perpetual Settlement of the Lower Provinces has been assigned to Mr. Seton-Karr, of Nil Durpan notoriety, nor could it have been entrusted to safer hands. He is at least master of the wearisome subject, nor has he made it more repulsive than could well have been avoided. The goodness of his work, however, has been considerably marred by his deficiency in the measurement of proportions. A detailed history of Lord Cornwallis's unfortunate experiences in the revolted provinces of North America would certainly have been misplaced; but a fuller record of the Mysore campaign and the first capture of Seringapatam might have been looked for not unreasonably. His biographer, however, was reserving himself for a somewhat minute exposition of the object and character of the Perpetual Settlement of the Lower Provinces, founded upon Resolution I. of the year 1793. Lord Cornwallis himself was, of course, personally ignorant of the merits and demerits of the revenue settlement as it existed at the commencement of his Governor-Generalship; but as Mr. Seton-Karr points out, "in Mr. Law and in Mr. Brooke, the father of Raja Brooke of Borneo, the Governor-General found two highly qualified and experienced officers. The celebrated 'Analysis of the Finances of Bengal,' by Mr. Grant, we are further told, contains an enormous mass of information, though the conclusions are often unsound and the deductions untrustworthy. But in Mr. Shore, afterwards Lord Teignmouth, the Governor-General found a subordinate and a colleague whose understanding of the revenue and rent systems of Bengal and Behar was accurate, extensive and profound." If that were the case, how came it to pass that neither Lord Cornwallis, nor any of his official advisers, understood the true position of the zamindar with relation to the State? One and all they looked upon him as a landowner, who held directly from the Government. As a fact, he may not unfrequently have been the proprietor of a landed estate, but he was officially recognised only as a farmer and collector of the revenue. He was the middleman, who acted in the name of the Government, while he squeezed out of the ryots as much as he could for his own benefit, after meeting the exactions of his Moghul masters. Substantial zamindars were after much anxiety enabled to fulfil the engagements they accepted under the new arrangements, but a large proportion were reduced to destitution through the inflexible rule which required all assessments to be made good before the sun went down on the stipulated day. Large tracts of land were thus thrown out of cultivation, and in that manner laid the foundation of the subsequent prosperity of the province. These territorial derelicts were gradually bought up by solvent and well-to-do zamindars, who thereby developed into a moneyed aristocracy, devoid of an ancestry, but possessed of affluence and credit. Many of the landed proprietors of the present day have given full value for their possessions, under the impression that the Government claims could never be raised, nor, indeed, can they be without an Act of Parliament. On the other hand, they have carefully forgotten that they were bound to take from the ryots no more than the rent fixed in 1793, and while keeping to the letter of that enactment, have outrageously violated its spirit by imposing all manner of cesses, and by demanding "benevolences" on all festive occasions. This tyranny has not always been accepted in silence. The ryots have again and again appealed to Courts of Law to render them justice, and have even broken out into riot and violence when their claims were too slowly taken into consideration. As a Civilian of the old Bengal type, Mr. Seton-Karr naturally looks upon the Permanent Settlement as a stupendous institution, and would have all men regard it as the primary source of the material happiness of the Lower Provinces at the present moment. He purposely omits to take account of the fact that for many years the capital, enterprise, and intelligence of Great Britain have found their way up the Hooghly to Calcutta, and have thence been distributed far and wide. The attempt to introduce the permanent system into the Madras Presidency was frustrated by the energy and local knowledge of Sir Thomas Munro; nor did better success attend upon the Sale and Resumption Laws, though both were open to improvement. Judged a priori, it is natural to suppose that a perpetual settlement of the land tax must be advantageous to any country, but then it is primarily requisite that the preliminary data should be previously known and clearly set forth. The land tax of Bengal was summarily assessed at about four millions sterling, whereas at the present day it should amount to three or four times that sum. In other words, a province has been enriched at the cost of an empire. Mr. Seton-Karr, though he could find no more space than a few pages for any sort of notice of Lord Cornwallis's services in North America and Mysore, has not scrupled to occupy two whole chapters with his futile mission to Flanders, to bring about a reconciliation between the Austrian and Prussian generals, subsequently followed up by his diplomatic and equally fruitless labours at Amiens. At last, however, he takes his hero back to India, and honestly strips him of the laurels he had painfully gathered during a career of sixty-six years. In truth, it was a wrongful duty that Lord Cornwallis had promised to discharge. It was nothing less than to reverse the glorious policy and brilliant pro-consulship of Marquess Wellesley. So far as it lay in his power he did actually restore the influence of Scindia and Holkar, and to the same extent humiliated the brave and loyal Rajputs. No excuse can be offered for such timid and fatal proceedings. Happily his life ended a few months after his return to India, and his body was committed to the earth at Ghazipur on the 6th October, 1805, by which time he had wrought political mischief that was hardly effaced in two years of more vigorous government. He was an honest, well-meaning English gentleman, of quite mediocre ability, who had been overweighed by the various responsibilities imposed upon him.

Messrs. Rider Haggard and Andrew Lang are rather hard, in their joint authorship of this book, on our old friend Ulysses, or, as they prefer to call him, "Odysseus, the son of Laertes." We know (to our cost at school) how the poor old fellow had suffered in his ten years' wanderings after the fall of Troy, and how, when he got home at last, he was received by his dog and his friends; but we did not know (happily, perhaps, for us in those early days of personal scholastic chastisement) all that Messrs. Haggard and Lang know about his last adventures as "set out long ago" by "Rei, the instructed Egyptian priest." It is the business of this book to tell Professor Rei's story, and it is a very complex and wearisome one. When Ulysses left the ship which at last brought him home from "his unsung second wandering" he left her, as Messrs. Haggard and Lang declare, "without once looking back, or saying one word of farewell to his crew." This was hardly polite or kind, but "he kneeled and kissed the earth, and, covering his head within his cloak, he prayed that he might find his house at peace, his wife dear and true, and his son worthy of him." He was, however, doomed to disappointment. "Not one word of his prayer was to be granted. The Gods give and take; but on earth the Gods cannot restore."

Unfortunately for himself, when he got to the city of Ithaca he went into the Temple of Aphrodité, the Queen of Love, who thus addressed him: "Odysseus, thou knowest me not, nor am I thy lady, nor hast thou ever been my servant. Thou hast neither child nor wife, nor native land, and she hath forsaken thee—thy Lady Athene. Many a time didst thou sacrifice to her the thighs of kin and sheep, but didst thou ever give so much as a pair of doves to me?" This reproach, followed up by other taunts reflecting upon the Wanderers' age and imbecility, is modified at last by the suggestion that he should give, what never before he gave, one hour to the service of Aphrodité.

"The voice, as it seemed, grew softer and came nearer till the Wanderer heard it whisper in his very ear, and with the voice came a divine fragrance. The breath of her who spoke seemed to touch his neck; the immortal tresses of the goddess were mingled with the dark curls of his hair. The voice spoke again:—'Nay, Odysseus, didst thou not once give me one little hour? Fear not, for thou shalt not see me at this time, but lift thy head and look on the World's Desire!'" Then the Wanderer lifted his head."

The result of his doing so is the story which Messrs. Haggard and Lang tell, and which is a sad one for poor Ulysses. What is Mr. Haggard's portion of the work and what Mr. Lang's it is not altogether easy to determine. The best English is no doubt Mr. Lang's, and the songs and verses, which are often melodious also. But we do not think that in this case the joint authorship will be generally held to have resulted in a successful effort.

THE RED FAIRY BOOK.*

Amongst the many books which are being issued at this time for the delectation and delight of children (of young and riper years), this book, edited by Mr. Andrew Lang, and charmingly illustrated by H. J. Ford and Launcelot Speed, will hold a leading place. Some of the stories contained in it are old familiar friends of Fairy Land; but the telling of them again, in bright and brilliant fashion, only adds to the delight of perusal. But there are others, which are new, for the Legends of Fairy Land are world-wide and many, and some of these, which are given from the Norse, from the French, and from the German, are specially delightful. "The Red Fairy Book" keeps up in every way the good reputation won by the same editor in the "Blue Fairy Book."

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These shares on Saturday were firm. Balaghat-Mysore Shares rose 9d. Mysore Shares were last quoted 5 3-16 to 5 5-16, Nundydroog 1 9-16 to 1 11-16, Indian Consolidated New Company (9s. paid) 4s. 3d. to 4s. 9d., Balaghat Mysore (New) 7s. to 8s., Ooregum Ordinary 2 1-16 to 2 3-16, ditto Preference 2 to 2 1/4, Devala-Moyar 6d. to 1s., Nine Reefs New (fully paid) 3s. to 3s. 3d., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 5s. to 5s. 6d., Mysore-Wynaad (18s. 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d., South-East Mysore 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d., Indian Glenrock New 4s. to 4s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 11s. to 12s., New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 2s., and Mysore West (17s. 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d.

THE Times of India has a leader on Mr. Rees's account of Lord Connemara's recent tour, which it describes as so good that it can almost forgive him for his cold water article in the Nineteenth Century on Hindu marriage reform. "We know no more delightful reading, so far as Indian administration is concerned, than these travel papers of Mr. Rees, which are the true oases in the sandy desert of wearisome blue-books and exasperating official papers of every sort."

THE Brahma organ, Unity and the Minister, says that a proposal is already afoot for honouring and preserving the memory of Sir Steuart Bayley in Bengal. Our contemporary writes:—"A general feeling of regret is felt among the people at the announcement of the departure of Sir Steuart Bayley so unexpectedly. A proposal has been set on foot by some of our representative men of memorialising our retiring Lieutenant-Governor on an early day. We believe that the proposal is most suitable; it will no doubt be responded to by all sections of the community."

THE Court of Wards in the North-West Provinces appears to have discharged its trust very satisfactory during last year. Taking large and small estates in a lump—and two or three of them are almost ridiculously small—the report on the Court's proceedings shows that out of 55 lakhs owed by the estates nearly 47 lakhs were paid off during the year, either by capitalising small debts and borrowing at moderate interest (6 and 7 percent. generally) to discharge the aggregate, or from cash balances or other profits in hand. The result has been, in the case of a majority of the estates, to bring them either into a condition of prosperity or into a condition of affairs from which prosperity must certainly, if slowly, accrue, and where landed property was sold it was to no great amount (only 5 lakhs' worth in all) and was of outlying portions of property the sale of which consolidated rather than impaired the integrity of the estate. Some of the properties, it has been said, are ridiculously small—so small, indeed, that it seems hardly worth while applying the machinery of the Court of Wards to looking after them. One little property is that of Aghwar in the Mirzapur district. The revenue demand is in English money—£4 6s. (at two shillings to the rupee), and the rental £11 8s. When taken over it had a cash balance of £10. Hardial Lohar's estate, also in the charge of the Court, is smaller still. It consists of a fourth share in four bighas sixteen biswas and nineteen dhurs of a fixed rate tenure, one sixteenth share in thirteen mhowa and mango trees, and a half share in a kutcha thatched house. The yearly income of the estate (in sterling) is 1s. 6d.

THE VICEROYS OF INDIA AND SIMLA.

To abuse Simla is an old passion of all the Indian Press in the "Plains." It was Calcutta who began it. For many years, as the hot season drew near and the official swallows were preparing for flight, the Calcutta newspapers poured forth denunciations against the wickedness which it called "The Simla Exodus." Some statesman or other had said, or was credited with having said, that "Simla would one day lose England-India," and so this statement was often repeated in the columns of the Bengal Press

The Englishman used to lash itself into a fury about this annual flight of the Government to the hills, and the minor papers of course followed suit. Differing on every other Indian question, these newspapers all "agreed to agree" on this question, and their unanimity was wonderful. But they had a fair reason, if a somewhat selfish one, for their condemnation of the "Exodus." The departure of the Viceroy and Heads of Departments with their families meant a considerable loss to the trade of Calcutta, and threw a cloud over the gaiety of the City of Palaces for more than six months of the year. These were the real reasons of the "discontent" which, the writers asserted, was "felt throughout the length and breadth of the land" at the Government of India betaking itself to an inland mountain recess for the greater part of the year, and thus avoiding "the healthy influence of public opinion," which meant chiefly the opinion of the Calcutta shopkeepers, and the legal members of the Bengal Club, who remained in Calcutta during the hot season and the rains. It was not certainly altogether to the advantage of public business that all the heads of departments should go to Simla, and if the protests had been more confined to this point they would have had greater weight. But they went further, and the public were told that the very safety of the Empire was imperilled by the absence of the Viceroy from "the seat of Government" for any period longer than a brief tour up country to now and then hold Durbars for the reception of the Native chiefs. The writers forgot, or did not choose to remember the facts, that Calcutta is not India, and that one of the causes of the official blunderings which aggravated the evils of the Mutiny of 1857 was that the Government of India at that time only knew India through Calcutta opinion. But as Sir John Lawrence had made it a condition of his acceptance of the Viceroyalty that he should be allowed to spend the hot weather away from Calcutta, the flight to Simla, so far as the Viceroy was concerned, was a matter useless to protest against. His successors have also gone to Simla, and it was thought that they did so because they liked the place. The Madras Mail to hand to-day shows, however, that this is altogether a mistake, for it says:—

"Simla is becoming more and more intolerable to Viceroy. Lord Lytton protested that it could not hold a candle to Ootacamund: Lord Ripon wearied of its limitations and isolation; Lord Dufferin curtailed his reign in order to avoid another season of it; and Lord Lansdowne makes no secret of his opinion that the place is a huge mistake, and is unsuitable, by its remote situation and want of accommodation, to be the seat of the Supreme Government for the greater part of the year."

This is definite enough, and the moral which the Madras journal draws is this:—

"It is a comfort to learn that common sense in high places is beginning to revolt against the pretensions of Simla; and is beginning to see that Simla and India are two widely different things."

This ought to make the heart of Calcutta rejoice, but—alas! that that word but should spoil so many human hopes. Madras does not mean that the Viceroys in deserting Simla should give more of their time to Calcutta. Far from it. This is what Madras goes on to say:—"There is a rumour that the Viceroy would like to spend a couple of months at Ootacamund next hot weather, if the 'running of the show' could be arranged from there, and there is no reason why it could not."

The wish in this instance may be father to the thought; but in Madras opinion it is better that the Viceroy should go to the Madras Presidency than to the Bengal one, for, "cabin'd, cribb'd, and confined in Bengal, he becomes steeped in Bengal prejudice."

To be steeped in Madras prejudice will certainly be a change; but whether it will be a better one for India and her Viceroy is too delicate a question, perhaps, to discuss.

THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

The following Correspondence has been sent to the Times of India for publication:—

Letter from the Joint General Secretary of the Indian National Congress to Herbert J. Gladstone, Esq., M.P., London, dated Allahabad, August the 6th.

Sir,—The several Standing Committees of the Indian National Congress having communicated to me an expression of the general wish throughout the country that you should preside at the coming session of the Congress to be held in Calcutta at the close of next December, I have the honour to solicit on their behalf, and on behalf of the country generally, the great favour of your kindly allowing yourself to be elected as our next President, and consenting to accept the office. We are all aware that this would involve a considerable sacrifice on your part, and entail your absence from England for nearly the whole of December and January; but looking to the vastness of interests at stake, we do not doubt that should your other duties and engagements permit of your so doing you would be willing to make this sacrifice and to identify the honoured name you so worthily share with one of the noblest and purest movements for the good of mankind that the world has yet seen. This letter will be submitted to you personally by our General Secretary now in England, to whom we would beg you to communicate your reply for transmission to me, and through me to the people of India, and hoping and praying that that reply may be a favourable one, and that you will see your way to accede to our united desire to have you this once amongst us.—I have, &c., (SD.) AJOODHIA NATH PUNDIT.

MR. GLADSTONE'S REPLY.

Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of August 6th. The invitation which your committee, through you, have honoured me has received my most serious consideration. The national movement in India, which has taken a purely constitutional and loyal direction and which expresses through the Congress the legitimate hopes and requirements of the people, is one with which I sincerely sympathise. I should consider it a high honour in however small a degree to be associated with it. But I have political and private engagements at home which absolutely prevent me from being away from England in December and January, and I am obliged therefore respectfully to decline the proposal which you have been good enough to transmit to me.

With every wish for the continued success of the Congress, and with the earnest hope that its labours may more and more tend to the promotion of the prosperity of India and the well-being of its people, I have the honour to be, &c.

(SD.) HERBERT J. GLADSTONE.

OBITUARY.

—o—

DEPUTY SURGEON-GENERAL ROBERT BIRD, M.D., late Indian Medical Service, died suddenly on October 31st at Cobham, Virginia, U.S.A.

MAJOR JOSEPH SEYMOUR BISCOE, Bengal Staff Corps, died at Port Orotava, Teneriffe, Canary Islands, on October 30th, aged forty-seven.

LIEUT. LOUIS ROBERT TUSON, Madras Staff Corps, died at Madras on October 25th. He entered the Army in January, 1880, and served in the Cheshire Regiment; transferred to the Madras Staff Corps, and at the time of his death was serving as Wing Officer and Quartermaster of the 9th Madras Infantry.

COLONEL FRANCIS NEWLAND MARTIN MAYNARD, Bengal Staff Corps. The death is announced from Plymouth of this officer from a gunshot wound received while hunting. Colonel Maynard entered the Army in April, 1857, and served in the Indian Mutiny Campaign during that year and the year following. He last served in the 21st Bengal Infantry, and at the time of his death was 1st Grade District Superintendent of Police at Baraitch, Oude.

MAJOR JAMES DUNCAN COWELL, late 6th Dragoons, died on the 24th ult. at Grange Park, Ealing, in his seventy-fifth year. He served with the 3rd Light Dragoons throughout the campaign in 1842 in Afghanistan, and was present at the forcing of the Khyber Pass, capture of Mamoo Khail, and occupation of Cabul. He was present as Aide-de-Camp to Sir Joseph Thackwell in the action of Maharajpore on December 29th, 1843. He also served in the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, including the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, where his charger was killed, and Sobraon. Towards the end of this campaign he officiated as Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster-General of the Cavalry Division. He next served with the 10th Hussars in the Crimea from April, 1855, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol.

GENERAL THOMAS ADDISON, C.B., died on the 17th inst., at 1, South-square, Eastbourne, aged seventy-one. He entered the army in September, 1837, and retired in July, 1881. He served in the campaign in Afghanistan and Beloochistan in 1839, including the storming and capture of Ghuznee (medal) and of Kelat. Served as major of brigade throughout the campaign in the Southern Mahratta country in 1844 (including the storming of Punella—wounded, and named in despatches as one of the first in the breach), and that in the Concan in 1845. Served in the Kaffir war of 1851, and was severely wounded on October 14th on Waterkloof Heights (medal and brevet of major). Received the brevet of lieutenant-colonel on July 24th, 1857, for special services under Sir George Grey, Governor of the Cape of Good Hope. Commanded the 1st battalion 2nd Queen's throughout the campaign of 1860 in North China, including the actions of August 12th and 14th, the taking of the Taku forts, the actions of September 18th and 21st, and advance on Peking (medal with two clasps and C.B.). He was appointed colonel of the Yorkshire Light Infantry in April last.

DEATH OF MR. MUNCHERJEE N. BANAJEE.

We (Bombay Gazette) regret to record the death of Mr. Muncherjee Nowrojee Banajee, a prominent Parsee citizen, and a member of the Municipal Corporation and of the Standing Committee. He received his education in the Elphinstone Institution, and, as a loyal Elphinstonian, he took, in 1860, an important part in the success of the Mountstuart Elphinstone memorial, of which he was appointed a secretary, and in connection with which scholarships are annually awarded in the Marathi, Gujaratee, and Parsee girls' schools. In 1862 Mr. Muncherjee joined as a partner the firm of Messrs. Manockjee and Bomonjee Cursetjee Cama, which traded successfully for some years, but came to grief during the share mania times. He was a director on the board of the Victoria Steam Navigation Company, the East India Bank, and other joint-stock concerns, and was also secretary to the Frere Land Reclamation Company. For seventeen years, from 1873 to May last, he performed the duties of secretary to the Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills Company, the affairs of which he frequently tided over difficulties. Five years ago Mr. Muncherjee started the City of Bombay Mills, of which his firm were the agents ever since. He was a member of the Factory Commission appointed by Government in June, 1814, to inquire into the working of the Factory Act. The deceased gentleman will be remembered for the warm interest he took in the civic affairs of this city. He was a member of the Municipal Corporation from its birth, and was in later years an intelligent member of the Town Council and of the Standing Committee. The success of the Ollivant memorial, lately raised in Bombay, was largely due to his personal exertions. He was an honorary secretary of the Lepers' Hospital for which funds are now being collected. Many years ago, Government were pleased to appoint Mr. Muncherjee a Justice of the Peace, a Fellow of the Bombay University, and a Delegate of the Parsee Chief Matrimonial Court. As a shrewd man of business, possessing much sound common-sense, deep insight, and large practical experience in the discussion of public questions, the city sustains an appreciable loss in the death of Mr. Muncherjee. To his personal friends he was a valued companion, always remarkable for his obliging and courteous disposition, united with the best traits of a warm and genial good nature. The share bazaar was closed on Saturday out of respect to the memory of the deceased.

THE FACTORY REVELATIONS.

A Bombay paper says:—

The Factory Commission are continuing their inquiries in Upper India, but it is not likely that anything that they will learn there will have as determining an influence upon their report or upon Government as the evidence that they collected in Bombay. It seems to us that much of the evidence which they have put upon their records will need to be accepted with all the care that should properly accompany an appreciation of the evidence of incompetent witnesses. No doubt the presence at the inquiry of children not yet in their teens gave an air of vraisemblance to the proceedings, which will be eagerly appreciated by people careless as to the evidential value of juvenile narrative. An impression, we may be sure, will be made upon the minds of people in Lancashire, who are waiting and anxious to be impressed by the naive revelation of Bhimi Lukhu, the little Mahratta girl who says she is ten or eleven, but who seems to have been certified last year to be over twelve, that she is willing to work half a day instead of a whole day, as at present, but for the fear that the overseer may not like it and may beat her. Those upon whose mind such evidence is likely to make an undue impression should, however, take account of the abnormal readiness of these little people who are quite prepared to give advice upon the whole factory question, and some of whom seem to have opinions on the subject definite enough to permit them to draft a Factory Bill of their own, if only destiny had allowed them to learn to read and write. One little man of thirteen, for example, who works, not because he loves it, but because his aunt makes him do so, favoured the Commission with the opinion "that it was better that children should attend school instead of working—" a piece of unexceptionable doctrine, the propagation of which, moreover, is likely to hurry on a solution of the problem which is presented to the Corporation in the obligation imposed upon them to make adequate provision for primary education in Bombay. If, however, the next generation of mill-hands in Bombay should include as many John Burns and Ben Tilletts as we shall find compatible with the harmonious working of local industries, we shall have to trace the phenomenon back to the days when the babes and sucklings of the mill industry in Bombay were invited to express themselves freely upon things in general.

INDIAN GUNPOWDER.

A proposal of the Director-General of Ordnance in India, having for its object the increase of the output of the Government gunpowder mills in India, has been sanctioned by the Government of India. The Director-General found out during his last visit to England that the "incorporating mills" in both the Government and private Gunpowder Factories worked day and night for six days in the week all the year round; and it was explained to him that this was necessary so as to supply material sufficient for working up to the full power the other portions of the machinery of the factories. Following this fashion it has now been directed that the four incorporating mills at Ishapore, and the two incorporating mills at Kirkee, shall work from 6 o'clock in the morning to 7 in the evening or 13 hours a day, from October 1st to March 31st, paying the employes overtime, at fixed rates, for the time worked in excess of nine hours per day, the standard working day. It is expected that this sanctioned arrangement will increase the out-turn by one-third, while it will decrease the cost of the powder manufactured. It will also enable the Ordnance Department to furnish the blasting powder required by the Public Works Department for blasting purposes, which in former years had to be obtained from England. The change may therefore be viewed as economical, and therefore in the interests of Government as well as the men.

It is said that the Bombay Government has sent a despatch to the Government of India on the subject of the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Bill of 1879, which owes its existence mainly to the powerful advocacy of the then Mr. Theodore Hope. "Lord Harris is perhaps full fresh in office to sanction interference with such an intricate and important piece of legislation, and he might conceivably in this case put himself in safer hands than Sir Raymond West's."

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT-CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL
REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the annals of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

THE BROAD ARROW AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.
ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)
ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Those whom the matter concerns will find a faithful and fertile source of information."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"Contains a fresh recipe for every day of the year, is clearly printed, and of a handy size. The recipes are clearly set forth, and likely to be of practical assistance to cooks and housewives, since they have all been approved by experience."—THE CATERER.

"A useful little cooking book."—HOME NEWS.

"Miss Lucy Jones' 805 receipts are admirable for their terseness and for the ease with which they can be understood. This handy book is a veritable treasure to young housekeepers."—PUBLIC OPINION.

"The collection as a whole in this handy and useful volume will be highly prized."—BRITISH WEEKLY.

"We could not recommend a better work."—ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE.

"A considerable number of the recipes are out of the ordinary run, and those which we have examined in detail appear to be constructed on sound principles."—MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

"Will be found extremely serviceable."—METROPOLITAN.

BANKING AND AGENCY DEPARTMENT.

CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened for the convenience of Constituents at home and abroad upon the terms usually adopted by London Bankers.

DEPOSITS of £100 and upwards received for fixed periods, and interest allowed thereon at 5 per cent. if for 12 months; 4 per cent. per annum if for 6 months.

SALES and PURCHASES are effected in British and Foreign Securities, in East India Loans, and in every description of Stocks dealt in on the Stock Exchange.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE on India, Europe, the United States, and Canada are purchased and sold at the best current rates, and telegraphic remittances of Money made to all parts of India.

CIRCULAR NOTES and LETTERS OF CREDIT are issued for the use of Travellers.

The Agency of persons connected with India and the Colonies, or holding Foreign-office appointments, is undertaken on the usual terms, and includes the collection of Pay, Pensions, &c., the realisation of Dividends and Coupons, the receipt and forwarding of Letters, and information regarding the rules of the Services, with advice upon general subjects when required.

SUPPLY DEPARTMENT.

Orders are executed for every description of NAVAL and MILITARY APPOINTMENTS and CLOTHING, MESS SUPPLIES, including Wines, Provisions, Plate, Glass, China, Cutlery, Arms, Accoutrements, Band Instruments, &c., and all kinds of household and personal requisites, at the lowest prices. A comprehensive ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE will be forwarded on application. No orders for goods will be executed at Catalogue prices unless accompanied by remittances for their cost.

Special attention is given to the regular despatch of Newspapers and Periodicals, a Price List of which will be furnished to applicants.

New and Second-hand Books are supplied to Clubs and private individuals on advantageous terms; also Stationery for office and private use.

PASSAGE AND FORWARDING DEPARTMENT.

This Department undertakes the selection of Berths by mail or other steamers, suitable vessels being recommended and passages secured at owner's rates, without charge for Commission.

Intending passengers are invited to send their addresses to MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND CO., who will forward free of charge a copy of their "Traveller's Guide." Personal baggage Collected, Shipped, and Insured.

Passengers leaving England receive the personal attention of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND CO., or their representatives.

Passengers Homeward are received on arrival at the various docks by the representatives of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND CO., and especial attention is paid to Ladies, Children, and Invalids.

MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND CO.'s clerks meet the steamers of the P. and O. and other Lines, on arrival at Plymouth, Gravesend, and the Docks, to receive instructions and render such assistance as passengers may require.

Passengers' Baggage and Packages not immediately required may be stored in a dry Warehouse kept for that purpose, at a moderate rent, and facilities are afforded for examination when desired.

Goods, Baggage, and Parcels of every description are received for despatch to all parts of the world, or cleared and forwarded to their destination, in accordance with instructions.

Forms of Declaration for Customs and Insurance are furnished on application.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The "Plot" can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety. He cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when sailing well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I can-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamity might have been avoided. What dashes many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, suspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 15th November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 13th November; and from Calcutta to the 12th November.

H.E. THE VICEROY, after inspecting the Jodhpore Imperial Service Cavalry on Nov. 6th, visited the fort, and next morning went out pigsticking with Sir Pertab Singh's party. They got five boars, three of which fell to his Excellency's spear. On the 8th he was entertained at a state banquet by the Maharajah of Jodhpore, and left after dinner for Abu, where he arrived next morning, and was received by the Maharao of Sirohi.

H.E. LORD HARRIS arrived at Abu in the evening, and met H.E. the Viceroy at the Residency. Next day their Excellencies were entertained by the Maharao of Sirohi, after which the Viceroy proceeded to Jeypore, and Lord Harris returned to Ahmedabad.

AT Jeypore H.E. the Viceroy witnessed a Naga sword-dance and inspected the Sirdar's retainers, who were picturesquely clad in chain armour and accoutrements of a bygone age.

LORD HARRIS left Bombay for Surat on the night of the 8th, and arrived there next morning. On Monday he visited the High School and the jail; received addresses from the Municipality and the Anjuman-i-Islam, distributed prizes to the girls of the Surat schools, and early next morning left by special train for Abu to meet his Excellency the Viceroy. He returned from Abu on the 12th, and visited Nariad, and was presented with an address from the Municipality, and one on behalf of the Kaira District Board. H.E. reached Ahmedabad on the 13th, where he received an address from the Municipality. He will stay for four days at Ahmedabad as the guest of the Collector at Shahibag.

NEWS received from Fort White, dated Nov. 9th, states that nothing has yet been discovered regarding the sudden attack by the Chins on our ambuscade party a few nights before.

THE 2nd and 3rd Goorkhas left Calcutta on Nov. 12th for the Lushai country.

MR. CLOGSTOUN, the Assistant Superintendent of the Manawady Police, effected the capture of a noted gang of dacoits, who had ravaged the country, under the leadership of one Tha Hla Gyi. The latter was killed, and two of the band captured. Mr. Clogstoun was badly wounded in the throat and shoulder, but he is now out of danger.

A LARGE and influential meeting of the Mohammedans of Bombay was held on Sunday, Nov. 9th, to protest against the production of the play of Mahomet on the London stage. It was resolved to memorialise the Secretary of State for India in the matter.

IT is stated in Goa that the King of Portugal has recalled Senhor Vasco Guedes, the present Governor-General of Goa, and appointed General Francisco Maria da Cunha in his place.

MR. LINGAPA JAYAPA, Desai of Navalgand, has been nominated an Additional Member of the Council of the Governor of Bombay for the purpose of making laws and regulations only.

DURING the last month the Mysore mine crushed 3,000 tons of ore for 4,522 ounces of gold, while 492 ounces of gold were obtained from 1,636 tons of tailings. Ooregum obtained 2,646 ounces from 1,247 tons; Balaghat obtained 275 ounces from 500 tons; and the Consolidated seventy ounces from 270 tons.

MR. RUTHERFORD, of the N.W.P. Railway, is expected to fill the post of Traffic Superintendent, East Indian Railway, in succession to Mr. St. Leger Carter.

TWO Australian officers have arrived to represent the Colonial Forces at the Attock camp.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS will inspect the Meanmeer Camp-of-Exercise about December 10th.

MR. A. C. GREEN, of the Punjab Commission, has been invalided home. He is the second of the three civilians who came to the Punjab in 1886, who has been invalided home.

THE Maharani of Putrampur has contributed a donation of Rs. 5,000 to the Ramsey Hospital at Naini Tal.

A PARTIAL strike among the Calcutta cartmen took place during the week. The men complain of the aggressiveness of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

EARLY on the morning of November 9th some Pathans broke into the booking and post-office of Kuch Railway station, Sind-Pishin Railway, and looted Rs. 127. They murdered a telegraph signaller, a bhistie, and a Native railway traveller.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY proposes to resign the service and hand over the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal on December 16th, leaving Calcutta on the same day, and sailing from Bombay on the 20th by the mail steamer Clyde, via Brindisi, to England.

THE probable date of the Cesarewitch's arrival in Bombay is December 23rd. Colonel Montague Gerard, of the Central India Horse, and two other officers of the Indian Army will be attached to the party. His Imperial Highness's stay in India will last in all about five weeks.

IT is finally settled that Mr. J. W. Neill will act as Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces until Mr. A. P. MacDonnell arrives from England in January or February.

COLONEL LUCKHARDT, Commissary-General, Bombay, vacates his appointment on December 12th, and is likely to be succeeded by Colonel Hughes.

ON the return of Mr. J. R. Reid to join his appointment in the Board of Revenue Mr. W. Kaye, the officiating Junior Member, goes on special duty as President of the Police Committee.

MR. JUSTICE BENTON, of the Lahore Chief Court, probably takes furlough in the spring.

MAJOR-GENERAL KNOWLES, Adjutant-General, Bombay, will be succeeded by Brigadier-General Gatacre, C.B., commanding the Mandalay district.

MR. C. S. BAYLEY, on return from furlough, is posted as 1st Assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General in Rajputana.

COLONEL ROSS, Resident in the Persian Gulf, will probably proceed on furlough in the spring. Major Talbot, now at Bikanir, who has before officiated at Bagdad, will act for him.

COLONEL GROVES, District Staff Officer at Secunderabad, has been chosen as one of the officers to go to the Attock camp to represent the Madras army.

FIFTY-FIVE ladies practising medicine in India have drawn up a memorial to the Viceroy, praying that the age of consent be raised to fourteen. The protest is backed up by a dreadful list of surgical cases lit upon in zenana and female hospital practice, which in itself is conclusive evidence against those who deny the cruelties and abuses to which the present custom gives rise.

RAJAS RAM SINGH AND AMAR SINGH, of Kashmir, and the PRINCE OF BOKHARA will pitch small camps at Attock.

THE Legislative Council of Ceylon have just read for the second time a Bill for raising the "age of consent" from ten to twelve years.

THE Maharani of Bulrampur has, with the liberality for which she is distinguished, contributed a donation of Rs. 5,000 to the funds of the Ramsay Hospital at Naini Tal.

THE latest quotations from Calcutta show that the market for gold shares is still falling rapidly. On Monday the closing prices were as follows:—Sonapets, Re. 1-3; Western Patkoom, As. 7; Pat Pat, As. 8; Dhadkas, Re. 1; Bengal Gold and Silver, As. 9; Western Bengal Prospecting Company, nominal; Sonakhan, As. 9; Eastern Ranchi, nominal; Loharduggas, nominal.

THE news of Lord Connemara's resignation of the Governorship of Madras, and its acceptance by Her Majesty, was made public on November 8th. The Madras and the Bombay Press contain laudatory articles on Lord Connemara's administration.

NOTES.

THE St. Andrew's Day dinner at Calcutta is supposed to bear some similitude to the Lord Mayor's Day dinner at the Mansion House here, where official speeches are made, pretending to give the British public some information about their own affairs. The information then given is neither so clear as the turtle soup which precedes it, nor so unmistakeably good as the wine which follows it; but the B.P. looks forward to getting some kind of information, and when it does so it generally acts on honest Sancho's advice of bidding "God bless the giver, nor look the gift horse in the mouth." In Calcutta the festival of St. Andrew's used to bring about some unburdening of the official conscience; and it may be remembered that before his departure from India Lord Dufferin availed himself of the occasion to speak more strongly, perhaps, than wisely of the Indian National Congress.

THIS year no Viceroy or Lieutenant-Governor assisted the Scots at their memorial ceremony, but the President of the Bengal Chamber appears to have seized the opportunity "to severely criticise the Government." This is an opportunity which the "non-official" community of Calcutta has always been ready to avail itself of; and no doubt Mr. Mackay made the best of the occasion in denouncing the Income-tax—a tax particularly odious to all who had to pay it, whether in India or in England. The denunciation of the Income-tax at the St. Andrew's Day Dinners in Calcutta has long been a chronic "institution."

AND so also has been the denunciation of "subordinating the interests of India to those of England." This has been always meant as a hit against Manchester—it being held in India that all factory legislation framed here is framed with the view of benefiting the English commercial city to the disadvantage of the Indian one. But was not Mr. Mackay a little out in declaring that the trade, commerce, and manufactures of India are "still in their infancy," and require special protection? It is this foolish cry which hampers India more than any other.

THE Times telegram from Calcutta, dated yesterday, gives the general summary of the Factory Commission's Report which, possibly, will be probably "howled at" here by the would-be Indian reformers, who know nothing of India. It is to be hoped, however, that the Government of India will be allowed to deal with the question according to the knowledge and experience gained in the country itself, and without being hampered by the mischievous interference of "faddists" in England.

THE information telegraphed from Rangoon, on the authority of the Rangoon Times, to the effect that "the Burmans are slowly but surely drifting towards another outbreak," we utterly discredit. And the remark that "Sir C. Crosthwaite's great object appears to be to represent, until his departure, that all is well," seems to us to be also as untrue as it is impertinent.

THE following cannot be pleasant reading for military men. It is from the Pioneer:—"Each decade brings within the view of the general public interested in cosmic phenomena, the comet-like questions appertaining to that nebulous entity, the Indian Staff Corps. There is method in the recurrence and regularity in the orbit, arguing adherence to some law of necessity that claims attention. From the recent manifestations we, for instance, learn that the young Indian Army probationer is by no means the docile and gullible griffin of the good old days. We find instead a child of the age, nurtured in the spirit of Boycotting and of Dockyard demonstrations; having a keen eye for the main chance, and no scruples about following a useful example, even if it may proceed from his inferiors. It is useless to rebuke or remonstrate. Such as a man is, the age makes him, and it has fashioned the Staff Corps subaltern like the rest of us—a monstrosity perhaps in the eyes of an older generation, but hydra-headed and dimly conscious of his strength. Therefore let us accept him as we find him, and see whether we are not actually dealing with a new force—some mysterious motive power like unto the surprises of the experimentalist and savant."

DEATH has just taken away two Anglo-Indians who had many friends—Sir Barnes Peacock and Sir Rivers Thompson. The former dies full of years and of honours; the latter with his share of honours, too, but less kindly treated at the hands of Time—that is to say if "length of years" be a gift which is to be appreciated and valued merely for its own sake. There may be those who doubt it.

LORD WENLOCK succeeds Lord Connemara as Governor of Madras, and it is officially announced that "the Hon. J. H. Garstin, Senior Member of Council, now present in Madras, assumed the Government of Madras on the 1st instant."

THE Madras papers to hand to-day comment thus on the resignation:—The Madras Mail states that the resignation will be received with universal regret. Lord Connemara has been not only most popular, but the most fortunate Governor this Presidency has had for many years. Never thoroughly recovered from the fever which he contracted last year, after visiting Ganjam, Lord Connemara was sixty-three in June, and though he bears his years well, he is reminded he must guard against exposure to sun, miasma, and physical fatigue. It is rumoured that Lord Salisbury has resolved to make an early appeal to the country. If then Lord Connemara had not asked to be relieved by this date, the selection of his successor at Madras might have devolved on Mr. Gladstone, in which case it is quite possible Mr. Bradlaugh would have been appointed. The selection now will be made by Lord Salisbury, and Madras may rest assured that the Conservative or Liberal Unionist politician who is appointed will be well qualified to carry on the good work that Lord Connemara is about to resign. His Excellency will return home with enlarged experience and an increased reputation. He has treated Madras well, and Madras has done her best to treat him well, and a very friendly feeling has been established that will not soon pass away. Lord Connemara has not spared himself. He has been associated with officers of great experience, who have aided him in his indefatigable exertions to promote the well-being of all classes. He has pushed on a great variety of useful public works, of which the East Coast Railway will be the most notable monument of his reign.

THE Madras Times says:—His Excellency has personally guided the administrative coach when it has run well, and he has not been the only one in fault when it has run ill. There is no doubt he has avoided irritating race prejudices during a period of unusual tension between Europeans and Hindoos in many parts of the country, the Madras Government succeeded in making the coach run smoothly and with little noise, by keeping well on the high road, and not unduly favouring any race among its supporters. The Governor himself has contributed to this. He has been as gracious to the Hindoos as to the Europeans. He has gone out of his way at times to display an interest in the future of the Hindoo and Mahomedan communities, and in this way he managed to gloss over, or entirely to hide, those little spots that must result from political feverishness, with which many sections of society have lately been afflicted. In this way his Lordship has been of great service as the social head of the people. Lord Connemara has been in many ways a conspicuous success.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 30.

With the exception of a short visit to Bhurtpore, the Viceroy spent the whole of last week at Agra.

The durbar on Monday was very largely attended and passed off well. Lord Lansdowne, addressing the Native gentlemen present, took the opportunity to repeat the warning he had previously uttered at Delhi against unseemly disputes between Hindoos and Mahomedans, saying that the Queen had more than once expressed to him her abhorrence of those feelings of intolerable bitterness which on former occasions had engendered such breaches of the peace; and he was glad to be able to report to Her Majesty that during Mohurram this year the conduct of the citizens of Agra and Delhi had been exemplary.

The Viceregal party will proceed to Benares next Wednesday.

Lord Connemara has asked permission to lay down his office as soon as possible.

Mr. Mackay, presiding over the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, delivered a speech of some interest and importance at the annual St. Andrew's Day dinner yesterday. After expressing his opinion that trade, commerce, and manufactures in India were still in their infancy, he proceeded to severely criticise the Government reply to a recent memorial from the Chamber of Commerce on the subject of the income-tax. He hoped the Government might yet be induced to reconsider their decision and abolish the tax altogether. He believed that this would be brought about by their being compelled, in common justice and fairness, to extend the present exception minimum, which was fixed so low as to make the tax fall with great severity on the poor. Referring to factory legislation, Mr. Mackay said he had no objection to some rules for insuring the better protection of the young against possible oppression, but the time had come when a decided stand should be made against the gradually increasing disposition to subordinate the interests of India to England, and he hoped that public opinion would support the Government in resisting any further interference than was necessary.

The question of the expediency of legislating on the subject of the age of consent and marriage customs continues to be much discussed. Dislike of reform in the matter is making itself most apparent in Madras, but is evidently very strong among the conservative orthodox Hindoos throughout India. The progressive party, though much smaller numerically, is better able to make itself heard, and would welcome legislative action. The general feeling among Anglo-Indians is that, while there can be no question of the desirability of reform, it is very doubtful whether it would be prudent of the Government to interfere.

I am indebted to a leading Calcutta merchant, formerly commercial member of the Viceroy's Council, for the following:—Business in produce has been much disturbed by the violent fluctuations in the rate of exchange. During the past week the price of silver advanced 5 per cent. in London and New York, and the export of produce from India has been practically suspended in consequence. The movement in silver appears to be caused by speculators in America and London, and unlikely to receive support from the demand from the East.

The cash in the Indian Presidency banks now amounts to 13½ crores of rupees, and the Secretary of State has still to sell Council bills amounting to seven crores during the remainder of the financial year; thus it appears that the cash available for Indian trade exceeds the amount usually available at this season by nine crores—a sum equivalent to the average yearly import of silver into India. It has been reported that China may require to import silver, but the large shipments of that metal now coming from China to India seem to make the prospect of a China demand very doubtful. Unless speculators in London and New York are able to support the silver market without assistance from the East, it would appear unlikely that the recent upward movement can be sustained.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 2.

The second phase of the Attock operations has been abandoned owing to the continuous rain.

The capture of the Lushai chief Kalkham's village was effected on the 17th ult. by a simultaneous attack by the columns from Changsil and Aijal. The Lushai loss was 10 killed. The attacking columns suffered no casualties. Kalkham and several other chiefs surrendered on the 22nd ult. He admits having planned the outbreak and the attack on Captain Brown.

DECEMBER 3.

The following is a general summary of the report of the Factory Commission:—

First, the limitation of the hours of work for women to eleven daily is proper and sufficient. Female operatives do not desire the present hours shortened; on the contrary, many have expressed themselves strongly against any interference which may lead to their losing their means of livelihood. Secondly, the Commission, after anxious consideration, recommends that no separate class should be recognised by law as young persons, and that the difficulty should be met by raising the minimum age of children to fourteen. Thirdly, regarding children, the Commission is of opinion that, except under the shift system, nine hours is too long; that nine hours in shifts for only four days—that is, thirty-six hours weekly, as is the practise in Bengal factories—cannot be considered overwork; that nine hours on the shift system, even if it entailed 54 hours weekly, would not be too severe; that any change would lead to the reduction of wages; and that in mills outside the Bengal shift system, half-time is the only solution of the question, and children should not work over six and three-quarter hours daily. Fourthly, women and children should have one holiday in every seven days, preferably Sunday, as should also male adults, except where continuous production is necessary. Fifthly, operatives desire that the present working day—that is, from daylight to dusk—should be continued.

The Commission think the conditions of factory labour do not call for legislative interference with the number of hours during which a male adult may choose to work.

BURMA.

RANGOON, NOV. 29.

The new Roman Catholic Cathedral at Mandalay is to be consecrated on December 8. This fine building has been erected at the sole expense of a Burman convert, and it is now the most striking building in Mandalay, its spire being higher than the Great Tower of the Palace. On the occasion of the consecration of the cathedral a new Bishop of Taung-ngu will be appointed, making the third Roman Catholic bishopric in Burma.

The Mandalay Herald states that the troops in the Chin country are so debilitated that they are unable to be sent against the Chins, who recently attacked a reconnoitring party. The question of removing the military headquarters of the brigade from Mandalay to Shwebo is under consideration.

RANGOON, DEC. 3.

Mr. Mackenzie, the new Chief Commissioner of Burma, arrived to-day. Some comment has been excited by Sir C. Crosthwaite's absence. It is understood that he will return to Rangoon in a day or two.

Referring to the assertion that the regilding of the pagodas in Upper Burma was indicative of the disturbed state of the people, the Rangoon Times again asserts that it has received information from undoubted sources that the Burmans are slowly but surely drifting towards another outbreak. It cautions the Government not to ignore the signs of the critical state of affairs, and urges that a strict watch should be kept, not only on the Mingoon Prince, but on all the representatives and soi-disant representatives of the late Royal family. It remarks that Sir C. Crosthwaite's great object appears to be to represent until his departure that all is well.

MR. A. C. TREVOR, C.S., has been appointed Commissioner in Sind.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE BENGAL "GOLD GAZETTE."

(Madras Mail.)

This "Independent Record of Transactions in Gold Shares and of Progress in the Bengal Gold Industry" has taken for its motto the mystic words:—Non gemmis, neque purpura cenale, neque auro, and it undertakes to give "Tips, Tattle, and Telegrams." Whatever it is destined to become the Gold Gazette is as yet on a very small scale, but if the gold-mining industry whose organ it aspires to be should succeed it may become a valuable property to its founders. In its issue of the 14th instant, it takes the Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer rather sharply to task for asserting that the "mad gambol in gold stock that has lately occupied the sole attention of our market to the exclusion of all legitimate business may be regarded as over," and it declares that "there is no business man in Calcutta in a position to instruct his neighbours in regard to Gold Companies who is not himself immersed in the speculation." The Gazette contains the advertisements of three of the new Mining Companies. There is the Bengal Gold and Silver Mining Company, which is being formed with a capital of twelve lakhs, for the purpose of amalgamating into one Company, four Separate Syndicates in Calcutta, namely, the Bengal Gold Syndicate, the Karo Gold Mining, the Manbhoom Gold Syndicate, and the Singbhoom Gold Reefs. The concessions acquired includes the Anandpur Concession, comprising an area of about two hundred square miles; the Karo Concession of about eighteen square miles; and the Jhalda Concession of about thirty square miles. We are told that "it is known, as the result of prospecting operations, that over these areas gold, galena, copper, talc, and other minerals are to be obtained." The price to be paid for these concessions is ten lakhs, in fully paid-up shares. This will leave two lakhs of capital in one rupee shares for working expenses. Two lakhs would go a very little way in starting a gold mine at Kolar, but, for all we know to the contrary, the difficulties to be overcome in Bengal before mining will pay are comparatively small. Then there is the Patpat Gold Mining Company, which is being formed with a capital of ten three-fifths lacs (inter alia) of acquiring from the Kharsawan Gold Syndicate all their rights and interest in Mouzah Patpat and other lands in Pergunnah Kharsawan, under lease granted by Maharaja Dhiraj Kumar, Baboo Sri Sri Sita Nath Singh Deo, and others. Then the Dhadka Mining Company is being started with a capital of ten lakhs for the purpose of acquiring from Mr. Vansittart, late of the Bengal Civil Service, certain prospecting leases, as well as mining and surface rights, "in a tract or tracts in Turruff Dhadka to be selected by the Company, and not exceeding in the aggregate sixty-four square miles in area," as well as "all surface and other proprietary rights in the nineteen villages situated within Turruff Dhadka, and held on perpetual leases."

In a previous issue the Gold Gazette invited its readers to communicate information about the progress of the industry, and in the present number Mr. Vansittart writes:—

"No one is more strongly impressed than myself with the importance of letting the public know what is being done in the matter of these Gold and other Mining Companies. Perhaps the very worst policy that can be adopted by anyone interested in the gold movement is that of secrecy, of keeping dark that which should be published for the knowledge of all. For myself I have consistently followed the views which you advocate of giving publicity to any matter, whether good or bad, likely to be of interest to shareholders. I now write to suggest that you should obtain daily or weekly reports from all the Companies in Calcutta for publication in your columns, giving, no matter how briefly, a short resumé of the week's doings. I should be very glad to give you a daily account of the work so far as regards Dhadka, much of which is certain to prove of interest to many of your readers."

The number of the Gold Gazette now before us is singularly barren of information about what is being done on the "field," or fields. This is disappointing, for one might like to learn why the shares of several of the Companies or Syndicates, which have been formed in the last two or three months—there are, in all, twenty of them—have gone to a high premium before ground has been broken. Seven weary years passed, and £135,000 were spent before the Mysore Company paid its first dividend; and nine years passed, and about £100,000 were spent before the Nundydroog followed suit. The Ooregum Company, after an existence of ten years, and spending about £200,000, commenced so recently as the month before last to make returns available for dividend as soon as the suit regarding the status of the preference shares is settled by the House of Lords. But no other Kolar Company seems to be within measurable distance of a dividend, and as for the Mining Companies in the Wynad the less said about most of them the better. It is to be hoped that the formation of the reefs, the employment of rock drills, and the application of experience bought at a great price elsewhere, may combine to render the lot of the promoters of gold-mining enterprises in Bengal a more happy one than has been that of many an investor in Southern India.

THE NAVIGATION OF THE RED SEA.

(Statesman.)

The steamship traffic from Europe to India, China, and Australia by the Red Sea route is expanding year by year, and as the number of vessels engaged in it increases, so does the percentage of marine accidents and disasters on this portion of the highway to the East. Since the wreck of the Dacca, attention has again been directed to the lighting of the Red Sea, especially at its southern end. It is contended that the lights are insufficient in number, and that the advantages would be many and direct if two or three more lighthouses were erected. This lack of lights where they are alleged to be urgently required has been frequently spoken of by the commanders of steamships traversing the Red Sea, but no action of a practical character has yet been taken with regard to the matter. The reproach does not apply to the Gulf of Suez or the northern end of the Red Sea. In consequence of the strong representations made by ship-owners and underwriters, and also by shipmasters and the Press, this portion of the Red Sea is now well lighted, and the complaints which were made with regard to its unsafe navigation have ceased. The lighthouses of Suez, Zafarana, Ras-Gharil, and Ashrafi, in the Gulf of Suez, together with that of Shadwan Island; and further on The Brothers and the Daedalus appear, for the present, at all events, to be considered sufficient by those shipmasters who follow the track recommended by the Admiralty. With regard to the southern end of the Red Sea, however, the case is different, and the erection of additional lights is required in the interests of the enormous and ever-increasing traffic, and with a view to lessen risk to life and property. Taking the sailing directions of the Admiralty as a basis, and also the experiences of the masters of mail steamers and cargo boats, there need be no difficulty in selecting the sites where additional lights should be placed, and where they would be most useful. All steamships coming from the north end of the Red Sea, and passing the Daedalus light, shape a course S.S.E. 3/5 E, and make for Jeb-el-Tier Island, a distance of 656 miles. Long practice has made it a rule in Red Sea navigation to make for certain points, and as frequently as possible. The atmosphere, however, is very often hazy, with sand or dust, and Jeb-el-Tier, although a high rock, is thus obscured on these occasions. Here, then, it is considered would be a fitting station for a lighthouse. After leaving this island the Zebaiyer group—600ft. high—can easily be cleared on the port side, and a course shaped for the Abu-Ail Canal where, on Pile Island, a light should also be placed. Thence it is customary to steer a course to within a distance of eight miles from Moska, where light could be erected. This would ensure a safe course for Perim. These three suggested lights would benefit homeward as well as outward bound vessels. The perils attendant on the navigation of the southern end of the Red Sea are painfully demonstrated by the numerous wrecks on its rocky and forbidding shores. Effort should, therefore, it is urged, be made as speedily as possible to minimise the danger. The cost of establishing the lighthouses could be defrayed pro rata by the maritime powers chiefly interested. Great Britain would, of course be first on the list, 80 per cent. of the tonnage using this highway being under the British flag. Germany and France would rank next. It is almost a forlorn hope to expect that the Sultan or Khedive would undertake these improvements; but if proper representations were made by owners and underwriters, as in the instance of the north or Suez end, there is no doubt that the nations vitally interested would see to them being effected. While on this subject of the Red Sea navigation, it may not be out of place to mention that several shipmasters have suggested that the three fixed lights at Suez should be altered to flash lights. This is in consequence of so many steamers having their electric search lights up. The array of lights is bewildering on approaching the anchorage, and a flash light would do away with the uncertainty. Time balls, it is also suggested, should be placed at Port Said, as well as Aden, and they should be dropped twice a day. When these improvements are carried out, the Red Sea route will be one of the safest known for navigation.

THE SIMLA MUNICIPALITY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Although the agitation against the municipality at Simla may not have been particularly considerate to that body, and the charges brought against it may not have been wholly deserved, and in some respects not at all so, nevertheless it seems likely that the small thunderstorm may be the means of introducing some extensive changes in the local municipal administration. It is, we believe, pretty well-known locally that the municipality will sooner or later undergo reconstruction. We have already noted that the municipality will probably be governed by a paid officer who will combine in himself the office of President of the municipality and town magistrate, and he will have magisterial powers of a summary character to enable him to deal promptly with sanitary offences. For the rest the number of municipal commissioners is, we hear, likely to be reduced. The Government will reserve to itself the right to appoint certain of these, and the remainder will be elected by the rate payers, the Government abstaining from voting. The nominated members, we should assume, will be an officer of the Public Works Department, a medical officer, the town magistrate and an officer to represent Government interests. Last, and not least, we understand that before long the Municipal Act will undergo amendment in view to remedying certain defects which have been perceived in its working.

COLONIAL TIES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Colonial officers who are coming from Melbourne to India this season to be present at the different Camps of Exercise are expected to arrive early next month. The Government of India has very kindly offered every facility to their moving about India, and seeing what may be useful to them. These officers are to be given free passage by rail, and allowed the use of Camp equipage when they require it, and also chargers at the Camps of Exercise. The general officers at the ports of disembarkation have also been requested to instruct the Colonial officers as to what they will want in the way of outfit for their tour throughout India. As we remarked on a former occasion, we hope these visits of Colonial officers to India will result in much good for both of the great dependencies. The military officers having been well received by the Indian authorities, no doubt Colonial attention will gradually become attracted to India. There is much room for an extension of trade between India and Australia, and nothing could promote this extension quicker than that the two peoples should know each other a little better. Already a number of officers from India spend a large portion of their furlough in Australia, or New Zealand, and when the scheme for opening a sanitarium on the western coast of Australia for British soldiers from India is completed, we shall have a regular military connection with the colonies. The idea of opening a sanitarium in Australia for invalids from India is an excellent one, and it is extremely probable that the mild voyage would save the lives of many sick men to whom the passage to England is a risk at any time. The scheme, too, might be made to include officers as well as men. The voyage from Bombay to a point on the coast of Western Australia could always be done under a fortnight, without exciting stoppages of any kind, or the incessant noise inseparable from calling at different ports on the way. Then a short residence on a quiet spot of a most beautiful coast would make recovery perfect in most cases, while the return voyage would but make restoration to health more complete and thorough. We can only hope that such a good prospect for invalids from this country will not fall through for want of funds for the initial outlay. That it would pay in the long run, and save many men's lives, seems certain.

STATE INTERFERENCE IN SOCIAL REFORM.

(Madras Times.)

Archimedes promised to show his contemporaries the feat of moving the world, if only they could grant him a foothold beyond the world; the Indian Social Reformers promise to show us how perfectly they can mould Hindu sociology if they can but get hold of the ears of the State. How much of their notions are sensible, and how much of them merely sentimental, we will not take upon ourselves to decide. That the State, if it takes upon itself the rôle of a reformer, will succeed, with the machinery at its disposal, better than any private individual could do, need not be doubted. But the times have passed in which the State could assume such a function. The principle now guiding a civilised State is that legislation, though it may be didactic in its effects, should not be undertaken for merely didactic purposes; and this principle was enunciated in clear terms in 1886 by the Indian Government, when dealing with the suggestion of Mr. Malabari to change Hindu social customs by legislation. A point-blank refusal on the part of the State to move with Mr. Malabari, was then given, but Mr. Malabari, actuated by enthusiasm, persevered in the cause. He pleaded his case before the women of England, and his eloquence, though it betrayed him, perhaps, into making mountains of molehills, yet had some substratum of truth to work upon—at least, the molehills were there, palpable, tangible. Recent critics arose, and one of them, Mr. J. D. Rees, in the Nineteenth Century, marshals "a few facts" and opinions culled from those of men of position in India to oppose the statements of Mr. Malabari. Though some of the "facts" are weighty, and easily dispose of certain of Mr. Malabari's conclusions and remedies, yet the molehills are left, and the ugly fact about them is that they are deeply embedded in Hindu sociology. They ought to be removed, but if the Government is to do the work it must be done very cautiously, and with the consent of the majority of the Hindus.

With the suggestion of Mr. Malabari and others of his extreme party regarding the amendment of the Indian Penal Code, making twelve instead of ten the age of consent, we have already dealt, and we have also suggested that State interference in this respect may be beneficial. Though opposition cannot but be expected, yet that opposition will rather be the effect of extreme conservatism than of intelligent perception of any evils that may be involved by the change. If, as is asserted in many quarters, the age of consent is, for all practical purposes, over twelve, it cannot be imagined why this absurdly low fixing of the age of consent at twelve should meet with opposition. If, on the other hand, the age of consent is practically below twelve, which alone can make any opposition intelligible, it is desirable for the State to see whether, on the same grounds of "public policy" on which, it is to be presumed, it went when fixing the age of consent at ten, it should not again proceed to reconsider its original decision. Here, as in many other questions, views of "public policy" may differ at different times, and it may now be well for the State to consider whether its views of "public policy" on this matter have undergone any change since it fixed the age of consent at a period of life when the chief party concerned is thinking more of romping than of settling in life. Whatever the Government can do to improve matters without offending the religious susceptibilities of the people, should be done. It may be that no practical benefit would result from raising the age of consent; but, at least the reform would show a desire to do what is right.

BENGAL.

(Nov. 12.)

GOLF has commenced in Calcutta, which is a sure sign of the advent of the cold weather, and the skating rinks are getting themselves into readiness. The Columbia Rink opens on the 15th instant. Ladies who at present patronise the Swimming Bath threaten to desert that institution as soon as rink-ing begins.

At the last meeting of the Calcutta District Charitable Society, it was reported that Dr. Birch had had some hesitation in proceeding with the treatment, as Dr. Unna had, in a medical journal stated that medicines mentioned by Dr. Milton in his pamphlet were not those he used. However, Dr. Birch says that he will supervise the treatment, for, although the medicines were not Dr. Unna's, still they are very much alike, and are certainly not likely to do any harm.

The experiment of letting the water into Dock No. 1 at Calcutta has not proved injurious. There has been no shifting of the walls, nor have any fresh cracks appeared. But some doubt is entertained as to what the result will be when the work of dredging the bed is resumed. There is a report abroad that things will continue in statu quo till the arrival of Mr. Duff Bruce, who, it is said, is expected shortly, with some other experts in dock-works, to report as to how the difficulty can be overcome. Whatever decision may be arrived at, it is said that the damage caused will cost pretty nearly 30 lacs to repair!

At the meeting of the Calcutta Municipal Commissioners on Thursday a resolution of the General Committee, passed on October 4th last, was confirmed sanctioning the payment to Mr. Harrington of Rs. 9,225, the half of the second moiety of the cost of his incinerator, together with a further advance of Rs. 5,000 for necessary works to remedy the nuisance complained of as to the offensive smell arising from the smoke, by raising the height of the chimney from 30 to 50 feet, and by putting on a more powerful crematorium. The terms of the agreement were also extended for two months for the execution of these works, and a further fifteen days for trial.

On Friday last, according to the Englishman, several hundreds of carters struck work in portions of the Northern Division of the town, and as a consequence business suffered materially. The causes of the strike appear to be these: The men complain that the heavy taxation to which they are subjected leaves them no margin for profit; that recent orders of the local Municipality as to the provision of better cowsheds and the provision of a better class of bullocks, has crippled them, as they are poor men who hire out their vehicles from a number of owners at a fixed rate per day, which they are forced to pay whether their earnings allow them to do so or not. The men complain very bitterly of police oppression and trivial charges brought against them by the agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Many of the men have left for their native villages, and several others are determined to follow their example. The great majority, however, are still at work, but the centres of disaffection are parts of the native town in and near Hatkollah, the great centre of the grain and seed trade of Eastern and Northern Bengal. A meeting of the strikers was held at Chitpore on Friday, and another at Jaun Bazar, where some of the men endeavoured to induce a general strike throughout the town and suburbs. Matters, however, remained as they were on Sunday, and the police have been directed to make a searching inquiry into the nature of the carters' grievance.

MADRAS.

(Nov. 13.)

COLONEL H. FANE SEWELL, Madras Staff Corps, and till recently employed in the Hyderabad Contingent, is gazetted commandant of the Nilgiri Volunteer Rifles, vice Colonel J. Blaxland, who has proceeded on a year's furlough prior to retirement. Colonel Sewell took charge of his duties last week, and was present at a parade on Saturday last.

THE Rani of the Jeypore Estates, which is under Government management, is blind from cataract in both eyes. She applied to the Collector of Vizagapatam expressing a desire to have an operation performed, and the services of Dr. Drake-Brockman have been procured to proceed to Vizagapatam during the Christmas holidays to perform the operation. The Madras Times learns that the fee asked and agreed to is Rs. 5,000.

WHEN the question of providing a Sanitary Engineer for the Madras Presidency was under consideration, writes a local paper, it was proposed that the cost of this officer and his office establishment should be met by the levy of a certain percentage from the different municipal bodies. Government has, however, since had the matter under consideration, and it has now been finally decided that the cost, both in the past and for the future, shall be entirely met from provincial funds. The advantages to the whole of the Presidency which may be expected to result from Mr. Jones's labours are, in the opinion of Government, such as fully justify the cost of the sanitary engineer and his establishment being thus defrayed out of provincial funds.

ON Wednesday evening his Excellency the Governor of Madras, who was accompanied by Captain Holmes, A.D.C., inspected the new High Court buildings now under construction. The Chief Justice, Sir Arthur Collins, and the consulting architect to Government, Mr. Henry Irwin, C.I.E., were also present. We believe that the inspection will result in several additions being made to the present plan of the building, amongst them being the construction of a chamber for a fifth Small Cause Court, and the extension of the library accommodation. If necessary, another story will be added to one wing of the building. It is also likely that the accommodation which the vakils have so urgently requested will be provided for them by extending the building on the western side. The addition of a fifth Small Cause Court, observes the local Mail, leads one to suppose that the last has not yet been heard of the Small Cause Court Bill.

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 15.)

THE HON. MR. J. G. MOORE, C.S., has been allowed privilege leave of absence for three months.

MR. C. F. G. LESTER, on his return from leave, will do duty as District Superintendent of Police in the Ahmedabad District.

QUARANTINE restrictions at Aden, Perim, and the Somali Coast against arrivals from the Hedjaz, except Pilgrim vessels, have been withdrawn.

LIEUT.-COLONEL E. V. STACE, C.B., First Assistant Political Resident, Aden, and Political Agent for the Somali Coast, has been granted privilege leave for three months.

MR. J. MONTEATH, C.S., acting Collector of Land Revenue, Customs and Opium, Bombay, has been allowed furlough for one year, ten months, and twenty-seven days, from 6th ultimo.

MR. LINGAPA JAYAPA, Desai of Navalgund, has been nominated an additional member of the Council of the Governor of Bombay for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations only.

THE Standing Committee of the Municipal Corporation has passed a resolution recommending the Corporation to sanction a grant of Rs. 30,000 for the widening of the junctions of Gorgari Mohla and Banian Street and Parel Road, and at the junction of Apollo and Forbes Streets.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL W. T. BUGDEN, the officer commanding the Bombay District, and Dr. Mylne, the Bishop of Bombay, arrived in Bombay on Sunday evening by the English mail steamer Siam, the former being a passenger from Brindisi, and the latter travelling from Aden.

ON Saturday afternoon, the Hon. Lieut.-General Sir George Chesney, R.E., K.C.B., C.S.I., C.I.E., the Military Member of the Governor-General's Council, accompanied by Captain Dallas, R.E., proceeded on a tour of inspection to Aden by the P. & O. mail steamer, while Lady Chesney and her daughters left for England in the same boat. A salute was fired announcing the honourable member's departure.

HIS Excellency the Governor in Council is pleased to make the following appointments, with effect from the date of retirement of Mr. G. F. M. Grant, C.S.:—Mr. G. B. Reid, C.S., to be Political Agent, Bhor, vice Mr. W. A. East, C.S., and Mr. F. S. P. Lely, C.S., to be agent to his Excellency the Governor at Surat, vice Mr. Reid.

THE following appointments have been made, with effect from the date of retirement of Mr. J. R. Middleton, C.S.:—Mr. W. Porteous, C.S., to be Political Agent, Surgana, and Mr. J. McNabb Campbell, C.S., C.I.E., to be Political Agent, Jawhar, Mr. W. F. Sinclair, C.S., acts as Political Agent, Jawhar, pending further orders.

THE following notification was published in a Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary on Monday:—A vacancy having occurred in the Executive Council of this Presidency, the Honourable C. B. Pritchard, C.S.I., appointed by Her Majesty the Queen-Empress of India Provisional Member of Council at Bombay, has this day in the forenoon taken upon himself the execution of his office.

THE Municipal Corporation had a long and exceptionally lively debate on Monday on the subject of the report of the Commissioner regarding the recent defalcations in the Assessment Department. There were some lively passages-at-arms between the members, who occasionally made use of rather smart and strong language. It was eventually resolved to record the Commissioner's report, and a committee was appointed to investigate the questions referred to therein. Pending the presentation of the committee's report, the Corporation sanctioned the employment of the extra establishment applied for by the Commissioner at a cost of Rs. 600 per mensem.

THE P. & O. Company's steamer Arcadia (extra), which left Aden on the 4th instant, arrived in harbour on Sunday morning about seven o'clock. The voyage throughout is said to have been a very pleasant one, the gaieties on board culminating in a fancy dress ball on the 6th inst. The following distinguished passengers were among those who arrived:—Lord Eglinton, Sir Samuel and Lady Baker, Miss Baker and lady friend, Lady Bayley and Miss Bayley, Major-General C. A. Goodfellow, Major and Mrs. Rasch, the Hon. Mr. F. L. Latham and Miss Latham, Major and Mrs. Rosseter and Capt. Rosseter, Sir John Edgar, Mr. C. B. Pritchard, C.S., C.I.E., Member of the Governor's Council, and the Hon. Mr. Justice Beverley, of the Calcutta High Court.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDE AND PUNJAB.

(Nov. 13.)

A HORRIBLE outrage was perpetrated at Kuch, the station on Monday night, a signaller, a bhastie and another man being found decapitated. The murderers are supposed to be Peshwari Pathans. The ticket chest was broken into, and the postal cash is missing. The Tehsildar, with Gyanchand, Inspector of the Baluchistan Police, are investigating the affair.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces on the morning of the 9th instant inspected the Allahabad Waterworks at the Khushru Bagh, accompanied by Mr. Harrington, the Commissioner, and several members of the Municipal Board, Mr. Hughes, the Supervising Engineer, and the Resident Engineer. Mr. Walker, showed the works to Sir Auckland Colvin, who expressed himself highly pleased with the progress made by the contractors, Messrs. Walsh, Lovett & Co., and congratulated the local member of the firm, Mr. R. N. Mookerjee, on what had been done. It is calculated that the works will be ready for opening by April 1st, or even sooner, if there is no hitch or accident with the engines and machinery in transit.

A SHAJAHNPORE correspondent writes:—"The two men who were charged with the murder of a man named Darayao Singh, zemindar, have both been sentenced by the Sessions Judge to transportation for life. The accused, it will be remembered, killed the deceased with lathi blows, because the brother had turned them out of his fields where they were cutting grass. The third accused has absconded, and no trace of his whereabouts have yet been found.

OBITUARY.

—o—

DEATH OF SIR BARNES PEACOCK.

Sir Barnes Peacock, the last acting paid member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council appointed under the statute of 1871, died at one o'clock on Wednesday morning at 40, Cornwall-gardens, Kensington, from failure of the heart, the final sign of the wearing out of a vigorous constitution which had resisted Bengal summers and London winters since 1810. Sir Barnes Peacock had an hereditary connection with the law. He was the second son of Mr. Lewis H. Peacock, of Lincoln's inn-fields, solicitor, and entered at the Inner Temple at the age of eighteen. He was not immediately called to the Bar, but practised for five or six years as a certificated special pleader at 1, Paper-buildings, a mode of preparation for the career of an advocate which was then very often adapted. Admitted to the degree of barrister-at-law in 1836 he joined the Home Circuit when Lord Bramwell was among his contemporaries, and had chambers in Harcourt-buildings. As might have been expected from his physique and training Mr. Peacock's speciality was in raising and arguing refined points of law, rather than in imposing his will upon common juries, and it was by a nicety of criminal pleading that he made his great mark in the profession.

In 1843 Daniel O'Connell had entered upon his campaign of monster meetings for the repeal of the Union. Beginning with an assemblage of 30,000 at Trim on March 14, the numbers at these gatherings had increased to 250,000 at Tara, and on the 8th of October a still vaster multitude was expected to assemble at Clontarf. The Government prohibited the Clontarf meeting by proclamation, and arrested O'Connell, Gavan Duffy, and others. O'Connell was sentenced to a year's imprisonment, and a fine of £2,000; the Irish Court of Queen's Bench upheld the conviction; and the accused appealed by way of writ of error to the House of Lords. Not even the recent legal proceedings in relation to Irish matters more vividly excited the public interest and attention than did this State trial. The case was argued for the several defendants by a number of learned counsel, of whom the then Mr. Barnes Peacock was nearly the junior, taking precedence only of Sir Colman O'Loughlen. Sir Thomas Wilde (afterwards the first Lord Truro) was the leader of this band of counsel, while Follett and Thesiger (afterwards Lord Chelmsford) were against them for the Crown. Mr. Peacock took an objection which, though technical in point of form, brought in question the substantial justice of the proceedings. The whole bench of English Common Law Judges had been called in to advise the Law Lords. One of the most acute, Mr. Baron Parke of the Exchequer (afterwards Lord Wensleydale), confessed and avoided what he styled "the ingenious arguments of Mr. Peacock." But when the Law Lords came to give judgment (which they did in the teeth of the advice solicited from and given by the Judges), Lord Denman delivered his elaborate speech adopting the objection of Mr. Peacock, and on that and another ground moved the House to reverse the decision of the Irish Court. Lord Cottenham and Lord Campbell supported the same view, and, in spite of the opinion of the Chancellor (Lyndhurst) and Lord Brougham, the sentence pronounced upon O'Connell and his companions was quashed, and the prisoners released from custody. The occasion was rendered the more striking historically because at this trial the lay lords practically renounced their right to take part in the decision of legal appeals. Messrs. Clark and Finnelly, the House of Lords' reporters, quote comparatively modern instances in which a case involving the rights of individuals was discussed and voted on in the House of Lords as if an ordinary debate on a political subject or a private Bill had been in question. So, in the O'Connell appeal, Lord Stradbroke wished to vote against the acquittal; but the common-sense and fairness of the House, even of those most bitterly opposed to O'Connell, prevailed, and a precedent against the interference of those peers who have not the training of lawyers with the judicial business of the House was definitively established. The argument by which Mr. Barnes Peacock on this great occasion prevailed was briefly as follows:—The indictment was of monstrous length, and contained several counts or separate charges. Some of these counts were held to be void in law. Yet the verdict and judgment were general; that is, given generally upon the whole of the indictment, not separately on each separate count. The objection was that such general judgment was bad, and could not be taken to apply to the good counts only. The other objection (for which Mr. Peacock was not responsible) was founded upon a curtailment of the jury panel. Sir Joseph Arnould, from whose account of the trial we have freely borrowed in this summary, observes that the decision in O'Connell's case has entirely put an end to the loose practice which had so long prevailed of giving a general verdict and judgment on an indictment comprising several distinct charges. It is obvious that such a practice deprived the accused of the opportunity of meeting each charge one by one. But the practice had long prevailed, and Lord Denham said, referring to Mr. Peacock's address, which had converted him, "I felt, as my learned brothers did, great surprise when I heard the most able and ingenious argument that was addressed to the House on this point, and I confess I had never felt any doubt on the subject till that argument was submitted to my mind."

After this great victory, as brilliant and useful a success as a stuff gownsmen could achieve, Mr. Peacock practised six years on the back benches. He took silk in 1850, and was at once made a Bencher of his Inn. Two years later he was appointed to be a Legal Member of the Supreme Council of India at Calcutta. A special pleader necessarily cultivates precision and accuracy of language. The work of the legal members of the Council of India is largely concerned with codification, and the training which Sir Barnes Peacock had received in the painful exactitude of the common law was naturally of great service to him in fulfilling his new functions. Sir Whitley Stokes couples his name with those of Macaulay, Sir Henry Maine, Sir James Stephen, Lord Hobhouse, and William Macpherson among the authors of the Indian Codes, those remarkable summaries of law compiled by Englishmen for India, which in turn have exercised and are still exercising a valuable reciprocal action in simplifying English law in England. Sir Barnes Peacock was destined not only to frame laws, but to expound them on the Bench. In 1859 Sir James Colvile, with whom Sir Barnes Peacock afterwards sat so many years in the chamber of the Judicial Committee in Downing street, retired from the Chief Justiceship of the Supreme Court of Calcutta. Sir Barnes Peacock succeeded him, was made Vice-President of the Legislative Council of India, and knighted. In 1862, when the Indian judicial institutions were remodelled, he became Chief Justice of what was henceforth called the High Court of Judicature at Bengal. The judgments of the Court have been of the greatest assistance to students of Indian law, not only as expositions of the Codes, but as repositories of learning on Native customs. In 1870 Sir Barnes Peacock returned to this country, and he has since 1872 been a member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, which has in later years some time subsequently to his appointment, been strengthened by the addition of the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary. He returned with a great and deserved reputation from India. His work at the Privy Council has been marked rather by caution than by showy or brilliant qualities. He gave evidence of possessing great endurance and persistence, and we reported on Monday a case in which he took part so recently as last Saturday. His illness lasted only three days, and on its fatal termination being communicated yesterday to the court in which he had sat for eighteen years, it immediately adjourned as a mark of respect to his memory. Sir Barnes Peacock was twice married, first in 1835 to Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. W. Fanning. She died in 1865, and he wedded in 1870 Georgina, daughter of Major-General Showers, C.B., who survives him. His eldest son, Mr. Frederick Barnes Peacock, C.S.I., has attained high office in the Indian Civil Service.—The Times.

HOW AN IMAGE IS MADE A GOD.

THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT ASKED TO INTERVENE.

The Jaini sect of Gwalior have addressed a petition to Lord Lansdowne, asking him to instruct the Governor-General's agent in Central India to bring pressure to bear on the Gwalior Government to allow their "image" known as Ruth Biman to be converted into a real god. The petitioners say that at present it is only an "image," and they explain that it "cannot be considered a god unless it is taken with procession into the streets and accompanied by several images which come from other stations, and these images take the new image to the temple," when by virtue of this public procession it becomes a god, for "until the procession is performed a new image is not considered a god according to our religion." It appears that the temple of the petitioners was broken into by some Brahmin zealots and the image therein destroyed, and in their own estimation they are without a god. For four years the Gwalior Government has refused permission for the procession by which alone this loss can be replaced. The reasons for the refusal do not appear, but the consequences are disastrous to the Jains; for meanwhile the ceremony of marriage cannot be performed, and their daughters are growing up unmarried. It is suggested that the Gwalior authorities are afraid of the disturbances that might be caused during the procession in consequence of Brahmin hostility; but the petitioners offer to pay for the extra police force needed to maintain the public peace on that occasion. The reply of the Government of India is not yet known.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Government of India having sanctioned the officers from the Bombay Presidency being detailed to attend the Attock manoeuvres. H.E. the Commander-in-Chief has selected Major C. S. Shepherd, D.S.O. (Royal Fusiliers) and Captain T. P. Geoghegan (3rd Q.O. Light Cavalry) for that purpose.

THE Chief Engineers of Madras and Bombay and the Superintending Engineers and others have been instructed by the Director-General of Military Works to impress on the officers under their commands the necessity for a strict observance of the rules under which the sanction of the Government of India is to be obtained before cases of prosecution are undertaken.

MAJOR B. V. DICKENS has been promoted from the Lower to the Royal Foundation of the Military Knights of Windsor. Major Dickens is a veteran soldier, having fought with distinction during the Persian Campaign of 1856-57. He was also engaged in the suppression of the Indian Mutiny, was present with Havelock's column in several actions and wounded, and was assistant engineer during the defence of Cawnpore.

THE Bombay Camp-of-Exercise will be held at Danoria, near Kirkee, commencing about January 11. The following troops are detailed for the operations:—The Royal Fusiliers, the Lancashire Fusiliers, the Worcester Regiment, 3rd and 4th Companies of Sappers, the 26th, 35th, 53rd and 55th Field Batteries, Royal Artillery, the 3rd and 4th Cavalry, the 1st and 2nd Grenadiers, the 3rd, 10th, 55th and 28th Native Infantry, and 3 and 11 Southern Division Garrison Artillery.

MADRAS must apparently be prepared to face another reduction, or conversion, in the Presidency Army before very long. The authorities in Burma are now prepared to dispense with another complete battalion of military police, and sooner than break up a fine body of men, got together at great trouble from the best military material in India, it is probable that the Government of India will accept them from Sir Charles Crosthwaite's hands and turn them into a Burma regiment, dissolving one of the Madras Infantry regiments at the same time.

THE Hindu sees a chance of decreased taxation if pressure were put upon Native rulers. We (Pioneer) do not see the harm, it says in the Supreme Government exercising some slight pressure on the Native Princes for co-operation in a matter which concerns as much the security of themselves and their subjects as of the British Government and the people directly subject to it. The Supreme Government may not have legal right to exercise such pressure; but from a moral point of view it might demand aid not only in the shape of well-trained and well-equipped forces, but in the shape of money also. The British Indian taxpayers have had their burden greatly increased under the increasing military exigencies of the Empire, and there is no reason why the subjects of Native rulers should not bear a proportionate share in the increase.

THE COLD WEATHER CAMP-OF-EXERCISE AT POONA.

The Camp-of-Exercise to be held at Poona in the cold weather will be on a large scale, and the principal manoeuvres in connection with it will be witnessed by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, who will be there from the 12th to the 17th January. The Camp will commence on the 5th January probably. The following troops will take part in the operations, viz.:—

R Battery Royal Horse Artillery.
26th Field Battery R.A.
35th Field Battery R.A.
53rd Field Battery R.A.
55th Field Battery, R.A.
3rd Battery Southern Division } Garrison Batteries.
11th Battery Southern Division }
3rd (Q.O.) Light Cavalry.
4th Bombay Cavalry (Poona Horse).
1st Battalion Royal Fusiliers.
1st Battalion Worcestershire Regiment.
2nd Battalion Lancashire Fusiliers.
Two Companies, Bombay Sappers and Miners.
1st Bombay Grenadiers.
2nd P.W.O. Bombay Grenadiers.
3rd Bombay Light Infantry.
10th Bombay Light Infantry.
25th Regiment (3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade) Bombay Infantry.
28th Bombay Pioneers.
The following will give a general idea of what will be done during the manoeuvres.

1st Phase.—A series of blank ammunition engagements between the Poona and Kirkee garrisons (sides being more or less equalised), resulting in the Kirkee force being compelled to entrench itself and await reinforcements in the vicinity of the Royal Artillery practice-ground at the hills named—"The Two Sisters."

2nd Phase.—Operations (still blank ammunition) for attacking an enemy in an entrenched position. These operations will consist of—(a) Cavalry reconnaissance with Staff officers, who will sketch the ground; (b) Artillery attack; and (c) Infantry attack.

3rd Phase.—This will consist of the above with shell and rifle ammunition, and will be, in fact, the field firing of the troops. Dummies and dummy guns having been placed in the works and disposed as outposts, the cavalry field firing will consist of an attack on the outposts; one-third of the force will be employed in manoeuvring in the flank. The artillery will attack with common shell and shrapnel, and finally the infantry will attack with rifles; a portion of the force making a flank attack with ball ammunition if the ground permits, if not with blank. The field firing of the different arms will take place on different days to permit of a record of all hits separately. For the artillery fire the dummies will be placed low in the entrenchments; for the infantry fire they will be raised as if firing over the parapets.

4th Phase.—This will consist of siege operations by the garrison artillery assisted by infantry and sappers, and will be the target practice of two, out of the three, garrison batteries stationed at Bombay.

5th Phase.—This will be a night attack on the works, and assault by infantry at daybreak, covered by field guns—blank ammunition.

Finally, after the works have been captured, the troops will be instructed in quickly arranging for the defence of a captured work.

The whole Camp will probably close with a grand march-past of all the troops present.

Experiments will be made with lamps and tripping lines. These latter will be arranged to ring bells, fire guns, &c., so as to give notice to the garrison of the enemy's approach. The sappers will construct examples of different descriptions of zarebas, &c.

ARRIVAL OF THE TROOPSHIP EUPHRATES.

Her Majesty's troopship Euphrates, Capt. J. R. E. Pattisson arrived in Bombay Harbour on Nov. 10th, from Portsmouth, which she left on the 15th October, Malta on the 24th October, Port Said on the 28th October, and Suez on the 30th October. She brought 68 officers, 17 ladies, 6 children, 1,163 men, 20 women, and 13 children. During the voyage she experienced fine weather throughout, except heavy rain on the 7th inst. On the 3rd inst., in the Red Sea, Private H. Reeves, belonging to the East Kent Regiment, died of natural causes. The following are the names of the saloon passengers:—

Col. W. W. Murdoch, R.A.; Col. T. Davison, 16th Lancers; Surg.-Maj. G. H. Mount, M.S.; Lieut.-Col. E. J. and Mrs. de Latour, R.A.; Maj. C. M. Smith, R.A.; Maj. F. Longbourne, 2nd R. Wark.; Maj. R. H. A CASE OF SUTTEE.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says:—A fresh case of suttee has just occurred at Poona, in the Western Presidency. The wife of a rich Hindoo, deeply attached to her deceased husband, finding herself unable to bear the pang of separation, went forth and entered the funeral pyre. She had sufficiently burnt herself to serve her purpose—that is, to die to meet her master in the next world, as she thought, when she was forcibly taken out of the pyre. Notwithstanding the severe punishment which the law inflicts on attempts at suttee, such attempts are by no means rare. Scarcely a year passes which does not record one or more cases of suttee. It is not yet six months since another case occurred at Gya. The fact shows that among the Hindoos their old notions still cling to them with dogged pertinacity.

CAPITAL AND LABOUR IN INDIA.—Few men have done more for Indian railway enterprise than Mr. Thomas Craigie Glover, the eminent contractor, whose works are a standing monument to his engineering skill and administrative ability. Within the last twenty-five years the face of India has been completely changed, and the condition of the people altered for the better in an enormous degree by the extension of the railway system which a generation ago may be said to have scarcely existed at all. English capital and English enterprise soon proved that India would pay for developing, and, among those who threw their heart and soul into this gigantic work, few, if any, have been more energetic, and, it may be added, more successful, than Mr. Glover. He was born in Edinburgh in 1837, and certainly more than shares his countrymen's proverbial astuteness and foresight, and these qualities have stood Mr. Glover in good stead. After an early training as a civil engineer, he spent three years in railway work in Canada, and was then engaged in India in the construction of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway. Here he performed a feat which is unique in the annals of railway work, and shows the determination and pluck of the man who was afterwards destined to do so much for the advancement of our Indian Empire. At 2 A.M., on July 19th, 1867, he received intimation of the fall of the Mhow-ke-Mulla Viaduct, on the Bhore Ghaut (with the construction of which, it may be remarked, he was not concerned), and by 9.30 on the same morning he was at the Byculla station with 2,000 work people, overseers, and staff, all needful tools, provisions for ten days, and huts for shelter, as the work had to be done in the rainy season, which in India is a very serious matter. In ten days he reopened communication across the wide ravine, and reunited what was practically, for all commercial purposes, India cut in two. Trains were then run with safety over the temporary structure he erected, until the bridge could be rebuilt, an operation which lasted something over a year. Very few people are aware that at present some 200 millions of English capital are invested in Indian railways; and some idea of the high opinion in which Mr. Glover is held may be gathered from the fact that there is hardly a line in the Bombay Presidency, the Central Provinces, and the North-West, in which he has not had some hand in the construction. That he must have been possessed of great administrative ability is shown by the fact that he had at the outset to take in hand a body of native labourers with all their native prejudices, knowing absolutely nothing of the work they had to do. At one time he employed no fewer than 73,000 of these people, and, taken altogether, he has trained half-a-million native workmen, a result of incalculable advantage to those who come after him. Important bridges which Mr. Glover has built in India are the Chumbul Viaduct, on the Scindia State Railway, and the Taptee Viaduct, both among the largest in the world. He is now engaged in a stupendous work in connection with the new waterworks at Bombay, viz., the construction of a dam two miles in length, 103 feet thick, and 118 feet high, containing 11,000,000 cubic feet of masonry. This will be the largest work of the kind ever known, and a fitting climax to Mr. Glover's other gigantic enterprises.

Miscellaneous.

Nov. 15.

THE Jahows will now be dealt with by the authorities in Burma.

SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN, the Resident of Mysore, was to have left Bangalore on Sunday for a tour through Coorg.

SIR ANDREW SCOBLE, Q.C., Legal Member of the Viceregal Council, is expected at Hyderabad this week, visiting the Resident.

BABU S. K. CHATTERJI is no longer, it is stated, the editor of the Tribune. His services have been dispensed with from the 4th inst.

THE visitors to the Madras Government Central Museum during last month numbered 24,424, averaging, exclusive of Sundays, 904 daily.

THE construction of a Roman Catholic Chapel at Jhansi, capable of seating 280 persons, will probably be commenced during the ensuing year.

SIR DENNIS FITZPATRICK has issued invitations for a dance at the Chudderghaut Residency for the 19th inst.

RAJAS RAM SINGH and Arthur Sing of Cashmere and the Prince of Bokhara will pitch small camps at Attock.

No. 1 Company Bengal Sappers and Miners, instead of No. 2 Company, will be sent from Roorkee to Quetta in February, 1891.

THE death is announced of Sawlapa, who, as chief of Eastern Karenni, caused a good deal of trouble during our recent operations in that region.

THE s.s. Kohinoor left Calcutta on Friday morning with 90 convicts for Port Blair. This is the first batch of convicts for the Andamans this season.

A CONTINGENT of coolies left Calcutta on Thursday by the ship British Peer, commanded by Captain R. L. Dakin, for the West Indian colonies.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE's appointment to Bengal has, on the whole, been well received. The tone of the Native Press is respectful, if not enthusiastic.

GOLF has commenced in Calcutta, which is a sure sign of the advent of the cold weather, and the skating rinks are getting themselves into readiness.

NAWAB ABDUL LATIF KHAN, of Calcutta, visited Trichinopoly on the 6th inst., and was received by the Mahomedan community, who presented him with addresses of welcome.

THE five villages lying in the bend of the Kolodyne, which were implicated in the Chaima Valley raid, have lately surrendered.

THE inclusion provisionally in next year's estimates of Rs. 27,000, required in connection with the Shwebo Canal and Forage Reserve, has been sanctioned.

THE survey work in connection with doubling the line of the G.I.P. Railway from Khandwa to Itarsi has commenced, and is expected to be completed in about three months.

MAJOR THE NAWAB AFSUR JUNG will not leave for the Camp of Exercise at Attock till the 17th inst., in consequence of the expected arrival at Hyderabad of Lieutenant-Colonel Melliss.

THE local Government has been requested by the Madras Municipality to appoint a Health Officer in the place of Dr. Iyasawmi, who lately resigned his appointment owing to ill-health.

MISS BAYLEY is to be married in Calcutta in the first week in December, which, together with the arrival of the Viceroy on the 9th, will mark the opening of the Calcutta season.

OF the two companies of the 18th Bengal Infantry ordered from Jubbulpore to Ghooma, one left on Sunday, and the other by Tuesday morning's train.

THE Metropolitan has returned from his tour in the North-West Provinces, and was to have left Calcutta at daybreak on Wednesday for Cuttack, returning on the 22nd inst.

INDIAN QUESTIONS IN ENGLAND.

THE National Review has of late in several issues given publicity to the views of Mr. F. Pincott on Indian matters, about which he has written with an excess of zeal, if not of knowledge. With him, as with many others who really interest themselves in questions concerning the welfare of the peoples of India, sentiment has been the guide, because, lacking knowledge and experience of the country there could be no other. To certain minds of this class the complex problems of Indian life and its condition under British rule present an attraction which Englishmen who have lived and worked amongst the Natives of India find it somewhat difficult to understand. Those of us who have that knowledge and experience which our critical Indian reforming friends lack, know how difficult it is—nay, often how hopeless it is—to deal with such problems in any given portion of time. Difficulties which, arisen centuries ago, have grown greater as the years rolled on, are not children's puzzles of to-day. Unhappily, the well-meaning gentlemen who would give to India, with or without ten minutes' notice, all the blessings (as they consider them to be) of Western civilisation and enlightenment, cannot be convinced of this special difficulty in their own path of good intentions. We do not doubt for a moment that Mr. Bradlaugh, Mr. Caine, Mr. Pincott, and the many other gentlemen who are agitating for "reforms" which they believe to be necessary for the good of the Natives of India, are sincere, and uninfluenced by any but the best of motives. Otherwise argument with them would be out of place and degrading. But they do not know India; and this profound ignorance renders them utterly incapable of understanding what are the real wants, requirements, and aspirations of the peoples they pretend to represent. The Indian ryot, for instance, no more wants elective institutions than the Irish peasant wants Home Rule. Both want to live—better, certainly, if possible—but into that possibility no political considerations come. We, therefore, hold that the well-meaning gentlemen who wish to benefit the Natives of India, would be much more successful in doing so, were they to leave those Natives alone. We are glad to see that Mr. Pincott has at length come round to our opinion himself. In a letter which he sends to the current number of the National Review, he says that "the great lesson to be deduced from the Marriage Law agitation is the unfitness of England as an area for the discussion of Indian local matters. Under the present system of government every petty question down to the unjust dismissal of a constable must be dragged to England, and inflated into a topic of national importance even to obtain a hearing." But why the word must? There is no necessity of dragging these matters to England if the "busybodies" who interfere in England with the administration of affairs in India would only leave the administrators there alone to do their duty. When it is clearly proved that they do not do it, it will be time to agitate; but in the meantime we are glad to endorse Mr. Pincott's statement as to the "unfitness of England as an area for the discussion of Indian local matters."

A REMINDER.

THOUGH the crisis in the City is over, thanks to the combined promptness and firmness of the Governor of the Bank of England, supported, as he has been, so admirably by bankers and the highest financial authorities, including the Chancellor of the Exchequer, though he assures us the State has incurred no risk in aiding the work of rescue. Nevertheless, we must not forget that patient Issachar, the too confiding investor whose multiplied funds have been squandered in foreign lands and under alien Governments to the tune of tens of millions. Hence we are bound to improve the occasion by again reminding the sufferers, and also those who have been wise enough to hold their capital under control, that the great field of British India, with its numerous modern enterprises, offers its wide furrows for the safe investment of capital under the agis of British law and English management.

The rise in the rupee has robbed the bugbear of exchange in dividends of its terrors; and though some losers may lament that they disregarded our advice since last March, to look to our own Eastern possessions for safe investments at moderate but steady interest, the field is still open. So long as capital is scarce in India and plentiful here, the way is open for wise and discriminate use of funds in that country. This course would be of great benefit to our Dependency, and while increasing the knowledge of its opportunities for commercial development would serve the turn of the many comparatively small investors who could get their six to ten per cent. in the East instead of three or four here—to say nothing of avoiding the temptation to seek after the decoys of Argentines, Mexicans, and American Trusts.

WOODGATE, Major E. R. P., Royal Lancaster Regiment (1st Batt.), to remain in England, in extension, from Dec. 7 to March 6, 1891, on private affairs.

THE Legislative Council of the North-West Provinces has been able to find at length some work which it may and can attempt, and it will convene, therefore, for a session in February. The most interesting measure, observes the Pioneer, to be taken up is a Water Rates Bill, which, by reason of the water-works schemes now coming on in all the larger municipalities, is a matter of pressing importance. This question is entirely new ground, so that the N.W. P. Council can safely deal with it in spite of their disabilities. Besides this a Jampiani and Cooly Registration Bill will be put in hand for Naini Tal and Mussoorie, somewhat, we suppose, on the lines of the Bengal Act for Darjeeling. Other business may crop up between this and then.

INQUIRIES instituted by the Agricultural Department in t Madras Presidency as to the natural habitat of the Australian salt bush, which it was once hoped might be usefully introduced as a fodder plant, to be raised in the marshy saline land found in the coast districts, revealed the fact that the natural habitat of the plant is an arid desert country. A Madras paper says further inquiries made as to whether any plants could be discovered in this country which correspond in their character to the Australian salt bush, showed that although there are many which flourish in saline marshes and similar localities, there is none that corresponds in its habits and character with the Australian plant.

INSPECTOR TODD, of the East Indian Railway Police, has succeeded in capturing the defaulting parcels clerk of the Howrah station and his brother, who recently robbed the railway of a parcel contained Rs. 14,000 in specie. Under arrangement with his brother, the parcel was delivered to the latter on a forged way-bill. The brother obtained possession of the parcel, both left the railway station in a gharry for Calcutta. They changed conveyances four times before they reached Baranagore near Cossipore, each conveyance being taken roundabout. At Baranagore they engaged a boat to go up the river. Having ascertained beyond doubt that the thieves were travelling up the river, the inspector started in pursuit in a steam-launch hired for the purpose. The thieves had a clear start of forty-eight hours and more, but the launch rapidly overtook them, and before they could escape they were arrested after landing at Santipore. They had not been out many hours, when the inspector and his constables came upon the very boat which had conveyed them to Santipore. The boat was returning to Calcutta, but the manjee was persuaded to go back in tow of the launch and show the inspector the village at which he landed his fares. The thieves were arrested the same evening, and with the exception of a hundred rupees or so, the whole of the stolen property was recovered.

WE record with regret the death of a distinguished Anglo-Indian, in the person of Sir Augustus Rivers Thompson, at the age of sixty-one. Educated at Eton, he entered the Bengal Civil Service in 1850. After a varied experience as collector and magistrate, he filled in succession the offices of Superintendent of Survey, Secretary to the Judicial and Political Departments of the Government of Bengal, and Chief Commissioner of British Burma. From 1878 to 1882 he was a Member of the Council of the Viceroy of India, and occupied the post of Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal from 1882 to 1887, then retiring from the public service, the honour of K.C.S.I. having been conferred upon him two years previously. Three weeks ago he proceeded to Gibraltar for the benefit of his health, but succumbed there to pneumonia.

CO-OPERATIVE SUPPLY STORES abound, and so far consumers should rejoice—whatever private tradesmen may think. The increase in the number of these establishments will serve to keep competition amongst them; but if thereby profits fall off, then we may see the device of a "Trust" applied to form a "ring" of stores, and then the last state of the consumer might be worse than the former. But there is no danger of that yet, or so long as the directors of these institutions can secure as managers vigilant buyers, and the wholesome system of cash payment is maintained. Just now we have to notice the opening of the newest of these "Bon Marchés," in the General Service Co-operative Stores, 365-7, Oxford-street, which event took place last week—in good time to get into full swing by Christmas. The building is admirably suited for the purpose, having been constructed in the light and roomy style of a large carriage factory, so that the architect of the Stores had only to add staircases, a lift, and all the appliances suited to a retail establishment on the largest scale. As may be expected, Anglo-Indians have taken a large part in the organisation of the concern, and will give it the benefit of their experience in both hemispheres. Many of the shareholders also belong to that vigorous community, and we dare say others will join. The "General Service" proceeds on the plan of keeping open doors for any and all customers who appreciate ready-money prices; but shareholders are to enjoy certain special privileges, not the least being discounts on their aggregate purchases.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL
REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaar, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, 115, Excefficiency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

THE BROAD ARROW AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. "If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Behsaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 22nd November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 20th November; and from Calcutta to the 19th November.

THE Czarewitch begins his Rajputana tour about January 3rd, visiting the chief places of interest which can readily be reached by rail.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS will inspect the Mian Mir Camp of Exercise about December 10th.

SIR AUCLAND COLVIN left Allahabad on November 15th for Mahmudabad, in the Sitapur district, in connection with the new Colvin school to be opened there. From Mahmudabad His Honour proceeds to Lucknow, where there are functions in connection with the Canning College and the Jubilee High School, thence making his way to the camp at Agra. When this breaks up Sir Auckland goes on tour in the Agra division, and will remain in camp until about the middle of January, when he comes to Allahabad to attend and address the convocation of the Allahabad University. This over, he again goes into camp for a fortnight, returning to Allahabad for the months of February and March, when the discussion of the Allahabad Water Bill will be taken up by the Local Legislative Council.

SIR ROMESH CHUNDER MITTER AND THE NAWAB ASSNULLA, of Dacca, have been appointed Additional Members of the Legislative Council of India, vice Syed Amir Hossein and Raja Durga Churn Laha.

It is whispered in both European as well as Native circles at Hyderabad that Sir Dennis FitzPatrick will probably succeed to the vacancy in the Viceregal Council that will be caused by the retirement in April of Sir Andrew Scoble, Q.C., the Legal Member of the Supreme Council.

COLONEL PEACOCK, on return from leave, has arrived at Jeypore, preparatory to taking over charge from Colonel Prideaux.

AMONG the passengers by Monday's mail steamer were Lady Lansdowne, Sir Francis and Lady Boileau, Mr. W. S. Caine, M.P., and Mr. Schwann, M.P., who was erroneously stated to have arrived last week.

DURING the Lieutenant-Governor's stay at Delhi the question of the possible pollution of the Jumna, which has been raised in connection with the proposed sanitation scheme there, as that of the Ganges has been raised at Benares, will be considered and probably decided, the opinions of experts having been already collected.

THE Government of India, having wired their sanction to the expenditure of five lakhs of rupees in connection with the East Coast Railway, Colonel Walker, Chief Engineer, has been directed to submit immediately the necessary establishment rules.

It has been practically settled that the additional fifth Judge of the Punjab Chief Court will cease to act at the end of the year.

THE Government of India have disapproved of the proposal to establish a military college for the sons of the Punjab aristocracy in connection with or separate from the Aitchison Chief's College. The proposal is, therefore, abandoned.

EFFORTS were made to have a leading Punjabi selected as President of the next Congress, but they were futile. Raja Rajendra Lal Mitra of Calcutta will probably preside, though from latest accounts we gather that no final nomination has been made, as there are hopes that Mr. Caine or some other globetrotter may be persuaded to preside.

THE Punjab University was to confer the degree Doctor of Oriental Learning on Colonel Holroyd at the Convocation on Nov. 29.

THE Bombay Corporation has sanctioned the expenditure of three lakhs of rupees for a lift, furniture, and appliances, and Rs. 47,000 for fire-extinguishing appliances in the new Municipal buildings.

THE Railway (P.W.D.) Accounts Committee commences its proceedings at Lahore immediately by the drawing up of a programme of procedure. After this has been settled evidence will be taken. The Committee is likely to remain in Lahore for about six weeks.

MR. CROUDACE, Executive Engineer, has arrived at Jeypore to undertake the survey for a railway line from the neighbourhood of that town southwards to the Chumbul river. The Jeypore Durbar has expressed itself anxious for this line to be built, and is prepared to undertake it. The Government of India favour the project if the broad gauge be adopted—a necessary condition—as the line may ultimately be linked with the Indian Midland system.

H.E. THE VICEROY on Nov. 14th at Jeypore opened the Lansdowne Hospital, which is intended for the Jeypore Transport Corps. On the following evening his Excellency was entertained by the Maharajah at a State banquet, and on Sunday afternoon left Jeypore for Delhi, where he arrived next morning, and was received by Sir Frederick Roberts, Sir James Lyall, and Sir John Hudson, and the principal military and civil inhabitants of the place.

THE MARCHIONESS OF LANSDOWNE, who arrived per the s.s. Sutlej from England, joined his Excellency at Delhi on Nov. 19th.

THE rumour is circulated in Calcutta that Lord Lansdowne will not visit Simla next year, but will probably spend the summer months in some other hill station in India, possibly Ootacamund. The fever contracted at Simla by the Viceroy, and the dislike which Lady Lansdowne has conceived for the place, are reported to have gone far in inducing his Excellency, according to this rumour, to try Ooty next season.

ON Saturday (Nov. 15th) H.E. Lord Harris laid the foundation-stone of the Anjuman-i-Islam at Ahmedabad, and presented the Hope medals to the pupils of the Female and Male Training Colleges, and then attended an al fresco entertainment in the Kankaria Talao. He left Ahmedabad on Monday, and stopped at Sanand and Viramgaum on his way to Rajkote. At the latter place he was received by H.H. the Thakore Saheb of Morvi, who presented him with an address. On Wednesday his Excellency held a durbars, which was largely attended by the Kattiawar princes and chiefs, and on Thursday he invested the Nawab of Junagadh with the insignia of the K.G.C.I.E. In the afternoon he attended the Rajkote Horse Show, and in the evening a banquet was given in his honour by the Nawab of Junagadh.

MESSRS. C. E. SCHWANN, M.P., and W. S. CAINE, arrived in Bombay by the P. and O. s.s. Sutlej on Monday, Nov. 17th. Mr. Caine received an enthusiastic welcome from the Indian Temperance Advocates the same evening. On Tuesday he was welcomed by the Bombay Presidency Association at their rooms, and then left on a tour through India.

ON Monday, Nov. 17th, H.E. Lord Connemara, the Governor of Madras, drove in the last spike into the first section of the Guntakul-Villapurdu Railway at Tirumalee.

THE Black Mountain tribes are reported to have relapsed into their normal condition since the return of our troops to Abbottabad.

THE Nawab of Bahawalpur has set aside one hundred and fifty sowars for an Imperial Service Corps.

THE Zhob Valley Railway Survey will consist of forty-two officers, sixty subordinates, and nearly five hundred artisans and menials.

THE inaugural meeting of the third Bharat Maha Mandal or Hindu Religious Conference was held in Delhi on Saturday, Nov. 15th. Resolutions were past protesting against Government interference in such religious matters as raising the age of consent.

ON Sunday, November 16th, Mr. H. G. Scrivener, the chief officer of the Ridge Lightship off Saugor, shot himself with a pistol in a refreshment room in Calcutta after drinking heavily for some days. He had medals for the Zulu War and other South African Expeditions.

A MEETING of the Hindoos of Madras, at which Sir Madhava Rawa attended, was held on Sunday, Nov. 16th, to protest against the proposal to raise the protected age.

ON Tuesday, Nov. 18th, the last rail was laid on the Delhi-Umballa section of the Delhi-Kalka Railway.

EARLY on Monday morning, Nov. 17th, four dacoits were seen armed with guns by the police of Talaboung, a village near Odikan Town, not far from Rangoon. The police fired, killing the leader and badly wounding another. Two hours later the other two were arrested, and brought into Rangoon.

THERE appears to be no truth in the statement that General Vasco de Guedes has been recalled from the Governor-Generalship of Goa.

TELEGRAPHIC instructions have been received in Rangoon for the immediate disbandment of the 32nd Madras Infantry as a preparatory step to the formation of a 4th Burma Regiment which will be composed of the present Myingyan Police Battalion.

THE verdict of the Coroner's jury in the Shannon child-death case was that the infant died of natural causes—to wit, infantile diarrhoea.

MAJOR-GENERAL GILLESPIE, C.B., who has held the command at Mhow since March, 1886, died on Monday night, Nov. 17th.

THE withdrawal of the company of British Infantry now located in the old fort at Mooltan, and its location in cantonments, has been sanctioned.

MR. B. DUCKOFF GORDON, B.A., has been appointed as the mathematical lecturer of the Muir Central College at Allahabad.

HIS HIGHNESS THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSORE, accompanied by her Highness the Maharani, will visit Bangalore at an early date for a change.

THE Irrawaddy Flotilla Company has purchased the Madiah, a fine steam-launch belonging to the insolvent estate of Mong Bok, for Rs. 32,500.

WE learn from Bahawalpore that the Nawab has presented Sheikh Nasir-ud-din, Khan Bahadur, with a watch, valued at Rs. 1,100, for good and faithful service rendered.

IN Bangalore they are already having a foretaste of the Christmas weather. The mornings, evenings, and nights are chill, and the air during the day is crisp.

ON Nov. 4th the Lord Bishop of Rangoon consecrated that portion of the new Civil Cemetery in A. Road, Mandalay, which is allotted to the Church of England.

A GANG of coolies was employed on the Darjeeling Railway at the slips, when a heavy roller got the upper hand and passed over two of the men, killing them on the spot.

BABOO RAM CHUNDER CHATTERJEE has left Calcutta for Delhi, where he intends to make a balloon ascent and a parachute drop during the stay in that city of H.E. the Viceroy.

THE daughter of the late pleader Gopalachariar, a lady who has been educated in the Maharani's Girls' School, has been selected to teach the princess at the Mysore royal family.

NOTES.

It is satisfactory to learn that those troublesome people, the Lushais, are not likely to give trouble on our frontier for some time, as all their chiefs are in British hands as prisoners. There is little honour or glory to be won in wretched little frontier wars, but it would appear that great discontent takes place when medals and rewards are not showered upon the troops engaged. The Calcutta Englishman complains that the "Lushai honours might well have been higher and more numerous!"

It is not complimentary to the British military character that there should be this crave for medals and crosses for every little war or petty skirmish. Tommy Atkins of the narrow chest, who has been through an Egyptian fight or two, and has since had a "frontier brush" in India, will hardly have room on his breast for further decorations. One medal was given, after many years, for Waterloo. How many have been given for Egypt and India of late?

THE policy of improving the material of the Indian Army by the virtual breaking up of a certain number of regiments now recruited from the less valuable classes, in a military sense, and their reconstitution on a new basis, will be applied, of course, to the forces of all three presidencies. In the Bengal Army, as we have seen, writes the Pioneer, four regiments have in this way come under reduction. In Madras, when the remaining Burma battalion is created, a similar number of transformations will have been effected. The turn of the Bombay Army is yet to come. It is generally understood that the scheme contemplates that two infantry and one cavalry regiment shall be reconstituted and permanently localised in Beluchistan on a different footing from the present Beluch corps, inasmuch as they will be recruited entirely from the people of the frontier, which the so-called Beluch regiments by no means are, and will be always stationed within the limits of the Agency, instead of being brought down to serve in Sind, which the frontier tribesmen detests. One other change hangs over the Bombay Army in the shape of the long-talked-of conversion of the Marine Battalion into a Marine Artillery corps to man the coast and harbour defences. But though the complement of gunners is sorely required this proposed means of supplying them seems to have met with opposition somewhere, for the scheme is so long in coming to effect that it would appear to have been altogether suspended.

THE Government of India has placed the McIver line of steamers on the same footing in respect to officers travelling as the P. and O., Messageries Imperiales, British India Steam Navigation, and other companies. In connection with this matter we give the latest order of the Government on the subject, so that officers may know what they may expect:—"An officer returning to India from furlough or leave by a Government contract mail steamer, or a vessel placed on the same footing and timed to arrive within his furlough or leave, will be entitled to an extension of his furlough or leave under the terms and conditions of the leave regulations to which he is subject should he overstay the same by reason of the vessel being delayed; but the grant of such an extension will in no way give him a claim to any advantage in respect to pay, service, &c., not admissible under the leave regulations under which he may be serving. On the other hand, an officer returning to India by any other vessel will, if he exceeds his furlough or leave, be treated as absent without leave for the excess period, and be subjected to the loss of pay, appointment, and service for pension and promotion."

Not a bit too soon! "Compact, curt, and condensed"—that is the new order of the Government of India with regard to official papers and reports. With one or two exceptions, these official documents are, probably, the dullest in the world. The heart sinks before their appalling masses of useless figures and elaborate tabular demonstrations of nothing in particular. The order has certainly come none too soon, so far as the extraordinary bulk of these returns is concerned, but in one respect it is, perhaps, likely to do more harm than good. The reports need not only to be made more compact, but more interesting. Since they are presumably printed for the information of the public as well as for that of the official world, it is surely not unreasonable to ask that they should be made readable and intelligible. This is what a Bombay contemporary says now. The Bengal Press had, however, made the same complaint twenty years ago.

THE details of the exploring parties to be sent to the eastern frontier of Upper Burma are not yet settled, but are roughly as follows:—One party is to explore the frontier region, and the tribes lying between the State of Kaingtung on the south and the river Shweli on the north. The other will work in a similar way from the neighbourhood of the Shweli, and from behind Bhamo through the country northward to some point high up the valley of the Irrawaddy. The first party will be under Lieut. H. Baly, Superintendent, Northern Shan States, who will have with him as Survey Officer Major Hobday, or one of his subordinates, a military officer in command of an escort of about fifty men of the Shan Levy, and Mr. Warry. The Northern party will be under Lieut. L. E. Elliott, Assistant Commissioner of Lashio, who will also have with him a guard under a local military officer, and an Intelligence Officer to map the country. Neither party is expected to start before the beginning of December, and their work is expected to last about three months. No political importance is attached to these expeditions, but they are expected to have useful results among the border tribes.

AN enthusiastic vernacular print in Bengal calls upon its subscribers to send subscriptions to the Irish people to relieve their sufferings from the potato-famine. It would be interesting to know, says the Civil and Military Gazette, if people of one province in India have ever helped those of another when afflicted by a famine. That charity begins at home is a lesson which many people require to be often reminded; and, if we may again bring a case of real and widespread suffering to these ostentatious philanthropists of Bengal, we would point to the Punjab districts of Gujrat and Sialkot, where the people have been dying of fever and weakness at a rate equivalent to 50 per cent. per annum. If anything approaching such distress as this figure represents were in the least likely to occur to any district in Ireland through the much advertised failure of the potato-crop, we might refrain from denouncing the proposed Bengal subscription for Ireland as pure cant and humbug.

THE Calcutta papers are complaining bitterly of the way in which they are being served by the Postal authorities in regard to the English mail. Letters for Bengal were lying at Bombay for sixteen hours before being got off for Calcutta. The consequence was that they reached Calcutta after the departure of the train carrying the homeward mail to Bombay, though there would have been time to get off an answer to a good many of them if the Government had realised the fact that they are doing an unwarrantable wrong to the trading public by not enabling the Post-office to efficiently perform its functions. The marvel is that Calcutta sits so quiescent under what must be a serious nuisance and inconvenience. We (this is from a Bombay paper) in Bombay have no interest in the matter, and do not even appreciate the favour of having the Calcutta mailbags amongst us for half a day longer than they have any business to be here. But if we were treated as cavalierly as the Calcutta people are in this matter we should call out about it.

LORD WENLOCK, the new Governor of Madras, will be entertained on Saturday, the 20th inst., at a banquet at York by his Yorkshire friends, in recognition of his services to the country. The Archbishop of York, the Earl of Londesborough, the Earl of Harewood, the Earl of Feverham, Lord Herries, Viscount Downe, the Hon. H. W. Fitzwilliam, the Lord Mayor of York, the Mayors of Hull and Scarborough and numerous other public men have joined the committee.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 6.

A Changsil telegram to the Calcutta Englishman states that another Lushai chief, Lalrhima, has submitted, and has given up an express rifle, two revolvers, and the field glasses, watch, and aneroid belonging to the late Captain Browne.

It is impossible now for the Lushais to offer any organised resistance, as all the influential chiefs are prisoners.

DEC. 7.

The Madras Mail, the leading paper of Southern India, in a long review of Lord Connemara's administration, says it will be remembered as a bright epoch in the annals of Madras. The presidency has nothing to do with the cause of his resignation, but has cause to be grateful to him for his zeal, kindness, and success.

It seems possible that there may be some complication regarding the acting Governorship, as Mr. Stokes, senior member of the Council, now on leave, will return before Lord Wenlock's arrival. Mr. Garstin is the present Acting-Governor.

A meeting was held in Calcutta yesterday for the purpose of considering the best means of doing honour to the retiring Lieutenant-Governor. The Maharajah of Durbungha presided. The speakers, chiefly Natives, highly eulogised Sir Stuart Bayley's administration. A farewell address was voted, and it was resolved to invite subscriptions towards a permanent memorial.

The local press, in discussing the report of the Factory Commission, generally approves of the moderation of its tone and recommendations, and expresses the opinion that its inquiries conclusively prove that there are radical differences in the conditions of factory labour in England and India, and the impossibility of assimilating the factory laws of the two countries. It seems probable that the millowners will not object to accept such changes as the Commission recommends.

The Leprosy Commission, after a short stay at Hyderabad, will proceed to Madras, and will visit Trichinopoly and other places in that Presidency. The Commission will then divide into two parties—Dr. Rake and Dr. Thompson, and possibly Dr. Buckmaster, going to Rangoon, Mandalay, and Moumein; while Dr. Barclay and Dr. Kanthack, after completing their tour in Madras, will visit the Central Provinces. The members will reassemble at Calcutta on January 25th, and after visiting some of the worst districts in this province will go to Upper India.

It is becoming daily more apparent that the dislike to legislative interference with the marriage laws and the age of consent is not confined to Madras, but is equally strong among the great mass of Hindoos in Bengal. There was some talk of a public meeting in Calcutta, but although no steps in that direction have yet been taken, it is clear that all except a small progressive section, who for the most part have ceased to profess Hindooism, would resent any Government action. The Government has not yet given any indication of its intentions, and it is to be hoped that, if it moves at all, it will do so with the utmost caution.

The Viceroy will arrive at Calcutta on Tuesday.

MADRAS, DEC. 7.

Lord Connemara embarked this afternoon. Although it was announced that his departure was to be private, a large crowd of Europeans and Natives assembled to wish the retiring Governor farewell.

BURMA.

RANGOON, DEC. 5.

The authorities display great reticence about the occurrences in the Bhamo district. The military authorities, however, state that the latest information received thence points to movements of Burmese Chins and Chinese, but they add that these reports are unconfirmed.

General Stewart, who is now in the Chin hills, states that the health of the troops there is good, and the Siyin tribe is perfectly quiet.

Three cold weather exploring columns were timed to leave Bhamo on December 15.

DECEMBER 7.

A severe outbreak of cholera broke out in the 2nd battalion of the 3rd Goorkhas while en route to the Chin Hills. They are now encamped at Guathit, where sixty cases have occurred, including thirty deaths. Many other cases occurred between Rangoon and Guathit.

A grave difference of opinion has arisen between the officer commanding at Haka and the civil authorities. Sir C. Crosthwaite ordered the arrest of certain Chin marauders, and the Assistant Political Officer at Haka wished to invite these offenders into the fort, and then to arrest them. The officer commanding objected that this would be treachery, and proposed holding a big darbar at which the arrests were to be made openly. The Political Officer objected to this course, and Sir C. Crosthwaite supported him. The military officer has been removed from his command owing to this difference of opinion.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

MISCHIEVOUS COMPANIONS.

(Statesman.)

Of all comparisons, perhaps, there are none more misleading than those which, from time to time, are made between the morals and institutions of different nations on the basis of police statistics or the records of the criminal courts. All such comparisons involve a twofold fallacy, viz., that not only is it generally possible to strike an average in the matter of national morality, but that this average is to be arrived at by a consideration of the character of the crimes committed among a people, taken in connection with their frequency relative to its numbers. The comparison, of course, is specially misleading where it is made between a highly homogeneous and highly heterogeneous people. Where the population of a country possess a common ethnic origin, and when education and wealth are equally diffused among them, a fairly good estimate of the character of the whole may, perhaps, be formed from that of a part. When, on the other hand, a nation is a congeries of divers nations, and when great disparities of culture and wealth exist between different strata of the population, it is clearly in the highest degree unjust to take the moral character of a part as a sample of that of the whole. To institute a comparison in respect of moral character between two nations belonging to these opposite types on the basis of criminal records is simply an outrage on common-sense. Nor is this the only source of fallacy. Differences in political institutions, or conditions, and even differences in the physical features of countries, affecting the facility with which crimes can be detected and punished, and many other circumstances, may also prove fertile sources of error. In a country like India where not only are the great Hindoo and Mahomedan sections of the population composed of a multitude of different ethnic elements still imperfectly fused, but interspersed with these are numerous other such elements living as strangers within their gates; and altogether outside them, again, are tribes numbering many millions of lower orders of civilisation, and many of them semi-savages; and where the widest disparity exists, in respect of culture, between the highly educated few and the ignorant many, the attempt to strike a moral average, or base conclusions as to national character on police statistics, can lead to no useful result; and any comparison as to general morality with England based on such data is as irrational as it is likely to be irritating and mischievous. It is an unfortunate result of the discussion regarding the Hindoo marriage system that it has had the effect of encouraging such comparisons. On the one hand we have Conservative Natives triumphantly pointing to the records of the English divorce and police courts as conclusive evidence that English society is rotten to the core; on the other hand we have English journalists and reformers, with just as little reason, collating individual instances of brutality from the criminal administration reports as a convincing proof of the necessity of a reform of the Hindoo marriage law. We desire to say nothing calculated to hinder the work of the reformers who would raise the age for the consummation of marriages among Hindoos; but any condemnation of the existing custom must be based not on isolated acts of violence committed by specially brutal and vicious individuals, and reprobated quite as severely by Hindoo as by English opinion, but on its mischievous results under ordinary conditions. It is with surprise, as well as regret, that we see the Pioneer adding to the flood of recrimination which the question has let loose. Had the writer been content with finding an argument in favour of a reform of the Hindoo marriage laws in the statistics of a certain kind of crime furnished by the Report of the Inspector-General of Police for Bengal, which is the occasion of his remarks, he would merely have shown the same disregard of logic and common sense that a great many other writers on the subject have done. But he must needs add the particularly silly boast that the annals of English crime are happily free from barbarities arising directly from the marriage ceremony—which is merely as much as to say that the opportunity for such barbarities not occurring under the conditions of English marriages, they do not take place. This may furnish the same kind of argument against Hindoo marriage customs that the occasional theft of jewellery furnishes against wearing it; but it is not much to boast of. The writer then goes on to institute a comparison between the character of crime generally in England and in India, and remarks that it is its calculating cold-blooded character which makes the latter so appalling, instancing by way of example a class of crimes which he pronounces entirely peculiar to the East, viz., that in which one crime is done merely for the sake of facilitating another. We should have been inclined to say that at least as large a proportion of crime is of the cold-blooded type in Western as in Eastern countries; while as to the notion that the cases in which one crime is done to facilitate another are peculiar to the East, it is simply unintelligible to us that any one should entertain it. Cases by the score must occur to most of our readers to show that crime of this description is at all events not unknown in England. But, as we have already said, nothing is to be gained by laying stress upon any comparisons of the kind, or seeking to found general conclusions on them.

THE GHOST.

(The Traffic Manager's Story.)

THE station is dark, and the Baboo is sleeping, Awaiting the train, for the hour is late;
The stillness is deep, and a ghostly form creeping,
Comes softly along through the half-open gate.
I see that its body like phosphorus is gleaming,
No footfall is heard, so stealthy its tread,
The sleepers around seem uneasily dreaming,
And low plaintive sobs come as if from the dead.

As it passes along a low distant moaning
Comes forth from the trees which it meets on its way;
As if some poor wretch in the death pangs were groaning,
Or the graves had all yawued to give up their prey.
By the side of a sleeper it then seemed to linger,
And fix fast upon him its Basilisk eyes,
As it points to his heart its long bony finger,
The poor wretch in pain utters half-smothered cries.

The flesh on its face was discoloured and peeling,
Its body I saw looked quite putrefied;
With horror my breath stopped, and faint I was feeling.
My heart as I looked on the ghost almost died.
Oh! was it because with such fright I was flurried?
That out of its mouth sulphur flames seemed to come,
And its body shine out with a dim light and lurid,
Or was it that fear had my senses o'ercome?

The ghost now came forward and fixed its eyes on me,
My heart at once stopped and I felt icy cold,
I knew that the grave would soon close upon me,
That another day I should never behold.
It held out its arms and anxious was seeming
To fold them around me; oh! horrors! but no!
From whence comes that voice that ended my dreaming,
As softly it murmured "Baboo ek to ticcus do."

SIND INDIGNANT.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

When an Anglo-Indian paper describes a high official, with the standing of a Member of Council, as a "pragmatic noodle," we may forthwith admit that there is indignation in the air. We may further allow that, as between the Sind Gazette and Sir Charles Elliott, though the epithets are unparliamentary, the indignation is natural. Sind has been fed too long on hopes deferred; and the heart of its Press is sick within it. A glimmer of new hopes had arisen when it was announced that Sir C. Elliott, late Member for Public Works, was going to visit Karachi. Sanguine spirits whispered that he was the bearer of the long-looked-for "glad tidings." The Chamber of Commerce girded up its loins, prepared its old unanswerable arguments on behalf of a railway for Karachi to the East, and determined that its interview with the wandering star from Simla should, if possible, be decisive and memorable. Well, Sir Charles Elliott arrived; and he appears to have imitated to some extent the nervous evasiveness of Lord Reay, when the latter found himself in ill-used Sind. It was then an amusing, though a lamentable sight, to note how his Excellency appeared to shrink from each new introduction, after finding that every man, official and non-official, had one object in approaching him, to press in this or that matter the crying needs of Sind, to which in far Bombay his Excellency had been comfortably deaf. Lord Reay's visit to Sind was not a happy one; but he managed to get away without definitely promising anything. Sir Charles Elliot has done the same; and, to avoid the awkwardness of saying "No" to anxious claimants, he had the happy thought of refusing to be interviewed. He did not, says the Sind Gazette, "seem to want to have any official interviews with the Chamber of Commerce." Those who expected "glad tidings" were, therefore, disappointed; but not so our contemporary, who had expected nothing, because "men do not gather figs from thistles, nor look for deeds of high emprise from pragmatic noodles." All that Sir C. Elliott appears to have committed himself to, in private conversation—"irresponsible chatter," to quote again from the Karachi paper—was approval of the idea of a light surface line to be laid as a feeder to N.W.R. from the Nara Valley to Hyderabad. To the hunger of Karachi for a direct railway to the commercial centre of Northern India, this proposal is about as satisfying as the cheese which the "Marchioness" used to obtain by rubbing her bread upon the door of the storecup-board. As we have said before, although the epithets employed by the Karachi paper are unparliamentary, the indignation which prompts them is natural.

RESIGNATION OF LORD CONNEMARA.

(Madras Mail.)

It will come as a great surprise to all our readers to learn that Lord Connemara has expressed to the Secretary of State his wish to be relieved of his office, and that Lord Cross has now informed his Excellency that Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to accept his resignation. It is probable, therefore, that his Excellency will leave India in March, by which time he will have held office for four years and four months. His Excellency has travelled about so much, and mixed in so cordial a manner with all classes of people, that the news that he will not remain in office until next November, when the usual gubernatorial quinquennium would terminate, will be received with an universal feeling of regret. For Lord Connemara has been not only the most popular, but the most fortunate Governor that the Presidency of Madras can remember to have had for many a year. He arrived in Southern India at the beginning of an epoch of favourable seasons and fruitful fields, which has been maintained more or less up to date. He has been associated with officers of great experience and high credit, who have not only loyally aided him in his indefatigable exertions to promote the well-being of all classes, but have also kept him well out of the way of pitfalls. He has not spared himself, but at much risk to his health has peregrinated the country, and acquired at first hand an encyclopædic knowledge of its physical advantages and drawbacks, its people, and its official personnel. He has been thus prompted to push on a great variety of useful public works, the latest and largest of which—the East Coast Railway—will be the most notable monument of his reign. Addresses of welcome have been rained upon him, and the kindly wishes for his health and happiness which they have invariably expressed, have not been of a stereotyped or conventional type. He has been shown the honour due to his official and personal rank; but it has always been felt that "The rank is but the guinea stamp

The man's the gold for a' that."

It is the world's experience that good men pass away all too soon; and it is India's experience that Governors who have by patient continuance in well doing much commended themselves to the governed, resign at the very time when they seem to have thoroughly adapted themselves to their duties. A period of five years is far too long a strain on the patience of a Presidency that has the misfortune of being ruled by a conspicuous failure, but it is too short a time to satisfy public wishes when the ruler is a persona grata who is on all sides regarded as the right man in the right place.

Lord Connemara has never thoroughly recovered from the fever which he contracted in July last year, when he hastened from Ootacamund to Ganjam to see what could be done to mitigate the alarming consequences of drought. The subsequent death of Dr. MacNally, the talented medical officer who accompanied him, illustrated only too sadly the gravity of the risk that His Excellency ran in obedience to what he felt to be public duty. His arrival was synchronous with the fall of rain in Ganjam, and famine was averted, but when the Governor returned to Madras it was seen that he had been through no ordinary toil and anxiety. He reached Ootacamund, and his appearance caused medical men there to say that he was sickening for a serious illness. But he was soon again with the Ootacamund Hunt riding with all the zest and intrepidity of his race; and he seemed to recover his former activity. But at short intervals fever has laid him low, and reminded him that he must be on his guard against exposure to the sun, to miasma, and to physical fatigue. He completed his sixty-third year last June; and he bears his years well. But though Father Time deals tenderly with his favourites, he puts his indelible mark on them sooner or later, and warns them in sundry and divers ways that sexagenarians must "tak' it aisy, or tak' it as aisy as they can." According to Indian official estimation a public functionary—provided always he is not one of the "highest rank"—is past work when he has scored fifty-five years; so a Governor who has exceeded that age by eight years must be regarded as relatively old, let him be never so hearty to all outward appearance, and never so sympathetic in all his ways and works. Yet that relatively old man in India—the happy hunting ground of young men—finds on his return to the sunny side of Pall Mall, and the gilded comforts of the House of Lords, that he takes rank as a man of middle age who may reasonably hope to live many days.

The recent selection of Lord Lansdowne for the Viceroyalty of India, and of Lord Harris for the Governorship of Bombay seem to show that Lord Salisbury inclines to the opinion that the ruler of young men should himself be young; and peradventure Lord Connemara's successor will prove to be a peer on the bright side of forty. No one can say what awaits the present Ministry in England. Mr. Gladstone, who will enter his eighty-second year next month, indulged in a speech at the Carlisle Railway station on Thursday, and taunted Lord Salisbury with delaying the dissolution of Parliament. The present Parliament was elected in July, 1886, and Mr. Gladstone is an "old man in a hurry" to have another chance of recovering office. It is whispered at Conservative, it is muttered at Liberal, it is proclaimed at Radical Clubs in London that Lord Salisbury has resolved to make an early appeal to the country; and it is generally supposed that the result of such a course of action would, to say the least, be problematical. The average elector loves to assist in bringing about a change of Ministers; and no matter what good work may be credited to the present Cabinet, the "many headed" may as likely as not turn it out when the opportunity offers. If then, Lord Connemara had not asked to be relieved at this date, the selection of his successor in Madras might have devolved on Mr. Gladstone, in which case it is quite possible that the appointment would have been conferred on Mr. Bradlaugh, who must be provided for when the first Radical Ministry of the United Kingdom is formed. But as it is, the selection will now be made by Lord Salisbury, and Madras may rest assured that the Conservative or Liberal Unionist politician who is appointed will be a man well qualified to carry on the good work that Lord Connemara is about to resign. His Excellency will return home with enlarged experience, and increased reputation, and Madras should hear of him again. He has treated Madras well, and Madras has done her best to treat him well, so a very friendly feeling has been established that will not soon pass away.

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot
And never brought to min'
Should auld acquaintance be forgot
And days o' auld lang syne?"

Certainly not, and when the month of March arrives, the Presidency of Madras will be well disposed to "tak' a cup o' kindness yet for auld lang syne!"

THE CHEAP PASSAGE QUESTION.

(Pioneer.)

As far as the Anglo-Indian Cheap Passage Association goes, that scheme may not actually be dead, but it is certainly in a state of suspended animation. We, among others, never believed that the amount of combination could be secured among a scattered community to make the plan a success, or that people would have sufficient faith in an experiment to care to bind themselves down several years in advance to any particular method of travelling. Moreover, the correspondence brought very usefully to light the facilities that already exist for cheap passages to persons who are bent on economy. We do not refer to the second class P. and O., concerning which strongly conflicting evidence was brought forward—proving, as it would seem, that the accommodation and attention afforded to second-class passengers are very different on different steamers of that Company. But there was abundant testimony to show that there are passages to be secured by other lines which are both cheap and good if the traveller is not pressed for time, and a few days longer on the journey are not an urgent consideration. Among all the letters which appeared giving the personal experiences of passengers we do not remember one that expressed anything but satisfaction with the McIver line—a name that was until recently almost unknown, but which, it appeared, Messrs. Watson and Co. had been steadily recommending to applicants. The elder MacIver was the founder of the Cunard Line, and for many years the firm had a successful career with Atlantic steamers, but it is only recently they have turned their attention to the East. At present they have five ships running between Plymouth and Bombay; but Messrs. Harland and Wolff, the builders of some of the finest Inman steamers, are about to launch for them two more vessels of 7,000 tons each, which will enable them to run fortnightly both ways. The charge of the MacIver (only Rs. 350 for the journey) is moderate enough for anyone; and yet even at that fee there is competition. Leyland and Bithy's well-known Mediterranean steamers are now beginning frequently to be seen in Bombay, and recently the Yorkshire and Lancashire, two magnificent ships the size of the Peninsular, took passengers from Marseilles to Bombay in fifteen days for Rs. 300. The Anglo-Indian community may therefore afford to wait, confident that time will do its work in the end, and bring down the artificially high rates, far more effectually than they can do it for themselves by any self-sacrificing combination.

MILITARY LABOUR.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS has given another proof of the practical interest which he takes in the welfare of the British soldier. A circular memorandum has been issued to all commanding officers of cavalry, infantry and artillery on the subject of allowing soldiers to learn or practise trades while with the colours. The memorandum says:—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, recognising the immense advantage it would be to a soldier to learn or practise, during his service in the army, some trade which would be of use to him on his return to civil life, and at the same time to employ his leisure hours in healthy and useful work, desires that the opportunity of doing so may be afforded to every soldier as far as possible, and in this view directs commanding officers to be good enough to have lists kept up in each troop, battery or company, as the case may be, of men who are desirous of learning a trade, and that arrangements may be made for each man, as far as practicable, to be instructed in the trade he is desirous of learning. Commanding officers are further enjoined to encourage men to take up useful work in their leisure hours. Readers of our articles on this subject have no need to be told how entirely we sympathise with this new measure. We have more than once expressed the hope that measures might be taken for connecting the training of soldiers to earn money by practising trades with their retention in the army. We are, therefore, glad to see that the commander-in-chief has also ordered that men selected for a course of training on boot-making must have at least three years' army service, and must declare their willingness to re-engage before being sent to join the class. They will be required to extend their service to 12 years with the colours.

We hope, however, that the natural corollary to this dual encouragement of industry and long service in the army will not be lost sight of. A soldier remains a certain number of years with the colours in India; and the practical utility of practising a trade, merely to fill up his leisure hours and to prepare for the day of his severance from the army, is not likely to be so potent an inducement to him as some immediate return for his labour would be. The Indian climate appeals to men's lazy instincts; and, since man is above all things a procrastinating animal, it is more than likely that the majority of soldiers, even if they recognise the desirability of learning or practising a trade for their support in civil life after leaving the army, will be inclined to put it off to the last moment. Thus there will be a rush only during the last period of service to the workshops for tuition. If the measure, now inaugurated, were allowed to work by itself for any period long enough to draw conclusions from, we expect it would be found that the bulk of the men practising or learning trades would be those whose time had nearly expired. We are far from denying the utility of even this hasty preparation for entrance into civil life; but incomparably better would be any more complete system which should persuade the men throughout their service to work at useful trades, thus acquiring or improving technical skill of a higher order than the smattering which is the most that many would acquire otherwise.

The object would be attained, we think, by a well-organised arrangement of demand and supply of such articles as could be produced by soldiers' labour. Of course, under some circumstances, a skilful workman can find a market of a sort for all that he can produce in the regiment. But a local and private system of production and consumption only encourages the individual here and there. What is wanted is a ready wholesale market for the products of soldiers' labour. Innumerable articles could be enumerated, for the fitting or repairs of barracks, offices, and messes, and among the paraphernalia of military equipment, which could be produced by the men themselves. The circular issued by the Commander-in-Chief already provides for the maintenance of a regimental register in which the names of men anxious to learn or practise a trade shall be entered. This register might be extended by separate columns for those soldiers practising each trade mentioned, who might be up to the standard (1) of rough but durable work; and (2) of finished workmanship. As the men progressed they could be promoted from column 1 to 2. By collating these regimental registers at headquarters the authorities would always be aware of the amount and quality of military labour available. For the employment of this labour lists should also be drawn up of articles which could be supplied, up to army contract standard, by voluntary military labour. The lists could be compiled from samples supplied from time to time by the regimental workshops, or from the exhibits at Soldiers' Exhibitions. The samples, after being passed as up to standard, could be stored at convenient places for reference and comparison with work subsequently turned out to order. Then the authorities would be in possession of lists, on the one hand, of men capable and willing to execute Government work, and, on the other, of articles whose manufacture could be entrusted to them. Then, when fresh supplies were required for store, the orders could be distributed to different regiments according to the number of qualified workmen on their registers. Of course, to secure promptitude and regularity in the execution of contracts, the men would be given to understand that the enrolment of their names upon the registers as qualified candidates for employment at Government rates laid each of them under an obligation to execute his share of the work, under certain specified conditions as to time, when an order upon the regiment was received. If the foregoing suggestions could be put into practice and worked upon a proper commercial basis, the men would not only be trained to earn a livelihood in civil employ afterwards, but would, while in the ranks, be able to turn most of their spare time to lucrative account, and would therefore be much more willing to remain there.

A great deal could, of course, be done regimentally also. Having ascertained what technical skill is available in the regiment, and what special articles of utility or luxury the men were qualified to produce for sale, advertisements, either in the paper or by other means, might be employed to bring in orders from the public. All kinds of industries, from training dogs or stuffing birds, making or mending boots, carving sticks and pipes, all kinds of carpentry and metal work, making of nets and artificial flies for fishing, curing heads and skins, copying, desigding, toy-making, carving chessmen, leather work, &c., could be enumerated, as sources of pecuniary profit to the soldier and of convenience to the public, which often finds itself unable to obtain in India the thousand and one things that are purchased and used as matters of course at home. Of course, on one side, the Scylla of cheap-bazaar competition would have to be avoided, and on the other stands the Charybdis of private commercial enterprise, which ought not to be handicapped by State-aided rivalry. Still a straight course could be judiciously steered between these difficulties, and still leave a margin of clear profit on either side to all concerned. Indeed, if some one with a talent for organisation would only take the thing in hand, a co-operative scheme might be worked out by which, without any assistance from Government, every man in the army who possessed any industry and mechanical or artistic skill, could be enabled to dispose of as much work as he could produce at fair market rates. With an assured source of additional income in the ranks, the great question of how to popularise continued military service in India would advance a long step towards solution.

THE MYSORE ASSEMBLY

(Bombay Gazette.)

The session of the Mysore Representative Assembly this year derived special interest from the announcement of certain changes in the constitution of the Assembly. The Assembly has now been in existence for nine years, and from the gradual expansion which has been given to it there can be little doubt that it has proved a help rather than a hindrance to the Maharajah and his administration. The Mysore Government drafted a set of rules of election, which in view of the still unsettled question of the constitution of the Indian Legislative Councils, are of some interest and importance. The Maharajah's advisers see numerous practical difficulties in the way of theoretical perfection, and they are wisely content to work with the best mechanism that is available. As we pointed out the other day, the Mysore Assembly is not meant to be a Legislative body, and analogies and contrasts with Indian Legislative Councils, actual or projected, must be drawn with care or they may mislead. The Dewan only speaks of it as a body which would efficiently represent all interests in the country, and whose "suggestions and observations"—not whose votes—would command the consideration and respect which are due to the opinions of a responsible body of formally elected representatives of the people.

With legislation the Assembly has nothing to do, but the Dewan, in referring to certain measures which it is proposed to enact, promises that when they are in a sufficiently advanced stage they shall be published in the Government Gazette, with a view to inviting public opinion on them. Provision is made, however, for enabling the deputies to exercise an indirect influence upon legislation and administration. The members for each taluka and the boards and associations who are empowered to elect deputies are each in their taluka or town to agree as representatives on matters which they wish to bring forward in the Assembly and to send in statements on the subject to the district head-quarters, where all the memoranda will be compiled for submission to Government. It is obvious that this will give full opportunity for the discussion of local grievances, and for the formulation of an articulate public opinion in the districts. The Mysore Government still retain to themselves the functions of making laws; but they are making ample provision for ascertaining what popular grievances exist. It is a modest scheme, despite names and phrases connected with it which may possibly raise large expectations where analogies are loosely drawn. That the Mysore Government mean to make full use of it there is no doubt, for hitherto they have been careful to consult the Assembly in most matters of public concern, and the working of the institution on its new basis will be watched with considerable interest.

BENGAL.

(Nov. 19.)

THE Statesman publishes an account of a singular occurrence which took place at Jamalpore. Mr. Palit, barrister-at-law, and a local pleader were engaged in a case, when from words they came to blows. Mr. Palit was fined Rs. 500 for contempt of Court, and the pleader Rs. 25.

THERE has been a brisk recovery in gold companies' shares in Calcutta, the closing quotations on Thursday being as follows:—Dumra, Re. 1-1; Sonapet, Re. 1-5; Western Patkoom, As. 10; Pat Pat, As. 12; Dhadka, Re. 1-5; Bengal Gold and Silver, As. 9; Western Bengal Prospecting Company, nominal; Sonakhan, As. 10; Eastern Ranchi, As. 12; and Lohardugga, Re. 1-2.

It is gratifying to see that whatever may be the case in other parts of India, observes a contemporary, there is in Calcutta no lack of vitality among the volunteers. From the reports published in the local newspaper it seems that at the first parade of the season last week 415 adults of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles turned out to welcome their colonel on his return from England, and two days later the Cadet Battalion mustered 352 on parade—leaving a large number of recruits at the school. This speaks well for the prospects of the season just commenced.

THE National Mahomedan Association has resolved to present a farewell address to the retiring Lieutenant-Governor, to invite the branch associations in Bengal and Behar to co-operate with the movement and to send delegates to join the deputation to be formed for presentation of the address. The Association will willingly join and co-operate with any public movement for the establishment of a permanent memorial in honour of the retiring Lieutenant-Governor, and will present an address of welcome to Sir Charles Elliot, the Lieutenant-Governor elect.

NOTWITHSTANDING the increased admiration that is being felt for the income-tax, the Collector in Calcutta writes somewhat dolefully:—"With unadjusted books to deal with, and in the lower class cases very often without books at all, we are expected to revise the Assessor's figures, and if we are at all soft-hearted or lenient, the tendency naturally is for objections to be presented in large numbers. Very many of the objections which are lodged turn out to be groundless, and in many cases have obviously been presented either to gain time or on the chance of getting some reduction."

MADRAS.

(Nov. 20.)

DISAPPOINTED youths in Mysore betake themselves to a pilgrimage, it appears. Five Native students of Mysore who have failed in the late matriculation examination, the Madras Times says, have resolved to go to Benares and return no more!

IN the outlying districts of the Mysore Province illicit distillation of arrack seems to be the rule. The Assistant Commissioner of Excise, in a very recent visit to the Shimoga district and the neighbourhood, unearthed over thirty private stills!

ABOUT one square mile of land in the village of Nennapara, nearly five miles from the Guduvancheri Railway Station, has been selected for the erection of a sanitary camp for British troops located at Madras, St. Thomas' Mount, Pallaveram, and Poonamallee.

MR. JUSTICE PARKER, of the High Court of Madras, having returned from leave, will relieve Mr. Justice Weir, who will revert to the judgeship of Madura, after having proved on the High Court bench, observes the local Mail, the excellence of his training both as Registrar for many years of that Court and as a District Judge.

As a Government reserve of salt is urgently required to control prices in Madras and the adjoining districts, it is proposed to open a large factory to the south of Covelong for the manufacture of salt on behalf of Government. When the excise system was introduced, the local Mail believes that specific promises were made by Government that it would never interfere with the rights of excise licenses; but circumstances have altered since then, and from a public, if not from a legal, point of view, Government is justified in interfering, now that "rings" and combinations among salt merchants and manufacturers have so enhanced the prices. Our contemporary cannot understand who no cry has yet been raised by the public to return to the old monopoly system, when the price per maund was uniformly three annas, and not anything ranging from four annas to several rupees as now.

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 22.)

MR. GROVES, from Bombay, relieves Mr. Ray as Deputy Accountant-General, Punjab.

THE Hon. Mr. John G. Moore, C.S., lately an Executive Member of H.E. the Governor's Council, went home by Saturday's mail steamer on privilege leave for three months.

SURGEON R. J. BAKER, M.A., M.D., has been allowed special leave on urgent private affairs for six months from such date after his relief by Surgeon-Major J. Arnott, M.D., as he may avail himself thereof.

THE Letters Patent of Baronetcy were on Thursday last delivered to Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, Bart., at Petit Hall, Malabar Hill, by Mr. Meherwanjee Nusserwanjee Wadia, Assistant Secretary to Government in the Judicial and Legislative Departments, who was deputed by Government for the purpose.

THE High Court reopened on Monday after the October vacation. The Hon. Sir Charles Sargent, Chief Justice, and the Hon. Mr. Justice Candy presided in the first division; court of the Appellate side, the Hon. Mr. Justice Birdwood and the Hon. Mr. Justice Parsons presiding in the second division court on the same side. The Hon. Justices Bayley, Farran, and Telang presided in the first, second, and third division courts, respectively, of the Original side of the High Court.

THE Municipal Corporation, after a long debate on Friday, sanctioned Rs. 3,02,444 for fire service, hydraulic lift, furniture, lighting, &c., for the new Municipal offices. As remarked by the Municipal Commissioner, the speeches of Dr. Blaney and Mr. D. E. Wacha were too convincing to allow of the fire service and electric lighting being left out from the estimates submitted by Mr. Stevens, the architect. Several councillors were against providing a fire service to the new offices, on the ground of economy; but after the speeches made in its favour by Messrs. Kirkham, Cotton, Wacha, and Viegas a sum of Rs. 47,874 for that purpose was sanctioned by a large majority.

ON Monday morning H.E. Lady Lansdowne, accompanied by Mrs. E. S. Hope, arrived in Bombay from Europe by the P. and O. mail steamer. On Saturday morning, Major Creagh, A.D.C. to H.E. Lord Lansdowne, arrived here to meet her ladyship on landing. As soon as the mail steamer had dropped anchor, Captain Hext, R.N., C.I.E., the Director of Indian Marine, and Major Creagh proceeded in a Government steam-launch, and escorted her ladyship to the bunder. During her sojourn in Bombay, Lady Lansdowne was the guest of Captain Hext. At 9.30 p.m. on Monday, Lady Lansdowne, accompanied by Mrs. E. S. Hope, and attended by Major Creagh, left Victoria Terminus for Delhi, by the special train which carried passengers for the North-West Provinces, via the Indian Midland Railway. Captain Hext, R.N., C.I.E., was present at the station to see her ladyship off. Mr. W. H. Middleton, District Traffic Superintendent, and Mr. E. W. Kiely, the Passenger Superintendent, were present at the station to supervise the arrangements for the departure of her ladyship, while Mr. Bedford, Traffic Inspector, went with the train as far as Egutpoora. Lady Lansdowne and her party, who travelled in the Viceroy's saloon, which was specially sent down to Bombay to carry her Excellency, reached Delhi on Wednesday evening, where she joined H.E. Lord Lansdowne.

THE P. and O. mail steamer Sutlej arrived in Bombay harbour at 7 o'clock on Monday morning, bringing on board a large number of passengers, amongst whom were the members of the Leprosy Commission, consisting of Dr. B. N. Rake, M.D., Government Medical Officer and Medical Superintendent of the Trinidad Leper Asylum; Dr. A. A. Kanthank, M.B., B.S.C. F.R.C.S., late Midwifery Assistant, St. Bartholomew's Hospital London; and Dr. G. A. Buckmaster, M.D., formerly Radcliffe Fellow, Magdalen College, Oxford.

AMONGST the passengers who arrived here by the overland mail steamer on Monday were Mr. W. S. Caine, M.P., Mr. C. E. Schwann, M.P., and Mrs. Schwann, Colonel T. Walker, Superintendent, Gun Carriage Factory, Colaba; the Hon. Mr. Justice Parker of the Madras High Court, and Sir Francis and Lady Boileau.

THE ARREST OF CAPTAIN NORMAN.

Captain Charles Norman, alias Charles Nelson, was on Monday morning, Nov. 17th, placed before Mr. Richardson, at the Esplanade Police Court, by Inspector George Briscoe, on a charge of cheating Messrs. Hurjeemul and Co., and Bhicajee and Co., jewellers, of the Esplanade-road and Apollo Bunder, of goods of the collective value of about Rs. 2,200. The Captain, it will be remembered, obtained these goods from the establishment of the firm while he was staying in Bombay on the 6th of September, and on the afternoon of the same day, under the name of Nelson, engaged a passage in the s.s. Etolia for Europe. On the 8th of September Mr. Walker applied for warrants at the Police-court on a double charge of cheating, which were then granted by Mr. Shewshunker Govindram on the sworn information of the complainants, and subsequently forwarded to the authorities at Suez, where the s.s. Etolia was boarded by the British Consular authorities and the prisoner arrested. Information to this effect was then transmitted to the Bombay police, and Inspector Briscoe, of the Bombay police, was subsequently sent by P. & O. steamer to Suez to bring back Captain Norman to Bombay; but on his arrival in Egypt he found that his charge was confined to his bed in the French Hospital, suffering from a bad attack of fever. This circumstance, and the fact that the British Ambassador was absent at the time from Suez, rendered it necessary for the Inspector to defer his immediate return to India. However, Captain Norman recovering sufficiently, was placed before Sir William Arthur White, the British Ambassador, on the 8th inst., when that official made an order for his being sent back to this city under the provisions of the Fugitives' Act, he having left Bombay with a charge of cheating having been preferred against him. Inspector Briscoe and his charge accordingly left Suez in the P. & O. mail steamer Sulej, and arrived in harbour on Monday morning, when, as above stated, the accused was placed before Mr. Richardson, and a remand applied for. The Magistrate decided to adjourn the case, and offered to release the accused on bail in the sum of Rs. 2,000, but as the Captain could not during the course of the day furnish sureties of bail to that extent, he was again brought up late in the afternoon, and remanded to jail, the case being postponed to the 26th inst., the prisoner stating that in the meantime he should communicate with his solicitors and friends up country.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Principal Medical Officer, Her Majesty's Forces, in each Presidency, having been placed on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief, it has been deemed advisable to locate the office at the same station as the other Headquarter offices. As a consequence, the Government of Bombay has sanctioned the transfer of the office of the Principal Medical Officer, Her Majesty's Forces, Bombay, from Bombay to Poona.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the formation of two classes to be held at the School of Musketry, Deolali, in the year 1891-92, each class being constituted as follows:—British officers, twenty; British non-commissioned officers, twenty; Native officers, ten; and Native non-commissioned officers, ten. The Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army has been asked to make provision for the above numbers for officers and others from the local corps in Rajputana and Central India.

THE last course at Deolali was not a success. Some five officers failed to obtain certificates, and in the Inter-schools rifle match Deolali was last.

THE following interesting paragraph appears in the Allahabad District Orders, under the heading of "Discipline":—"Officers commanding British Corps are requested to take immediate steps to have their men's hair cut short. It must on no account exceed two inches in length on any part of the head. The effeminate practice of wearing locks plastered over the forehead is absolutely prohibited. Frequent inspections of the men must be held, with uncovered heads, to insure this order being strictly enforced."

ACTING on the strong representation of the Madras Government of the necessity for continuing to employ Ghoorkhas in the Chin country, the Governor-General in Council has authorised the Commander-in-Chief to send the 2nd-3rd Ghoorkhas to relieve the 2nd-4th, but on the understanding that when the former are withdrawn in March, 1892, no more Ghoorkhas will be sent to Burma from India. Two Companies of the 2nd-3rd Ghoorkhas will be sent via Chittagong to Fort White to relieve the 2nd-3rd at the outpost, and as soon as this detachment is relieved in turn by local police—for which arrangements are being matured—it will march to Haka. The other six companies of the 2nd-3rd will go direct to Burma from India via Rangoon. There will, therefore, be a full battalion of Ghoorkhas available for operation during the coming and following cold season in the Chin country. If more troops are needed it has been decided that the General Officer Commanding the Burma District should be called upon to arrange for the same. In all probability, should necessity arise, one of the new Burma Regiments will be employed.

"Diogenes," writing to the Pioneer from Poona, says:—"We are losing our Adjutant-General, and though we are getting the best of what Bengal can give us in his place, there be many who will sorrow for his departure. If rather of the old than the new school, our departing A.G. has many good points, not the least of them being that he never promised what he could not perform, and though fond, as every right-minded man should be, of ladies' society, he never considered the possession of a pretty wife the best claim to Staff employment. We also lose our General and our Q.-M.-G. in the spring. The latter's successor has gone home to recruit himself after six months' careful understudy of a post for which he is better qualified than any man in the Presidency. There are several wonderful rumours in the air concerning the filling of the former's place; one of them, which appeared in a local paper, being quite too funny. As the appointment rests entirely with H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief at home I do not think there is much chance of the vacancy being filled locally. We shall all be sorry to lose the present incumbent, who is a kind friend to all in his command, and a courteous gentleman in all his dealings—a great thing in these high-pressure days.

THE STAFF CORPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "PIONEER."

SIR,—Having at heart the welfare of the Indian Staff Corps, I beg leave to point out a pecuniary disadvantage to which the same has been subjected during the current year, the rectification of which is almost as much to be desired as accelerated promotion. I see that a correspondent to the Home News has enumerated five headings under which the Staff Corps rules require amelioration. Four of the alleged disadvantages are insignificant in comparison with the serious reduction in the emoluments of wing officers caused by the recent ruling, that if a Native regiment has the full complement of wing officers, including probationers, any wing officer holding an officiating appointment as quartermaster, adjutant, or wing commander, must forfeit half his allowance of Rs. 100 as wing officer. Up to this year these appointments yielded an increase of about Rs. 50, 100, and 150 respectively to officiating incumbents, and served as a great attraction to the junior officers, who could always hope to drop in for one or the other, while the permanent incumbent was on furlough, &c. Now that Rs. 50 is retrenched the officiating quartermastership is worth absolutely nil, the officiating adjutancy is hardly more attractive with an increase of Rs. 50 for work which is poorly paid at Rs. 100, and the officiating wing command, shorn of a third of its value, is no more the prize it used to be. That these heavy reductions in the pay of officiating regimental appointments will not make the Indian Staff Corps more popular is as plain as

OUR LAWS: A SUGGESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "PIONEER."

SIR,—In delivering judgment in a certain case, Sir Barnes Peacock, the late eminent Chief Justice of Bengal, is said to have remarked that the troubles of a suitor began when he obtained his decree. This is as true now as it was twenty years ago when the observation was made. In spite of the frequent amendments of our Code of Civil Procedure, the law relating to the execution of decrees remains as cumbrous as ever. The framers of the Code seem to have aimed more at the perfection of the machinery than the utility of it. The complicated state of the law is a fruitful source of trouble to the courts, and of annoyance and expenditure to the decree-holders. However that may be, I venture to think that it would be a great boon to the community at large if the existing law were simplified, and many competent judges think that it can be simplified. To give an illustration. When a decree has been passed, the judgment-debtor may be summoned by the court and asked to make a full and true disclosure of his property, or a portion of it, from which the decretal money can be realised, upon oath. The court may then proceed to sell that property which the judgment-debtor has consented to part with. The judgment-debtor will also benefit by such a change in the law. It not unfrequently happens that a man loses a large property on failure to pay a trifling sum. I have made only one suggestion by way of illustration, in the hope that many similar changes will suggest themselves to the eminent lawyer at the head of our Legislative Department.

AN EXTRAORDINARY PIG.

Captain Hayes, in the Sporting News, says:—

A pig-sticking friend writes to me from Mainpuri:—

"I went out yesterday with a friend of mine who keeps a pack of nondescript dogs, about forty, to kill jackals, and roused a big boar. He ran about half a mile through high crops, with the dogs yapping after him; and at last took up his station in a sugarcane field and would not move. There was another sugarcane field close by, with an open space four feet wide between. The pig ran backwards and forwards between these two fields for some time, and at last got to the corner of one field with ten dogs yapping round him. Up to this time he had done nothing in the way of seeking retribution on his followers. But he suddenly got cross and went in and cut six dogs badly, and did what a pig seldom—very seldom does—he charged, cut, and passed on, and returned and worried the poor beast he had cut and knocked over.

"This was going on at the corner of a high sugarcane field, too high for me to venture into; but presently a man came up to me with a spear, and said he would see why the pig would not come out. 'Go on,' I said, 'and God be with you.' He went in, and half a minute after the bear appeared, sixty yards off, at the top of the opening between the fields, and charged straight down at him. He was five yards away from me, and I shouted to him to clear out of the way, but he pluckily stood and speared the pig in the face. This made the pig wild and he bucked and raced away with a heavy spear in his face for ten yards, and shook it out; and to my surprise, turned sharp and came in at the prostrate man. I have never seen a pig behave with such savage determination. He tossed the man like a bull and passed on, and returned and tossed him again. At his second return I pressed in and received him on my spear, though I could not hold him off the man. He got in and took the poor creature up on his tusk and shook him in the air. My first spear had gone through the pig, but when I found he took no notice, I jerked about and gave him another deep spear, and then another, but got so tired that I let go—all this time the pig was worrying the man terribly, and I was standing over him. I nipped out, and as soon as I could hold another spear I went in and rammed it three times again through the pig; but it was no use; he went down on his knees and savagely worried the man, and actually killed him under me.

"When cutting the pig up, I found three spears had gone clean through his lungs, one through his heart, and the last spear had nearly cut the heart in two, yet he was able to worry the man for a good half-minute before he died.

"I have been at the death of a good 300 pigs, but I never met with such a savage brute. Pigs will charge, cut, and pass on; but this brute turned again and again and dug and tossed at the man like a mad bull, and did not seem to be aware that there was a spear through his vitals."

THE IMPORT OF INDIAN SILVERWARE INTO ENGLAND.

A resolution in the Gazette of India states that Her Majesty's Government has proposed to provide in the Bill to be introduced in Parliament that Indian silverware bearing an Indian hall-mark affixed under the authority of the Government of India should be admitted into the United Kingdom, without being subjected to British hall-marking regulations; and the Secretary of State has invited an expression of views from the Government of India on the subject. His lordship suggests that if the system of Indian hall-marking is adopted it might be made voluntary and not compulsory, and inquires as to what standard of fineness should, with due regard to the practice of Indian silversmiths, be adopted for an Indian silver hall-mark. The points for consideration are:—Should the assay be compulsory or optional? What standard of fineness should be adopted? Where should the assay officers be located? At the two mints only or at other centres? Also what process for assay should be adopted? What fees should be charged? What distinguishing marks should be applied to the wares assayed? On the first point the Government is decidedly of opinion that no such restriction of trade as would accompany a compulsory assay and hall-mark can be contemplated. The law which would be required would be of a character entirely contrary to the economic policy of the Government of India, and would be vexatious and restrictive in its operation, wherever it could operate, as in presidency towns. Apart, moreover, from the objections of principle to such a system, it is clear that the law would constantly be evaded, and a serious result of compulsion would be the discouragement of trade in British territory, and its encouragement in Native States. On the second and third points, the Governor-General in Council will reserve any expression of opinion until he is placed in possession of the views of the local Governments and the trading and manufacturing community. As to the fourth point, there are three processes in use in various countries—cupellation, the wet method, and the touchstone. The two first are the most accurate, but both involve slicing or scraping off from the piece of work a portion of the metal to be assayed, and the manufacturer whose works at a distance from the assay office must incur the heavy expense. The last method is not so accurate, varying 1 per cent., but does not involve injury, and appears most suitable. As to fees no suggestion can be made at present. The Government will be glad to learn the views of the local administrations whether the prospect of the admission of Indian artware to England without hall-marking is considered of sufficient importance to the trade to justify the introduction into India of a system which must necessarily be restrictive, and operate unequally, whether it is compulsory or voluntarily; also whether the continuance of hall-marking in the United Kingdom has appreciably minimised the effects which might have been expected from the repeal of the duty on silver-plate. The trade has had some experience of the effects of the repeal, and will, probably, be able to say what the practical effect of the abolition of the duty has had. It must have stimulated the transmission to England by private persons of articles not intended for sale, and therefore not requiring to be assayed, and in this way trade has probably been benefited.

THE CONGRESS CAMPAIGN IN ENGLAND.

THE Indian National Congress is going to work in England in a new direction. Its leaders have come to the conclusion that it will no longer do to urge Indian questions upon the notice of the British public independent of political parties. Sir William Wedderburn has issued "an appeal to principles," telling his Native friends that they must ally themselves to the Home Rule party in order to win the cause of the Congress. "What India wants," he says, "is progress and reform, and it is to the party of progress and reform that she must look for sympathy." The General Election cannot, he thinks, be postponed beyond the autumn of 1891, and he thus writes in the journal called Indica:—"I trust that the Congress will not fail to send over a strong party of delegates, and send them early, so that they may take advantage of the winter and spring evenings which are more favourable for meetings of working-men. I trust, also, that the delegates will be authorised to accept invitations to appear on Liberal platforms. If they do not do this they will be left out in the cold; for, at such a time of political excitement, meetings for political objects held on a non-party basis will have but a poor chance of success. We must also bear in mind that the Liberal party is now the Home Rule party; so that when, as we confidently expect, the Liberals obtain a majority at the next General Election, we shall have in power a party pledged to a sympathetic treatment of national aspirations." While the ex-President of the Congress looks to the Home Rule party for allies, Mr. Pincott, in the same journal, appeals to the Conservatives. "There is nothing in Conservatism," he told an audience he addressed at Clapham, and which address is reproduced in the Congress journal, "antagonistic to prudent reforms. The whole constitution of England, and all the changes or reforms which have raised us from barbarism to the highest pinnacle of civilisation, have been effected under Conservative influences. It is simply notorious that what has been called Whig, Liberal, and Radical ideas had no existence until recent times, and are only now striving to make good a claim to dominate the affairs of the nation. They are theories which may or may not prove workable; but Toryism is experience, and can point to accomplished results." Well done, Mr. Pincott! There is nothing like being "thorough," and we readily give Mr. Pincott the credit of always being so. But how, if Toryism has worked so manifold advantages for England, does it not do the same for India? There is no Government more Conservative than that of the Government of India, and yet, according to Mr. Pincott, everything is going wrong in that country. In his address to his Conservative Clapham friends he described the English official in India as a wielder of unchecked power making or breaking the law at his pleasure. "The official is in the nature of a sovereign in his district; and the life, liberty, and property of every inhabitant, from a prince to a beggar, are practically at his mercy." All Anglo-Indians will at once recognise how correct this description is of a District Officer. But this, however, is not the point which we would notice in this article. We have Mr. Pincott's Toryism plain enough; but what says the Editor of a journal which publishes the two Appeals of the advantages of Conservatism to the Congress? "The Conservatives as a body, and saving a few most honourable personal exceptions, are not content with refusing to render any assistance. They go farther than that; they heap insult and contumely alike upon the cause and its supporters." We were not aware of things being so bad as this; but Sir William Wedderburn explains that the unsympathetic attitude of the Conservative party towards Indian reform was illustrated recently, when the British Congress Committee invited the local Conservative Associations equally with the Liberal Associations "to co-operate in securing justice to India and a redress of her grievances." On that occasion the central Conservative organisation "did not take the invitation in good part, but treated the appeal as a party move from the Radical side, and asked their agents "to estimate the character of the movement from the names of those by whom it is promoted." The Conservative organisation acted, it appears to us, in a very sensible manner; but what does Mr. Pincott think of Conservatives who treat his Congress friends in this way? And who are the Liberals who are to be honoured by the confidence of the Congress men? Not the Liberal party led by Lord Hartington, we presume, but the Home Rule party; but where is that party now? The Congress gentlemen had better, we think, keep to their original idea of a non-political propaganda. They will not be able to make India interesting at present either to Gladstonians or to Parnellites. Indeed, "justice to India and a redress of her grievances," through the means of the National Congress, seem to be still a long way from being carried into any practical effect. In the meantime Mr. Pincott may go on abusing the police system of India, "all the heads of which," he informs Clapham, "are Europeans," and the system "a scandal to civilisation," for "the police of India constitute an engine of oppression and extortion of the cruellest kind. Bribery, perjury, and every form of corruption are openly practised under the very noses of the European superintendents." Clapham should see to this without delay.

PROTEST AGAINST THE PLAY OF MAHOMET.

A public meeting of all sects and classes of Mahomedans was held Nov. 14th at the Borah Jamatkhana, called "Neejam Bag," of Mr. Ibrahim Nooroodin, situated at Dongree, to adopt a petition in Her Majesty's Secretary of State against a theatrical performance which was intended to be produced on a London stage, in which the holy prophet of Islam was to be represented. Hundreds of Mahomedans, Borahs, Moguls, Memons, Khojas, Shias and Sunnis, combining in one common cause, filled the whole open space and upper galleries of a large quadrangular building in which the meeting was held.
 Mr. R. M. Sayani said that in the absence of Cazez Londay, who was ill, and of Cazez Moorgay, who was away from Bombay, he would propose that Syed Imamudin Saheb be requested to take the chair.

Mr. Meer Sarfaraz Ali seconded the proposition, which was carried.

Mr. R. M. Sayani then read the following petition:—To the Right Honourable Viscount Cross, G.C.B., Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.

"The Humble Petition of the Mussalman Subjects of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress, residing in Bombay and other parts of British India.

"Most Humbly and Respectfully Sheweth,—That your petitioners are Mussalman subjects of Her Imperial Majesty the Queen-Empress, and reside in various parts of British India. That the Mussalman subjects of Her Majesty in British India alone number about fifty millions, and form an important section of the populace under Her Majesty's dominion. That your petitioners have recently learnt with great regret that a theatrical performance was intended to be acted on a London stage, in which the Holy and Reverend Prophet of Islam was to be represented. This news caused a great sensation in the whole Mussalman world, and has shocked and wounded their religious feelings. That some months ago a similar attempt was made in Paris, and the matter attracted the notice of the Mussalmans. A representation was made to the French Government by the Ambassador in Paris of our spiritual head, His Imperial Majesty the Sultan of Turkey; and the intended performance was put a stop to, although the Mussalmans do not form any considerable portion of the subjects of the French Government. That, although the intended performance was stopped, the incident was not without its effect. It created a considerable excitement in the Mussalman community of India, and in various towns and cities. The different sections of the community held large meetings, at which it was resolved that the Mussalmans should refrain from visiting theatres and witnessing any plays whatsoever. That if the intended performance had been allowed to be put on the stage in London, which is the Metropolis of Her Majesty's Government, the feeling of Her Majesty's Mussalman subjects would have been better imagined than described. The intended play, if performed, would have been considered by the Mussalman subjects of her Gracious Majesty as an outrage upon their religion, and their feelings would have been deeply wounded. Your petitioners need not remind your Lordship that it has always been the anxious care of the just and benign British Government to preserve strict neutrality in matters of religion, and to prevent acts calculated to wound the religious feelings and susceptibilities of its subjects. Your petitioners feel confident that this matter only requires to be brought to the notice of your Lordship, to ensure justice being done, and the real grievance being redressed. Your petitioners, therefore, most humbly and earnestly pray (and they fervently hope that their prayers will be granted) that your Lordship will be pleased to take effective measures for the purpose of preventing any future attempts of a similar nature, for which act your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Oordoo and Gujeratee translations of the petition were also read to the meeting by Mr. Meer Sarfaraz Ali and Mr. Meherali Dewraj Master, respectively. Mr. Mahomed Sayed Arby, secretary of the Anjuman-i-Waiz Islam, and Mr. Moonshee Ahmed, addressed the meeting in support of the prayer of the petition. Throughout the proceedings, whenever the name of their prophet was mentioned, those present, out of respect to his memory, murmured blessings on him, touching their eyes and kissing their hands.

The Chairman proposed that the petition read to the meeting be adopted and forwarded to the Secretary of State.

Mr. R. M. Sayani, in seconding the proposition, said:—The British Government has guaranteed to every one of its subjects the undisturbed observance of his own religion, and nobody is allowed to interfere with such observances. Anybody insulting the religion of any of his fellow-subjects is even punished. The British Government has thus secured to its subjects, not only the enjoyment of liberty and of equal laws, but also of peace and of religious observance, and we British Indians have, therefore, cause to be deeply thankful to our rulers. Lately our sacred Prophet was to be represented in the theatres of Paris, but at the instance of the Sultan of Turkey, this intended representation was put a stop to. Recently it was intended to represent him in the theatres of London, but fortunately this intention was also abandoned. Having regard to these two attempts, it is necessary that we should memorialise Government, so that no similar attempt may be made in future. We feel sure that the British Government, and the British people generally, will grant a favourable hearing to our memorial. Her most Gracious Majesty has always vouchsafed to us her kindest regard and consideration; and Her Majesty's Ministers have been very anxious not to hurt the feelings of Her Majesty's Indian subjects. Her Majesty's Indian Mussalman subjects number nearly fifty million souls, and we feel sure that a memorial on behalf of such a vast number of Her Majesty's subjects will put an end to any further attempt in the direction alluded to. An amusing attempt was made to justify the representation of our prophet on the stage on the ground that it would conduce to the proper appreciation of his character and of his work. We take the liberty of informing our friends that the same object can be attained in far better ways, and that all the sections of Mussalmans deprecate the two attempts already alluded to. In conclusion, the thanks of the Mussalman community are due to the public Press for helping us on this occasion.

The proposition was carried unanimously.

Mr. Cassum Mitha proposed the appointment of an influential committee, consisting of some thirty gentlemen, to carry out the objects of the meeting. The proposition was seconded by Cazeer Ismail Cazeer Mahomed Porebunderee, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Meer Sarfarazali read to the meeting a letter in English written by Mr. K. N. Kabrajee, who had been invited to attend the meeting, and pleading his inability to attend it owing to another engagement, expressed his sympathy with the objects of the meeting. The letter was translated in Oordoo by Mr. Moonshee Ahmed.

On the motion of Mr. Hajeer Abdul Hoosein Shirazee, seconded by Mr. Shaik Camroodin, thanks were voted to the chairman; and a similar vote of thanks to Mr. Ibrahim Noorodin, for lending the use of the building, terminated the proceedings.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As the letter of "Geo. B." may be considered by Indian Mahomedans to be officially inspired, it would be well to point out that the suppression of that play in England, a far more difficult task than in France, is only another instance of the scrupulous regard which Her Majesty has for the religious feelings of her Mahomedan, as of all her subjects, and of the wise advice tendered on this occasion by the Secretary of State for India. At the same time, it is interesting to note how "Geo. B." arrived at his conclusions. The process in which an "elegy" or "Marsia," more correctly "Marthia," on the death of the prophet Mahomed's grandson, Husain, is converted into "a play," is too curious not to deserve notice. "Marsia" is an "elegy" in which "a dirge" may, of course, occur. "Dirges" are not uncommon in "tragedy," and in a conventional sense "tragedy" is a "play"; therefore, "an elegy" is "a play"; therefore, the "Marsia" or "elegy" of Husain's martyrdom is "the play of Hasan and Husain." "Geo. B.," however, contents himself with writing an introduction to a jeu d'esprit of Sir Lewis Pelly, who asked a member of the despised actor class to dramatise the elegy; and forthwith "Geo. B." concludes that every Anglo-Indian knows, in the play of Hasan and Husain, as performed in India and Persia, that the Prophet Mahomed is produced on the stage at every development of the plot. Considering that the prophet died long before the martyrdom of his grandson, I do not see how he could be referred to at every stage "stage of the elegy which 'Geo. B.' converts into on the stage" and "the plot"—abominations to pious Mahomedans of both the Sunni and the Shiah persuasion (to the former of which by far the great majority of our Mahomedan fellow-subjects belong). Indeed, there is no such thing as "a play" in Mahomedan literature in the proper sense of the word. The representation of everything that has, or has had, life is strictly prohibited by the Mahomedan religion, whether by painting, sculpture, or dramatising among the Sunnis, and although the artistic Shiah Persians are, in some respects, a deviation from that rule, it will be news to them that the nine days' weeping in their houses and the tenth day's procession of what may be termed the commemoration funeral of their martyr Husain is called "a play." Indeed, it is a play in which the grief-stricken spectators are alike the audience and the actors, or in which the eloquent and solemn reciter of the sad historical event is the only actor, if such misuse of these terms may be permitted. The Sunnis tolerate the procession because the Shiah mourners are evidently in earnest, but, woe to them if, beyond lacerating their breasts, they look askance at Sunnis. Then there is bloodshed, unless checked by the presence of the British officials. I have myself led out the procession in either 1865 or 1866 with Nawab Nawazish Ali Khan, at Lahore, one of the very few places in India in which the white horse that fled to announce its master's death to his people is taken out. As for the "Almighty" being "represented" in the elegy or play; is not this a grievous misstatement?—Yours, &c.,

G. W. LEITNER.

THE PUJAH AT KALLYGHAT

A Calcutta paper gives some details:—

This great Hindu temple at Calcutta was en fête during the past four days of the Pujahs. As usual, the Hindu devotees from all parts of Bengal assembled in large numbers to perform the necessary religious ceremonies at the temple, where the goddess Kally was worshipped in honour of the goddess Durga, both, as is known, being essentially one and the same deity under two distinct representations. Last Tuesday being the second day, otherwise called Asotmi, or the eighth day of the moon, and being regarded as most auspicious by the Hindus of Lower Bengal, the gathering at the temple mustered about 25,000. The scene within the temple was a unique one. The priests were busy in slaughtering goats and buffaloes at the instance of worshippers; the former cattle numbered about 1,700, and the latter about half-a-dozen. From a business point of view the priests had a good time of it. Their collections that day exceeded Rs. 2,000, to say nothing of presents of jewellery. On the day following the vegetarian sect of the Hindus, chiefly Marwaris, mustered about 1,500, and performed the ceremony of burnt offerings, consisting of ghee, various assortments of corn and sweetmeats, as also gold and silver coins, all of which were thrown into a small vessel of fire, and offered up before the goddess Kally. On Thursday following, which is held in great reverence by Hindu married women, some 5,000 of them assembled at the temple, and had their foreheads painted with vermilion powder, besides conforming to other rites of worship. The occasion was taken advantage of by some young men of Kallyghat in getting up a circus, performance in which a tame tiger, buffaloes, horses and monkeys were exhibited. In addition to this, an enterprising European gentleman provided a novel entertainment, called "The Round About," with an organ combined, and the whole worked with the aid of steam. It was much appreciated, judging from the liberal patronage it received. Much credit is due to the police for the excellent manner in which peace and order were maintained throughout the festival. On the first day of the Pujah, a European Government official and an amateur photographer took several photographs of the Kallyghat Temple and its interesting surroundings.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—DEC. 1.

—O:—

BURMAH STATE RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

Mr. BRADLAUGH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he could state how often the employés on the Burma State Railway were paid; whether some, and which, classes of railway officials were paid monthly; and whether some, and which, classes of railway servants were paid at much longer periods; whether he was aware that the poorer employés complained of the hardship of these postponed payments; and whether the Secretary of State would take any action in the matter.

Sir J. GORST: The questions relate to matters of detail in connection with the management of an Indian railway, as to which the Secretary of State has very little information, and the regulation of which is within the proper functions of the local Government. If any of the employés have grounds of complaint their proper course is to make representations to the local Government. In the improbable event of such representations not receiving due consideration they can appeal to the Government of India, and ultimately to the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State can take no action except upon memorials and information transmitted to him through the Government of India in the regular and proper manner.

Mr. BRADLAUGH gave notice that he should take an early opportunity to make a full statement as to the disgraceful condition of these poor men, especially as he understood the Secretary of State had not inquired into it.

DEC. 2.

CHILD MARRIAGES IN INDIA.

Mr. S. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Government of India had under consideration measures to diminish the evils of child marriages.

Sir J. GORST: The best mode of dealing by legislation with this difficult subject has been for some time engaging the anxious consideration of the Government of India.

NATIVE PRESS.

IMPORTANT MARRIAGE SUIT.

THE Hindoo writes:—In the High Court of Madras an appeal is now awaiting disposal, the particulars of which are extremely interesting. The facts are briefly as follow:—

Punchangum Venkatu Charlu, a Vaishnava Brahmin, brought a suit before the district moonsif of Bapala in 1888 to obtain a decree appointing him guardian of his minor wife, Venkata Rungamma, then aged eight, alleged to have been married to him in 1884, when the girl was three years of age, and restraining the defendant, the father, from remarrying her to another person. The cause of the suit lies in the fact that the father of the girl, first defendant, denied the celebration of the marriage, and questioned its validity if it were proved that any such ceremony had been gone through. The moonsif recorded the following issues: (1) Whether or not defendant's minor daughter Venkata Rungamma was legally married to plaintiff; if she was not legally married, whether plaintiff is entitled to claim guardianship in respect of her, and injunction to defendants restraining them from marrying again the girl to some one else. The defendant alleged that he never gave permission to second defendant, his wife, to marry Venkata Rungamma; that there was no necessity for her marriage, she being only three years old at the time, that in fact no marriage had taken place, that on the day on which the marriage was stated to have been celebrated he was at Bapala, and that he met his wife and daughter at Guntur, and found no sign of marriage on the person of the girl, and that even if the girl is considered to have been married to plaintiff the marriage was illegal. The second defendant never appeared before the Court, and the moonsif remarks, "was intentionally kept back," and the Court process did not reach her. A number of witnesses were examined. The moonsif, a Brahmin, concluded that the marriage of Venkata Rungamma with plaintiff was performed and duly solemnised, but without first defendant's consent; the first defendant subsequently removed the mangalasutram or the marriage tie from the neck of the girl, and harboured the thought of marrying her to some other person. Having found the first issue, so far as the question of fact was concerned, in the affirmative, the moonsif next proceeded to discuss the legality of the marriage. He thought that there was no deceit or fraud in the affair. But here it must be pointed out that in a letter written by the plaintiff's first witness, the gomasta of the Temple trustees, in which the marriage is said to have been performed, to first defendant's brother, the wrote to the latter "that fifteen days before plaintiff caused to be entered in the Temple Chitta Rs. 6 and odd as fee for his marriage; that during his absence his son received the fees; that on his return in the evening of the same day the girl's mother told him that she and her mother came there; that her husband had gone about the country, and that plaintiff was her brother; that on his (witness) rebuking the plaintiff for having brought a young girl and her mother for marriage without the girl's father and other relations having suspected that his desire was to have the marriage performed secretly, all the people went away without telling him at daybreak; that plaintiff and the marriage party occupied his home at the time." This statement evidently shows that a thick veil of secrecy was thrown over the whole incident. But the moonsif did not accord to it the consideration it deserved in the settlement of the issue whether the marriage was a fraudulent one. The moonsif admits in his judgment that there was no doubt that the father's consent was absent, and that it is one of the essential ingredients of a valid marriage. But he held that the same breath that the absence of that "essential ingredient" was "not calculated to destroy the efficacy of the marriage duly solemnised or invalidate it for all interests and purposes." But he thought that the girl was too young to be taken away from the custody of her parents "and entrusted to a person with whom she had never lived before," before she attained puberty. Therefore he declined to grant the prayer of the plaintiff to take charge of the girl. But he declared that defendant had no right to marry again his daughter, that any violation of the decree would render the defendants liable to criminal prosecution, and that under no circumstances the existing married status of the girl could be altered. In appeal the district judge of Krishna, Mr. G. T. Mackenzie, reversed the decree of the lower court in its most material parts. The district judge found that the marriage was fraudulent, and he based his conclusion on the following reasons:—That the father was not a party to the marriage; that he was only a few miles away; that there was no necessity to marry a girl of three without his presence; that the evidence of the Brahmin who officiated at Mangalageri showed that the mother silenced objections by falsely stating that she was giving the girl in marriage with her husband's consent. He also believed that according to Hindoo law a mother could act only in the absence of or with the consent of her husband or male relatives. "To hold that any wife who has quarrelled with her husband," he adds, "may irrevocably bestow in marriage her infant children is a dangerous doctrine." He therefore held, and in our opinion very properly, that the marriage was invalid, and dismissed the plaintiff's suit, with costs throughout. A second appeal was preferred to the High Court and the case was argued before the Hon. Mr. Justice Muthusawmy Iyer, and judgment has been reserved.

SEVEN sales of Bengal opium show a deficit of over five lakhs on the estimate, while the falling off on seven months' pass duty in Bombay amounts to 25 lakhs.

THE Secretary of State for India has decided, with the concurrence of the War Office, to pay 3s. 6d. per day to the officer who may perform the duties of Paymaster of regiments and battalions going home from India, for the period of the voyage and for one month after the date of landing in England, as a charge against Indian revenues; as also to the officer appointed to perform the duties of Paymaster of corps arriving in India during the present trooping season. In the case of corps which will embark for India the officer selected will be attached to the nearest station pay-office for one month prior to embarkation, in order that he may become acquainted with the duties of the payment of a regiment, and for this period, as well as for the actual voyage to India, he will be paid at the rate of 3s. 6d. per day in addition to pay of grade.

DEATH OF GENERAL GILLESPIE.

MHOW, NOVEMBER 18.

General Gillespie, C.B., died about midnight last night, and was buried with full military honours this evening. He was only ill for a few days, and his death has caused a profound sensation in Mhow. All classes of the community, European and Native, are deeply lamenting his untimely death, when his term of command had nearly expired. An accomplished soldier, a chivalrous gentleman, and the most kind-hearted man in the world, all ranks of those who had the honour and pleasure of serving under him feel his death as a personal loss. To earn his good word was a distinction coveted by all. His funeral this evening was the most solemn and imposing military display Mhow has ever witnessed. Three squadrons of the 18th Hussars, the Middlesex Regiment, and the 7th Bombay Infantry formed the funeral cortege, while large and orderly crowds of Natives lined the roads and watched the procession. General Gillespie was well known as one of the most brilliant and able soldiers in India, and his death is a national misfortune. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, who is now on tour, was present at the funeral with his Staff. Colonels Crosthwaite, Royal Artillery, Birch, 9th Bombay Infantry, and Gough, 18th Hussars, Deputy Surgeon-General Davis, Colonel Grey, 7th Bombay Infantry, and Lieut.-Col. Dalton, Middlesex Regiment, acted as pall-bearers. The Royal Artillery supplied the gun carriage and a carrying party. The "N" Battery, R.H.A., formed up facing the cemetery, and fired 11 minute guns on the procession leaving the General's bungalow, and after the body was deposited in the grave, a salute of 11 guns was fired. The late general suffered from intestinal obstruction for about a week, and last Sunday an operation was performed by Surgeon-Major Caldecott, Indore Residency Surgeon, but notwithstanding his efforts the patient gradually succumbed to the malady in the night.

The announcement of the death of General Gillespie will, we feel convinced, says the Times of India, be received with the deepest regret by the inhabitants of this presidency. This popular officer, despite a somewhat robust appearance and addiction to athletic sports, had for some little time past been in bad health, which culminated in prostration a few days ago, and a subsequent operation at the hands of Surgeon-Major Caldecott. Despite the temporary relief afforded by the operation, the patient, who was suffering from a severe bowel complication, succumbed on Monday evening last. Next March would have seen the termination of a long and honourable career in this country of the gallant General. He leaves a widow and eight children in England to bemoan his loss. He had just attained the age of sixty at the time of his death, and was a singularly active man for his age. A man of frank, open sympathies, his endeavours in Mhow to promote everything in the way of sport or entertainment for the benefit of those segregated in that not too lively station is worth recording. As a General Officer he displayed exceptional abilities, and it is useless to speculate what might have been his ultimate success but for his somewhat untimely end. Colonel Galloway assumes temporary command of the post so unfortunately left vacant at Mhow, and India generally could ill spare so kind-hearted and genial a man as General Gillespie. General Gillespie first obtained his first commission on the 8th June, 1849. He was promoted to Lieutenant in July, 1855. He served throughout the Persian campaign of 1856-57, including the storming and capture of Reshire, surrender of Bushire, expedition to Borazjoon and battle of Kooshab, for which he obtained the medal and clasp. In July 1862 he was promoted to Captain, and in September, 1868, he received his majority. In August, 1873, he was gazetted a Lieutenant-Colonel, and in 1878 he was made a Colonel. Colonel Gillespie served in the Egyptian War of 1882 as Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster-General of the 1st Division, and was present at the engagements of El Magfar, Tel-el-Mahuta and Kassassin (9th September), and in the battle of Tel-el-Kebir he was mentioned in despatches and rewarded with a C.B. He also received for his services on this occasion the medal and clasp, the 3rd Class of the Osmanieh and the Khedive's Star. He commanded the field force during the operations in the Bikaner territory in 1883-84, and was mentioned in despatches. He was promoted to Major-General in December, 1887.

THE Chief Commissioner of Burma has declared that tourmaline shall rank among precious stones.

THE cargo for Colombo brought by the Vadala included a big gun, the first of the four large ones that should have been in Ceylon long ago. It is to be mounted at the Galle Face Battery.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

LONDON: W. H. ALLEN & CO., 18, WATERLOO PLACE and at CALCUTTA.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can not steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blisters so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 29th November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 27th November; and from Calcutta to the 26th November.

THE VICEROY arrived at Agra on Saturday from Delhi. On Monday afternoon Lord Lansdowne held a public durbar in the Viceregal camp for the reception of Native nobles and gentlemen of the Agra, Meerut, and Rohilkund divisions; and congratulated them on the general prosperity enjoyed by that part of the country, which was all the more welcome as at one time, owing to the scarcity of rain, grave fears were entertained regarding the crops.

LORD HARRIS arrived in Bombay from his tour in Kattywar on Tuesday, and left for Poona the same evening.

LADY HARRIS arrived in Poona from Mahabeshwur on Monday evening.

It is notified that Government will reassemble at Bombay on Tuesday, Dec. 2nd.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF BOMBAY has returned to Poona from his tour of inspection in the Nagpur and Mhow Districts.

Two military tragedies have occurred at Madras during the past week. In one a Native sepoy shot a subedar, and then committed suicide; and, in the other, Private Raven, of the Duke of Cornwall's Regiment, was shot by a comrade named Price, who then killed himself.

THE first phase of the Attock manœuvres came to a conclusion on Friday, the 21st ult., the Northern Force having scored a distinct success in their attack upon the south face of the Attock position. General Keene has now moved to Akora.

IN consequence of incessant rain the second phase of the operations at the Attock Camp have been postponed until next week. The final march-past takes place on Dec. 5th.

A SERIOUS riot took place at Calcutta on Tuesday between two sets of Cabuli traders known as the Kharoti and Suliman Khel clans. These men come annually to Calcutta to trade, and appear to have interfered with each other's business. Sticks and stones were freely used, one man being killed, and several severely injured. Several arrests were made.

THE Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab invested the Raja of Kapurthala with full administrative powers on Monday last. In a speech of some length Sir James Lyall referred to the traditional loyalty of the State, and congratulated the Raja on the good progress which it had made during the thirteen years of his minority.

THE members of the Leprosy Commission left Bombay for Poona on the 26th Nov., where they will remain for a week, and then start for Hyderabad.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN arrived in Quetta on Monday, his work in connection with the Khidderzai expedition having been satisfactorily concluded.

THE North-West Provinces Government have just sent in to the Government of India their scheme for carrying into effect the proposals of the Public Service Commission, which has been worked out in full details in regard to appointments to be removed from the schedule for the benefit of the new Provincial Service.

THE Czarewitch during his tour through Southern India is expected to visit the Caves at Ellora, Dowlatabad, and Ajunta. These places being within the dominions of the Nizam orders have been issued by the Nizam's Government that his Imperial Highness shall be received with the honour and magnificence befitting his rank.

FEARS are entertained that a scarcity is likely in certain parts of the Tanjore district, owing to a deficiency of rain. Careful watching is ordered by the Government. Stocks of grain is reported low. A large number of people have emigrated.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL WOLSELEY, Commanding the Mandalay District, proceeds home immediately on two months' leave. There is a possibility of his not returning to India, as, in all probability, he will be promoted to Major-General within the next few weeks.

THE Sikh refugees at Pondicherry left that place on the 21st Nov. for Delhi, the Government of India having pardoned them for their intrigues in Dhulip Singh's interest, and raised no objection to their return to the Punjab.

THE Hon. Mr. Hutchins has completed his tour in Burma and the Andamans, and returns to Calcutta early this week.

ON Monday last week His Highness the Maharaja of Bikanir laid the foundation stone of the railway station at Bikanir, the site chosen being about a quarter of a mile eastwards from the City wall. At a Durbar held on the spot, Major A. C. Talbot, Political Agent, made a short speech, in which he noticed a few of the great benefits which will result to the State from this railway. At the present time it takes an ordinary traveller a week to get from Bikanir to Kuchawan-road, or to Ajmere, the nearest stations; but when the Jodhpur-Bikanir line is opened, passengers will be able to reach Jodhpur in fourteen hours, and the main line in five hours more. It is hoped that the line will be ready in about eight or nine months' time.

THE punishment of the Lushai clans which attacked Changsil and Aijal is proceeding apace. On Monday last a combined force from the two outposts destroyed Khalkam's village, the enemy losing ten killed. Five hundred men of the 43rd Gurkha Light Infantry leave Shillong this week, and are timed to reach Changsil on December 15th. Operations against the more distant chiefs will then be undertaken, and the country generally be opened out. Khalkam has since surrendered unconditionally.

THE question of constructing new lines for the garrison at Delhi has been under consideration recently between the Lieutenant-Governor and the Commander-in-Chief, while they have been on the spot. It appears extremely unlikely that any increase will be made in the present strength of the garrison.

THE Black Mountain tribes are said to have relapsed into their normal condition since the troops returned to Abbotabad. It remains to be seen if the leaders generally recognise the penalty they incurred when the Hassanzais advanced their pickets into British territory and fired on General McQueen's force. So far the maliks have made no sign.

THE Bengal-Nagpur Railway is rapidly approaching completion.

DR. VOELCKER proceeds to Ajmere about the 26th, where, in company with Mr. Hill, Officiating Inspector-General of Forests, he will spend some days in examining the local forest workings.

A SMALL epidemic of embezzlement seems to have occurred in the subordinate official circles in Rangoon. Within the last few days three persons have absconded whose defalcations amount to Rs. 8,000.

COLONEL LUCKHARDT, Commissary-General, Bombay, will be transferred to the unemployed supernumerary list on Dec. 12th on attaining fifty-five years of age.

MAJOR KUNHARDT, R.E., has accepted the post of Chief Engineer at the Burma Ruby Mines.

ALL regiments in India on the march at the time of the Census must arrange to have their weekly halt on Feb. 27th, 1891.

It is proposed to demolish Fort St. George, Madras.

NOTES.

It is to be hoped that the "faddists" and would-be Indian reformers who are trying to bring pressure upon the Government here to induce it to bring pressure upon the Government in India to interfere in the matter of Hindu marriage consent will take note of the telegram sent by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, which we republish to-day. From this it will be seen that the time has not yet come for such interference, and that to precipitate matters will be to sow discontent and alarm widespread throughout India.

THE most ardent of reformers would hardly wish to bring about such a state of things as might throw back Indian progress for years. True reforms come to fruition slowly in the West, still slower in the East, but they come at last. In the meantime, with the assurance that Native feeling, not in Madras only, but throughout India, is against legislative interference for raising the age of consent in marriage, the Government, as the Times correspondent puts it, will be taking a most serious responsibility if it allows itself to be hurried into ill-considered action.

Too much weight need not be given to the telegraphic news from Burma. The Rangoon correspondent of the Times is well-known as a gentleman who has not hesitated to display extraordinary prejudices against individual officials, and in his latest intelligence he does not belie the rather unenviable reputation which he has acquired in this respect. There may be a fascination in following the "gentle art of making enemies;" but the readers of the Times would probably follow its Rangoon correspondent's telegrams with greater interest were they to contain more of Burma news and less of Burma social squabbles.

It is known of all men, says the Pioneer, and lamented by some, that the average Native looks upon education not as a means, but as an end. If it is not to raise his price in the matrimonial market—there was a boom in B.A.'s last year among the infant maids of Bengal—it is to help him to a seat in a Government office. Like that of mercy, the quality of his enlightenment is not strained; and if so be he can turn it to the profit which is convertible with ease, he is little concerned about the dignity of learning. This is well, but it can be improved upon. The Bengali youth has discovered not only that education, even when it takes the attenuated form of a "pass," has its pecuniary value, but that something can be made out of the mere lack of it. There are, it appears, districts in Bengal where the suffrages of the Native schoolboy are as eagerly sought as are the votes of the free and enlightened elector in a keenly-contested English constituency. "Canvassers may be seen," wrote a correspondent of Sir Alfred Croft's lately, "all over the district, busily engaged recruiting students for the schools whose cause they advocate; it has made the students unruly, disobedient, and disrespectful in the extreme. Discipline cannot be enforced amongst them. The good students have learnt to sell themselves to the highest bidder, and those of the entrance class fetch a good price in the market. Every year in the month of August the agents of the mofussil entrance schools come to secure good sure students" (those who will surely pass the entrance examination) "from the town schools by a promise of free board and lodging, free studentship, boat hire, and something in cash to meet the Puja expenses."

"WHAT is the use," asks our Allahabad contemporary, "of attributing part of the blame for the lack of discipline in the Bengal schools to the 'unhealthy state of public opinion?' Given an honest and fairly capable teacher, with a good birch, and by the time they leave his charge pupils are likely to appreciate 'unhealthy public opinion' at its true value." Excellent advice, but if it were acted upon, what would "unhealthy public opinion" at home say? How long would it be before Mr. Bradlaugh would ask in Parliament for a return showing the number of Bengali youths who had been flogged at school under the merciless system of education fostered by the corrupt and tyrannical Government of India?

WE thoroughly agree with the Times of India in the following remarks upon "Journalism and Leprosy":—"We deprecate and abhor all dilettante dabbling by newspapers in the abstruser questions of the medical art, and should be loth to encourage the pernicious sciolism which converts every smatterer into a perky diagnostician, or a thrasneical therapist like those too common embodiments of that nuisance to the social circle, the amateur charlatan. For a newspaper when discussing such a burning question as leprosy to run through the whole gamut of pathological plausibilities, from Hansen's bacillus to Sir William Moore's theory of the identities, would be abandoning legitimate journalism for the jargon of the schools. Such ground is the special province of the expert; and, even if stripped of technicalities, could be of no earthly use to writers who aim only at a cyclopædic survey in informing the public mind."

THE papers to hand by the present Overland Mail are filled with reports of the cold weather tour of the Viceroy, who has been visiting the cities of the plains, and receiving deputations and making speeches—just in the old way that his predecessors did before him. There is little new under the sun, especially the Indian sun. One Viceregal tour very much resembles another, and there is a necessary sameness between the compliments of Municipalities and the Viceregal replies thereto. But at Delhi Lord Lansdowne was guilty of either intentional or unconscious humour, when he told the Municipality of that commercial city that they had reason to rejoice at the completion of the Delhi-Kulka line of railway, "which would bring them forty miles closer to the summer headquarters of Government."

Who has most cause for joy—the official, on his annual flight to the hills, or the Native merchant, who remains where he is?

THE City Free Press has just been established at Mandalay by a Burmese girl.

THE death is announced at Karachi, of Mr. Alexander McHinch, until recently a member of the Bombay Legislative Council.

It is not often that the military authorities suffer embarrassment by finding a regiment too strong. The bare idea of such a thing would seem an absurdity nowadays in England; but that it may happen sometimes in India is proved by the case of the Connaught Rangers. This regiment, now under orders for Aden, is so much in excess of the barrack accommodation there that it will be obliged to leave one company behind at Deolal.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 14.

A large and disorderly meeting has been held at Madras to protest against raising the age of consent in marriage. Mr. Chettier Avergal, who presided, in opening the proceedings, said the subject required deep and mature consideration, as it affected the peace and happiness of the people.

Sir Madhava Rao proposed the following resolution:—"That this meeting protests against the proposal to raise the age of consent in Section 375 of the Indian Penal Code as being unnecessary, so far at least as the Madras Presidency is concerned." He proceeded to warn his hearers against what he called a preposterous measure and against the covert designs of certain social reformers. During the Rajah's speech the Dewan Bahadur Ragoonatha Row uttered some antagonistic expressions, whereupon a scene of great confusion followed and the meeting came to an abrupt conclusion.

Although no public meetings on this subject have yet been held in other parts of India, the tone of the great majority of the vernacular newspapers and the inquiries among all classes of Natives tend to show the existence of a strong and all but universal feeling against legislative interference. Deplorable as this may be, it is evident that the Government will be taking a most serious responsibility if it allows itself to be hurried into ill-considered action.

Sir S. Bayley lays down the office of Lieutenant-Governor on Wednesday and starts for England the same evening. The leading Natives of Behar presented an address to him on Friday, and the Civil Service gave him a farewell dinner yesterday.

The Legislative Council held the first meeting of the Calcutta Session on Friday; only formal business was transacted. It is understood that the Bankruptcy Bill will be the principal measure of the Session. Doubtless the Factory Bill will also be considered by the light of the report of the recent commission.

The proceedings of the commission on Native passenger ships, now sitting in Calcutta, are attracting a good deal of attention, chiefly owing to the differences of opinion between the non-official members and the representative of the Bengal Government regarding the mode in which the evidence of witnesses should be taken.

The Native Congress holds its first meeting on the 26th inst. Mr. Mantz, of Madras, has withdrawn his acceptance of the Presidentship, and it is understood that Mr. Pherozeshah Mehta, of Bombay, will preside.

The Lushai chief Lienpunga, surrendered unconditionally on the 9th inst. Although not so directly concerned in the recent outrages as the other chiefs now in custody, he has been mixed up with all the frontier disturbances for some years past. The manner in which all the principal chiefs were captured and the chance of combined resistance was crushed reflects the highest credit on Mr. McCabe, political officer, and on the officers and men of the Assam frontier police.

BURMA

RANGOON, DEC. 13.

Mr. Mackenzie has assumed office, and Sir C. Crosthwaite will to-morrow proceed to India. During the past week Sir C. Crosthwaite has become involved in two singular controversies.

A dinner was given to him by certain gentlemen, which was stated to be confined to his personal friends. It was largely attended, about three-fourths of the company being local officials. A full report of the dinner has been published. Sir C. Crosthwaite made a strong political speech, defending his administration, and claiming that the entertainment then offered to him proved his success. While admitting many blunders which he had made, he declared that all who had criticised or opposed him were foolish, misguided, or dishonest.

This speech has excited much discussion in the Press. It is pointed out that Sir C. Crosthwaite's sweeping condemnation included some of the ablest public officers in the province, such as the late Colonel Street, senior Commissioner in Burma. It is further alleged that such strong pressure was brought to bear on the local officials that they were forced to attend the dinner. Many others were induced to join on the representation that the entertainment would not be political. Some curious details have been given of the methods resorted to for the purpose of securing a large attendance. It is further alleged that several gentlemen refused to propose Sir C. Crosthwaite's health. If the rules of the Government of India forbidding public entertainments to be given to public officials relinquishing office had been observed this most unseemly controversy would have been avoided.

A still warmer dispute has been going on in reference to the removal of Captain Drury from the command at Haka. In consequence of an article in the Rangoon Times, alleging that Captain Drury has been removed because he refused compliance with the suggestion to act treacherously, Sir C. Crosthwaite has published a series of documents containing his defence. The reason given by the Chief Commissioner, when applying for Captain Drury's supercession, was that, in case of any accident happening to the Political Officer at Haka, he was desirous of having an officer in command there who could be trusted to act with judgment. Captain Drury had already commanded at Haka for six months without complaint being made.

In the documents which Sir C. Crosthwaite has published, the local Government substantially impute to Captain Drury that he wished to act not only injudiciously, but treacherously, by holding a Durbar and seizing the Chins there.

This imputation has been strongly denied. It is contended that the suggestion to hold a Durbar was made merely in consequence of the suggestion of the Assistant Political Officer to invite the Chins to the fort and then seize them, and as being a more straightforward method of arresting the Chins than that proposed; also that it was a mere suggestion, which was not acted upon.

Having regard to these charges and counter-charges of treachery which have been made, it is presumed that some further inquiry will be instituted. It is understood that Captain Drury has asked for a court of inquiry.

Seventy-three cases of cholera and sixty deaths have occurred amongst the 2nd Battalion of the 3rd Goorkhas. No officer has yet been attacked.

From the Bhamo district it is reported that the body of 500 Chinamen, previously referred to in my telegram of the 3rd inst., are at Myalkin, seventy-five miles north of Bhamo, with the object of crossing the Irrawaddy, and moving to the Jade mines, via Tuama. They are offering opium and arms for sale.

CHINA.

PEKIN, DEC. 13.

An Imperial Edict has been just issued, of a very friendly tenour, stating that the Emperor will receive all foreign representatives in audience in March. On the day following there will be a grand Imperial banquet at the Tsung-li-Yamen. The Edict further states that a similar audience will be given annually during the first moon, and further commands the Tsung-li-Yamen to invite the representatives on the part of the Emperor to a similar banquet on every future important occasion.

THERE is some talk of starting a skating rink in Mandalay, and if permission is given to build the rink within the Palace walls, the speculation may possibly succeed.

It is intended to organise an immense Fancy Fair during Christmas week in aid of the Bangalore Cantonment Orphanage. The fair will be held in St. Mark's-square.

It is stated that the Right Rev. Dr. Kleiner, the newly-consecrated Bishop of Mysore, will not arrive in Bangalore from Rome till April next, to take charge of his bishopric.

A TREVANDUM correspondent states that Mr. Markey, an enterprising European planter, is trying to dig out plumago in the hilly parts of Nedumangaud.

THE Commissioner of Coorg has appointed twenty-five additional hands as assistant inspector of Revenue, as a temporary measure in connection with the Survey Settlement instituted recently.

THE infant son of the late Sir Salar Jung has been placed in charge of Mrs. Bowillion. It will be remembered that she nursed Sir Salar during his last illness at Poona. She will get only Rs. 100 a month.

IN Moulmein it has been decided that all Court petition-writers shall be licensed.

It is notified that the Hyderabad Polo Tournament is indefinitely postponed.

AN Amateur Dramatic Society is being formed at Lahore. Colonel Marshall is honorary secretary.

Two of the young Princes of Siam are now in Burma visiting the principal places.

SEVERAL Native Chiefs have arrived at Rajkoto to meet the Governor of Bombay.

THE Nawab of Bahawalpur has set aside 150 sowars for an Imperial Service Corps.

SIR RICHARD BARLOW and the Hon. Mr. Whiteside have arrived at Madras from Ootacamund.

RETURNS FROM THE INDIAN MINES.

As the present year of grace approaches its close, investors are naturally on the qui vive for information upon which to base their dividend calculations—where there is any possibility of such a happy termination of the twelvemonth's operations. It will not be out of place, therefore, if we give some particulars with reference to the production of gold from the three leading Indian mines. We do so with the greater pleasure as the properties are yielding well up to the expectations we have often expressed, even when the gold mining industry of Southern India was at such a low ebb that Mysore shareholders flung away their holdings at 3s. or 4s. each; and intelligent and enterprising men like the late Sir William Abbott, to say nothing of the Messrs. Taylor, Sir Charles Tennant, and other believers in the value of the Mysore Goldfield, were regarded by many people as misguided and sanguine visionaries. Last year, as was shown in an article which appeared in the Financial News on October 18 last, the Mysore Company paid dividends of 75 per cent. from actual mining operations, and 50 per cent. from the sale of a portion of the property to the Champion Reef Company, and there is every reason to expect that this year, without any assistance from a subsidiary venture, the Mysore dividends will reach the very satisfactory figure of 100 per cent. The Nundydroog Company has already paid nearly 14 per cent. on account of the present year, and will probably double that payment when the full accounts of the year come to be dealt with; and the third property of the trio, Ooregum, although unable to declare a dividend until the House of Lords decides whether or not the issue of the Preference shares was ultra vires, has unquestionably placed the company in possession of a handsome balance of profit for division when it can be legally done. The trio are thus doing so well that we think those who hold shares in the undertakings would act very unwisely in parting with their holdings at anything like the prices now ruling. For these mines, at all events, the days of doubt and uncertainty have passed, and their success cannot but be an incentive to greater exertions on the part of the managers of other Indian properties, and to renewed confidence on the part of those whose hopes have been so long deferred. However, our present purpose is to analyse the returns of the three really successful properties.

It is worthy of note, in the first place, that last month's yield of gold from the Mysore Mine—5,250 oz.—was the best on record, showing that as the property is opened out in depth and in width its productiveness steadily increases. We should be exceedingly sorry to under-estimate by one iota the services which Captain Plummer rendered to the Mysore Company, and, indeed, to the district generally; but, at the same time, it would be equally unjust to dispute the fact that his successor, occupying a difficult position in following such an expert, has well deserved the golden opinions which his management has won. Some months ago the influenza and its after effects caused a falling-off in the returns, and it was concluded by some pessimists that with Captain Plummer the glory of Mysore had departed. That this conclusion was an inaccurate one is now manifest. In the following table the crushings month by month since the end of 1888 are given, from which the shareholders will see at a glance what progress has been made:—

	1890.			1889.
	Tons.	Oz.		Tons.	Oz.
January ...	3,271	5,003	...	2,066	2,376
February ...	3,000	5,884	...	2,023	3,038
March ...	3,200	5,869	...	2,459	3,249
April ...	3,661	4,571	...	2,600	3,872
May ...	3,385	4,263	...	2,672	3,869
June ...	3,491	4,461	...	2,866	4,275
July ...	3,207	4,174	...	2,947	4,527
August ...	3,138	4,118	...	2,900	4,739
September ...	3,100	4,258	...	2,942	4,879
October ...	3,009	5,014	...	3,030	4,424
November ...	3,100	5,250	...	3,040	5,157
December ...	—	—	...	3,021	4,829
	35,564	52,865	...	32,566	49,234

The average yield during the past eleven months has been just under 1½ oz. of gold to the ton of quartz, comparing with a trifle over that percentage for the whole of last year. Last month's average was, however, very nearly 1 oz. 14 dwt. per ton, showing a distinct improvement on the aggregate percentages which we have just mentioned. For the eleven months of the current year it will be seen that the gold produced has exceeded by 3,631 oz. the total production of last year, when, as we have said, 75 per cent. was paid to the shareholders out of the working profits.

Turning, in the next place, to the Ooregum Mine, the table given below shows that the monthly crushings have augmented in a very satisfactory manner, the eleven months' production exhibiting an increase of nearly 50 per cent. over the whole of last year:—

	1890.			1889.
	Tons.	Oz.		Tons.	Oz.
January ...	825	1,784	...	454	839
February ...	957	2,032	...	482	927
March ...	1,005	2,075	...	508	1,132
April ...	966	2,049	...	585	1,255
May ...	1,004	2,107	...	626	1,353
June ...	1,010	2,127	...	691	1,427
July ...	1,022	2,161	...	714	1,467
August ...	1,110	2,306	...	745	1,506
September ...	1,173	2,491	...	729	1,563
October ...	1,247	2,646	...	756	1,620
November ...	1,297	2,725	...	772	1,662
December ...	—	—	...	777	1,683
	11,016	24,503	...	7,839	16,434

The percentage of the gold produced has been practically the same this year as last—2 oz. 2 dwt. to the ton of quartz, and that [was] almost precisely the result of last month's crushing. The average is an exceedingly good one, especially in view of the steady increase in the amount of mineral crushed, and the Nundydroog returns are, relatively, even more satisfactory, as will be observed from the subjoined table:—

	1890.			1889.
	Tons.	Oz.		Tons.	Oz.
January ...	670	1,139	...	370	581
February ...	700	1,321	...	280	394
March ...	650	117	...	300	514
April ...	650	986	...	300	485
May ...	700	1,085	...	300	520
June ...	750	1,400	...	300	498
July ...	800	1,488	...	300	497
August ...	900	1,418	...	310	491
September ...	875	1,421	...	339	324
October ...	900	1,478	...	320	363
November ...	925	1,475	...	312	700
December ...	—	—	...	350	751
	8,520	14,228	...	3,781	6,118

Here we see that the yield of the precious metal for the past eleven months has exceeded by 8,110 oz., or about 130 per cent., the total production for the whole of last year; and whereas the percentage last year was a little over 1 oz. 12 dwt. of gold per ton of quartz, the percentage this year has been about 1 oz. 13½ dwt.—also a very satisfactory average. Results such as these cannot fail to be gratifying to those who are interested in the companies. They show that the Champion Reef of the Colar district is highly auriferous, and that with systematic and competent management, such as these mines undoubtedly have, permanently valuable returns are tolerably certain, and they suggest also that, whatever may be the fate of the lag-behinds among the Indian properties, the Mysore trio promise to give a very good account of themselves for some time to come.—Financial News.

OUR INDIAN AND COLONIAL TRADE.

An interesting Government return has just been issued relating to the trade of our Indian and colonial possessions from the year 1875 to the end of 1889, and in some cases bringing the information down as far as March 31st, 1890. An examination of these statistics is useful, in so far as it gives an accurate idea of our position in the Indian and Colonial markets. During the fourteen years ended 1889 the import trade of India had nearly doubled, being £83,285,000, against £44,192,000, while the figures show a further advance to £86,653,000, this increase, it should be mentioned, being mainly due to additional imports of bullion and specie, which are included in the figures given in the return. Our own contribution to this result has been an increase from £34,522,000 in 1876 to £63,360,000 in 1889. We are so far ahead of any country in our shipments thither that we can afford to ignore competition, the next largest exporter being the United States, amounting to £1,966,000 in 1889, and showing a very small advance during the past five years. The principal articles of import do not show increases, but rather a falling-off, comparing 1889 with 1888. For instance, the total imports of coal and coke, which in 1888 amounted to £1,907,000, fell in 1889 to £1,308,000; cotton yarn and twist decreased from £3,746,000 to £3,482,000; cotton manufactures from £27,764,000 to £26,391,000; iron from £2,515,000 to £2,414,000; railway materials from £2,493,020 to £1,821,000; and woollen goods from £1,561,000 to £1,455,000. Machinery and millwork show a slight increase, namely, from £2,316,060 to £2,435,000, and copper and brass from £618,568 to £2,294,000. The export trade shows a similar increase, rising from £57,984,000 in 1875, to £105,355,000 in 1890, the latter year showing an increase of £7,000,000 in 1889. The details for 1890 are not yet available, but out of the total exports, amounting to £98,833,000 in 1889, we purchased goods to the value of £37,797,000, our British possessions taking about £20,000,000, France £8,524,000, the remainder being distributed among minor countries. The export of raw cotton amounted in 1890 to £18,669,000, the largest yet made in one year, the nearest approach being £16,000,000 in 1883; the shipments of grain and tea have, however, fallen in quantity and value. The most noticeable point in the trade of Ceylon is the great increase in the export of tea, being 34,346,432 lbs. in 1889 and 23,820,724 lbs. in 1888.

Turning to Australasia, the total imports thither, including bullion and specie, have increased from £65,600,000 in 1888 to £68,849,000 in 1889. Great Britain, in 1889, did nearly one-third of the total imports—namely, £8,736,478 out of £22,863,000, our nearest competitors being Queensland, £4,668,000; Victoria, £2,419,000, and South Australia, £1,858,000. New South Wales exports amounted to £23,294,000, and our share of this was £8,964,000; Victoria, £5,346,000; and South Australia, £3,000,000. Copper ore, wheat, hardware and machinery show increases. The export trade of the Colony has risen during 1888-89 from £20,920,000 to £23,294,000, principally due to larger shipments of unrefined sugary tea, tin (ingots), wool, and gold. Victoria, in 1888, imported merchandise valued at £23,972,000 and £24,402,000 in 1889. Our own trade has arisen from £10,851,000 to £11,412,000. New South Wales being our keenest rival, sending £6,326,000 worth of goods. Last year we purchased a little over half of Victoria's exports, namely, £7,000,000 out of £12,738,000, New South Wales taking £2,114,000. The principal items of increase under imports are iron and steel, hardware, grain, railway rails, and furniture. South Australian imports in 1889 amounted only to £6,804,000, although this is a slight increase on several preceding years. Of this we sent £2,000,000, and New South Wales £3,047,000, while her exports amounted to £7,259,000, of which we took £3,412,000, and New South Wales £2,209,000. Great Britain is by far the best customer to Western Australia, taking goods in 1889 to the value of £506,024 out of £761,391, while we sent to the Colony merchandise to the value of £364,386 out of £818,127 received. In Tasmania we are beaten by the same rival—New South Wales—that Colony sending £773,917, against our £517,681, the total imports amounting to £1,611,000; the same Colony purchases £717,290 of goods, against our £251,835. It is evident that New Zealand has seen the worst of its recent troubles as regards trade and commerce, both imports and exports showing increases comparing 1889 with 1888. The imports rise from £5,941,000 to £6,297,000, of which we sent, in 1889, £4,126,000, and Victoria £532,000. The export trade has risen from £7,767,000 to £9,339,000, of which we purchased £6,599,000, and New South Wales £1,069,000. These increases appear to be spread over a comparatively wide area, denoting a general return of prosperity. Our trade with Queensland in 1889 was £2,862,000, out of £6,052,000; while our purchases from thence amounted to £2,498,000, out of £7,736,000, New South Wales £3,930,000.

The additional shipments to Natal and the Cape of Good Hope should also be noted, rising in the first case from £2,420,000 to £3,642,000, and in the latter from £6,024,000 to £9,493,000, taking the years 1888 and 1889.

An interest will be taken in the fact that Canadian imports during the last eight years have made very little progress, taking an average, being £23,468,000 in 1882, and £22,535,000 in 1889; while the export trade has, in fact, decreased during the same period from £21,278,000 to £18,326,000. Our own exports thither have remained stationary, while the United States have increased from £9,823,000 in 1885 to £10,384,000 in 1889. We purchased £7,829,000 worth of goods last year, which was less than in any preceding period, except 1879. On the other hand, the United States have added to their purchases, the value in 1884 being £7,980,000, and £8,956,000 in 1889. It should be noted also that Germany is adding slowly but surely to her trade in almost all of our Colonies and possessions.

In the course of his speech at the opening of the Villapuram-Guntakul Railway, Lord Connemara thanked Mr. Betts, the agent of the South India Railway, for the excellent luncheon provided. We have, he said, enjoyed it as Englishmen always enjoy anything good in the shape of eating and drinking. To me the mulligatawny was simply admirable, and the leek sent round the table was worthy of all admiration. It must have been prepared specially in honour of the Welshman in the party, my distinguished private secretary, Mr. Rees. I have no doubt the leek was a tribute to him for those very picturesque accounts he has given the public of various parts of the Presidency. I hope the leek may also be immortalised in his graceful prose as part of the commemoration of the opening of this railway.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

ODDS AND ENDS.

(Times of India.)

The Anglo-Indian who is getting near the end of his time out here may well be excused if he hesitates a little as to whether it would not be better to remain altogether in the East, than to go home and cast his lot once more with the changing and uneasy West. Every home paper he takes up tells how somebody went on strike at the end of last week, and somebody else is going on strike at the beginning of next. If the Anglo-Indian arrives in London about Christmas time he may find that everybody connected with coal has struck, and so have to remain in bed until spring comes, as the only means of keeping himself warm—not a pleasant prospect. Or he may find that all the laundresses have gone on strike, and so have to get up his own linen, or go about suspiciously buttoned up, as seedy gentlemen do when they are out of funds. As it is, with every comfort available, it seems to be capable of proof by statistics, that only one man in five hundred who has spent his working life in India survives his return to the rigours of an English climate more than half a dozen years or so; sixty-one is the age fatal to the retired Anglo-Indian, so far as can be ascertained. Say he retires about the age of fifty-five. He appears to get on all right until he has got safely past sixty; and then, good easy man, thinking he is quite acclimatised, he ventures to sit down on his lawn some fine summer evening, and is carried off by a chill; or he lights a candle some night to see where the smell of gas comes from, and is blown out of his front window into the next street; or he ventures out for a walk in May without his great-coat, and is buried within the fortnight; or is run over by a hansom; or meets his end by some other mischance common at home. If, then, in addition to what may be called the normal insecurity of life in England, the retired Anglo-Indian is to be constantly running short of some of the necessities of life because his milkman, or his grocer, or his bootmaker has struck, he may well consider within himself whether he had not better remain in India for good and all.

For the East never changes. The Fin de siècle which is so exercising and unsettling men's minds in Europe concerns her not at all. What is a century more or less to the brooding East, which never seems to have been young, and will apparently be no older a thousand years hence? "Damascus had municipal rights when Abraham walked with God," was Lord Beaconsfield's happy way of putting before an English audience the extreme antiquity of the land he loved, and the race from which he was descended. And how pleasant it is, in these days of advanced science, and Socialism, and phonographs, and other abominations invented by Mr. Edison, to come across this "rule of the road," from one of the sacred books of the East, written a couple of thousand years or so ago, and still in force:—"The road belongs to the King, except he meet a Brahmin. But if he meets a Brahmin the road belongs to the latter. All must make way for a laden vehicle, for a person carrying a burden, for a sick man, for a woman, for others, such as old men and children. And way must be made by the other castes for those who are superior to them by caste. And for their own welfare all men must make way for fools, outcasts, drunkards, and madmen." How delightfully it is all laid down, so that everyone may know how to act when out for his morning walk. And what a great institution is that of caste. People sometimes talk of the great future that would be before India if she could only shake herself free of the shackles of caste. The great future that would be before an India enfranchised from caste would probably be—Brandy. For what does the individual Native do who leaves his caste? Gets drunk at once. I always think that caste in one of the great charms of this country, and that the mixture of profession and religion in the various trades forms the best sort of trades-unionism possible. Here as one wanders through the bazaar, with its surging masses of picturesque humanity, one passes the goldsmiths' quarter, and the copper-smiths' quarter, and the street where the grain-sellers live, and the Dherzies part of the street, and the tanners' quarter, and one knows that all these trades are hereditary, and have come down from generation to generation, and that the goldsmith can no more become a tanner, or the tanner a seller of grain, than the stars can move out of their courses, and play a general game of post. India is worthy of admiration if only because she is the most conservative of nations. I believe if she could, she would abolish telegraphs and railways, and she would do well. The world would be much happier if these destroyers of peace and quietness had never been invented. When foreigners petitioned to be allowed to introduced railways into China, the answer from Pekin was that railways would disturb the calm of China, and could not therefore be allowed. Decidedly that is the country to settle in.

BENGAL.

(Nov. 26.)

THE Calcutta cold weather is now fairly established, and cold-bracing mornings and cool days are atoning for the past.

THE Government of Bengal, the Statesman understands, has issued a circular directing the taking of agricultural stock with the census of next year.

ON Saturday the Calcutta Naval Volunteers gave their annual dinner, at which Captain Petley, in a speech, made a strong appeal for a "bigger guard-ship and a proper and efficiently armed cruiser," for the defence of the Sandheads.

MR. MACKENZIE, the new Chief Commissioner of Burma, arrived in Calcutta on Saturday. He makes a short stay, during which time he will make himself acquainted with the more important cases pending between the Government of India and the local Government.

MAJOR A. D. MCARTHUR, R.E., and Mr. W. Connan, in reporting on the state of the Kidderpur Dock after the quarterly inspection made on the 8th instant, state that fair progress has been made and would have been maintained but for the partial failure of the dock walls. The quality of the work, so far as they were able to judge, was satisfactory.

MR. MALLITTE, the gentleman jockey, whose death at Calcutta was announced yesterday, sustained injuries on the local racecourse on Thursday last in a collision. According to Hayes' Sporting News with which, we understand, Mr. Mallitte was connected, the deceased was exercising a country-bred pony when he came into collision with a horse ridden by a Mr. Thaddeus. Both horses and riders were thrown to the ground, Mr. Mallitte alighting on his head. The cause of death is certified to be concussion of the brain.

BABU RAM CHUNDER CHATTERJEE, the Bengalee balloonist, made a very successful ascent at Delhi on Saturday. On the ballast bags being removed and everything in readiness, Chatterjee took his seat, and after securing the parachute and making every preparation for the descent, he gave the signal to let go, and away he went amid deafening shouts from the onlookers. There was not a breath of air at the time, and the balloon consequently shot upwards in a direct line for about the first two thousand feet, and then moved in a south-easterly direction for the next two thousand feet, as indicated by the aneroid. Mr. Chatterjee then jumped into space with his parachute and dropped like a stone for about six hundred feet, when the parachute slowly opened and descended safely, the balloonist alighting on the roof of a house at Lal Kuan in the heart of the city, about a thousand yards from the polo ground as the crow flies.

THE general health of the Simla bazaars just now is far from satisfactory. Small-pox prevails to an abnormal extent among Native servants, and numbers have died of the disease. Another drawback to Simla, says the Lahore paper, is the fact that the station is annually getting more crowded with indigent Natives who cannot find employment, and beggars of all descriptions. They do much to spread disease, and the lower bazaar is literally crowded with beggars. Some wily Babu has circulated a rumour that it is the intention of Government to impose a heavy tax on all mendicants who come to Simla, which seems to show that some action in the matter is really necessary. Besides the professional beggars, many more servants than can find employment, and these of the worst description, annually come to Simla and roam about the station as long as possible before they think of going elsewhere. Unless a remedy for these growing nuisances can be found, Simla will not remain the famous health resort it used to be.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer writes:—Gold mining shares, with the single exception of Sonapets, which are a little firmer, continue in the same miserable position. As I pointed out in these columns weeks ago, when the gold fever was at its height here, and nearly every small farm in the place was attempting to float a company to work the "rich auriferous tracts" of Chota Nagpore, gold companies have been madly overdone, and the market is overburdened with gold stock which it certainly cannot possibly carry at the prices recently current. Unless some one of the companies now existent finds gold in paying quantities, it is difficult to see what can materially improve the market value of gold mining scrip. If there be any real find of gold in Chota Nagpore—and it is as well to remember that this is just within the bounds of possibility—gold shares will probably "boom" again. Gold mining scrip, therefore, at current rates, offers some attraction to the gambler and speculator, but should be studiously avoided by the genuine investor.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to a contemporary to say that at last steps have been taken to test whether gold is really procurable in Chota Nagpore. The mail train which left Howrah the other night carried six European miners on their way to Chota Nagpore, one of them a veteran from California. These men have instructions to make a careful survey of the country, and they are provided with instruments and chemicals in order to ascertain whether the quartz, which they are to select for themselves, is auriferous. They will probably return to Calcutta in a fortnight or three weeks.

MADRAS.

(Nov. 27.)

THE Madras Mail regrets to learn that Mr. Justice Shephard has been absent from Court for the last two days on account of a severe attack of neuralgia. He left on Wednesday evening for Bangalore for a short change, from which place he is expected to return next Monday.

THE Government of India has suggested to the Madras Government the desirability of abandoning all tanks irrigating fifty acres or less, as from the experience of past years it is found that the revenue derived therefrom is not commensurate with the expenditure entailed on Government for their upkeep.

THE Madras Government has at last yielded to the military authorities, and accorded its assent to the demolition of part of the outworks of Fort St. George on sanitary grounds, leaving the provision of the funds for the demolition—the estimated cost of which is Rs. 7,000—for the consideration of the military authorities.

As an encouragement to the Badagas to produce good barley on the Nilgiri hills, the Government distribute money prizes every year to the extent of some two hundred rupees; and the Murree Brewery augment that sum by the provision of special money prizes. The distribution of prizes to the best exhibitors of the product this year took place on the 12th instant.

HEADS of departments in Madras under the local Government have been called upon to furnish a summary review of all events of interest which may have taken place from the date that his Excellency Lord Connemara took charge of the reins of government. A similar document was called for when the last Governor was about to leave the Presidency.

THE people of Cottayam, in Travancore territory, have petitioned the Government of Madras to direct the Dewan through the Resident, to order the closing of all the liquor-shops in the town, which they contend have been established against the express terms of abkari regulations. They say they have failed to obtain redress from the Native Government, and also from the Resident, to whom they have addressed no less than five petitions.

FROM the 8th to the 14th instant 4 East Indians, 12 Native Christians, 178 Hindus, and 21 Mahomedans died within municipal limits in Madras, making a total of 215 persons. The average of the corresponding week for the ten previous years was 288. The deaths are thus classified, viz., 1 from small-pox, 2 from measles, 60 from fever, 19 from dysentery, 9 from diarrhoea, and 124 from other diseases. The death-rate in the week under notice was 28.0 per 1,000 per annum. The mean of the ten previous years was 37.6 per 1,000 per annum.

THE earnings of the East Indian railway traffic for the week ending Nov. 8th, 1890, Rs. 9,12,957-7-0. Corresponding week last year, Rs. 9,17,524-14-7. Decrease, Rs. 4,567-7-7. From July 1st, 1890, to Nov. 8th, 1890, Rs. 1,30,13,882-0-2. From July 1st, 1889, to Nov. 9th, 1889, Rs. 1,38,43,187-8-3. Decrease, Rs. 8,24,305-8-1. Miles open week ending Nov. 8, 1890, 1,525½. Corresponding week last year, 1,525½. Per mile open for week ending Nov. 8, 1890, Rs. 598-7-5. Corresponding week last year, Rs. 601-7-4. Decrease, Rs. 2-15-11.

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 29.)

MR. G. C. WHITWORTH, C.S., has been permitted to return to duty within the period of his leave.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR and Lady Harris have promised to visit the Gaekwar of Baroda on January 2nd.

CAPT. SIR HENRY MORLAND has been nominated a member of the Board of the Technical Institute.

MR. AND MRS. SCHWANN are at present at Baroda as guests of H.H. the Gaekwar. Rao Bahadur Kazi Shabudin is also a visitor to his Highness. Mr. and Mrs. Sassoon go to Baroda next week, and the Raja of Kolapur is to spend Christmas at Baroda.

SIR GEORGE GREAVES, who was present at the funeral of the late General Gillespie, has suggested a memorial of the General to the officers of the Bombay Army, past and present, who served with him in India.

THE Government of His Highness the Nizam has decided to erect some public buildings to adorn the city, and the first of them is to be a post-office, which it is proposed to build on the plan of the General Post Office at Madras.

THE following police appointments are notified:—The services of Mr. J. G. Foard have been placed at the disposal of the Political Department; Mr. W. L. Souther, District Superintendent of Police, in the Panch Mahals district; Mr. F. H. Warden, Sholapur; Mr. J. E. Down, Satara; Mr. W. J. Holland, Belgaum; Mr. H. Scannell, on being relieved by Major Humfrey, to act as Superintendent of Police, G.I.P. Railway.

THE Hyderabad Treasury Frauds Commission has been further adjourned till the 2nd proximo, and it is now more than probable it may not meet again. Circumstances have been brought to the notice of his Excellency the Minister which may induce him to dissolve the Commission, and to appoint in its place a special board of inquiry to make a thorough investigation into the case, prior to proceeding any further judicially.

A STRANGE and horrible case of suicide occurred on the 20th instant at Hyderabad (Sind). A young lad, the son of a Native official, attempted, after a quarrel with his father, to hang himself, but was prevented. Nothing daunted, the poor lad waited his opportunity till he was alone, and then saturating his clothes with kerosine oil set himself on fire, thus carrying out his suicidal purpose. He was quite dead when discovered.

THE Resident, Sir Dennis, and the Misses Fitzparick leave Hyderabad on the 1st of next month for the Berars, and return, according to present arrangements, by Feb. 1st. They propose visiting some forty-three stations during their tour, including those of his Highness's towns that lie between Hyderabad city and the Berar boundary. Orders have been issued by his Highness's Government that all subadars, talukdars, and tahsildars shall wait upon Sir Dennis during his stay in their respective jurisdictions, and otherwise show the Resident every mark of respect.

THE season reports of the Bombay Presidency for the week ending Nov. 25th are summarised in the following general remarks:—Rainfall for the season insufficient in parts of Broach, Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Satara, and Dharwar. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing in several districts. Standing crops damaged by locusts in three talukas of Karachi and two of Nasik, and by insects in one taluka of Kolaba. Cotton in one taluka of Surat diseased. Crops otherwise good, except in one taluka of Nasik and three of Ahmednagar, where they are withering for want of sufficient moisture. Fodder scarce in one taluka of Khandesh, two of Poona, Ahmednagar, and Dharwar, three of Nasik and Sholapur, and five of Satara. Agricultural stock good, except in three talukas of Nasik, one of Khandesh, and one of Ahmednagar.

REFERRING to the death of Mr. McKinch, which we reported on Tuesday, a Karachi correspondent telegraphs that he died of typhoid fever. Profound regret is felt by all sections of the community. The deceased was contemplating a trip home for the benefit of his health, but was too unwell to do so, and suddenly succumbed. A bulletin issued with the Sind Gazette noticing his demise states that Mr. McKinch had been so long one of the most conspicuous figures of Karachi, taking so leading a part in all matters affecting public interest, employing his influence so sagaciously and well in the numerous capacities in which his energy and ability were displayed, that his death is much regretted. Various places of public business in the town were closed as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased.

A KARACHI correspondent writes:—"A very pretty wedding took place on November 18 at Holy Trinity Church, Karachi—that of Mr. Jenkins and Miss Florence Trevor. The bride looked very pretty, and wore an elegant gown of white silk trimmed with ruche round the bottom; sprays of orange-blossoms were arranged on the bodice and in her hair. She wore a long tulle veil, and carried a lovely bouquet. Her sister, the only bridesmaid, wore a pretty soft white silk gown, with a picturesque hat with ostrich feathers. Mrs. Trevor was in bottle-green satin, with bonnet en suite. The presents were very numerous and costly. There were a number of new frocks to be seen—several in the new shade of reddish brown. Mrs. Matthews wore a brown and white tailor-made gown, which fitted to perfection. Mrs. Thompson was in grey and white, with silver braiding. Miss Brereton's drab-coloured gown was prettily braided. Several ladies wore white, and, later, donned some dainty jackets. Mrs. Plunket in a soft shade of leaf-green with a large white design, opening over a white front, carried a handsome bouquet matching her gown. Mrs. Long looked remarkably well in a stylish black and white costume. Those who wore the fashionable high collars must have regretted doing so, for they proved a splendid receptacle for the rice which was liberally poured down them."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDE AND PUNJAB.

(Nov. 25.)

THE question of constructing new lines for the garrison at Delhi has been under consideration recently between the Lieutenant-Governor and the Commander-in-Chief while they have been on the spot. It appears extremely unlikely that any increase will be made in the present strength of the garrison.

IN a complicated conjugal rights case before the Punjab Chief Court on Friday, a definite ruling was made that the guardian of the minor husband of a minor bride is not entitled to the custody of the girl until she attains the age of puberty, according to custom. The significance of this ruling, writes the Civil and Military Gazette, in connection with one of the worst abuses alleged against the practice of infant-marriage needs no comment, especially when, as in this case, the bride is older than her infant husband.

A MURDER has lately been committed in one of the villages in the Ferozepore district under somewhat peculiar circumstances. A man under the garb of a Mohammadan fakir came and pitched his hut outside the village, and was respected by the people for his apparent piety and devotion. Some time after, another fakir and his wife came and stopped with him, and an intimacy grew up between the first fakir and the wife of the other. The body of the woman has now been found with the nose cut off and other wounds. The fakir who owned the hut disappeared, and is not to be found. The husband, who is accused of the murder, says that he only cut off the nose of his wife for being unfaithful, but that the other fakir, finding the woman so badly disfigured, finished her, and has disappeared with her jewellery.

THE North-West Provinces Government, in reviewing the measures adopted during the scarcity in Garhwal and Kumaon last summer, states that the relief expenditure amounted to Rs. 1,85,000, of which only Rs. 37,000 were debited against Kumaon. It is estimated that all, except Rs. 10,000, will be recovered within the next eighteen months. In proof of the severity of the scarcity while it lasted, it is stated that in Garhwal a fourth of the entire population were entirely dependent for four months on grain received from the Government stores. A good harvest has since restored the people to their normal prosperity. The Lieutenant-Governor acknowledges the good services rendered by Colonel Erskine, Commissioner of Kumaon, and his district officers, Messrs. Giles, Campbell, Roberts, and Agha Abu Turab; by Mr. Holderness in purchasing and supplying grain; and by Mr. Bullock, Collector of Bijnor. There can be no doubt that the work of relief was admirably carried out from first to last.

At the meeting of the Bharat Dharm Mahamandal at Delhi, it was resolved "that this Mahamandal looks with indignation on the movement set on foot by men who are not Hindoos anent marriage reforms, and that this Mahamandal strongly protests against Government interference in socio-religious matters." This resolution was proposed by Pandit Nandkishore of Muttra, and supported by Pandit Gaurishanker Vijas of Ajmere, Paribrajaka Kumareri Krishnaprasannu of Benares, and Munshi Banharill of Aligarh. It was further resolved "that the evil custom of demanding exorbitant money in matrimonial transactions, and extravagance in marriage expenses, as being contrary to the tenor of the Dharmshastras, should be put a stop to." The main object of the Mahamandal is, it is claimed, to improve the religious status of the people of this country, and to protect their religious rites and privileges. The necessity of establishing a Sanskrit college at Delhi was urged, a subscription list being handed round, and about Rs. 15,000 being raised on the spot.

BURMA.

(Nov. 25.)

THE followers of Boh Kyaw Wa, the Arakanese dacoit leader, have been sentenced by the Commissioner of Arakan. Oon Ban Kyaw Wa's brother, and Tha Htoon Pru, are sentenced to be hanged, and six others to transportation for life.

MR. W. H. REYNOLDS, Superintendent of the Forest Survey Department at Dehra, proceeds to Lower Burma in December, in order to make arrangements for a forest survey in that province. On his return Mr. Reynolds will probably pay a visit to the Central Provinces.

A REMARKABLE decrease in crime has taken place in the southern division of Burma during the past twelve months. In Magwe and Myingyan there was not a single dacoity during the quarter ending Sept. 30th, and in Magwe there was only one robbery. These figures show a reduction of 90 per cent. on the figures for the corresponding period of last year. Altogether, in the southern division there were only 13 violent crimes against 122 last year, and as compared with 42 during the preceding quarter. All the principal dacoit leaders, moreover, have been taken or killed, and the leadership of gangs has proved such an unprofitable business that there is every prospect of peace being permanent.

OBITUARY.

—O—

GENERAL R. Y. SHIPLEY, C.B.—We regret to record the death of Gen. Reginald Yonge Shipley, C.B., colonel of the Lincolnshire Regiment, late Royal Fusiliers, who died on the 28th ult. at Alasio, Italy, at the age of sixty-four. He entered the Service in December, 1843, became lieutenant in December, 1846, captain in April, 1852, major in December, 1854, lieutenant-colonel in May, 1856, colonel in December, 1861, major-general in March, 1868, lieutenant-general in August, 1879, and general in September, 1882. Gen. Shipley served in the Eastern Campaign of 1854, including the battles of Alma and Inkerman (severely wounded), siege of Sebastopol, and sortie on Oct. 26th, receiving the medal with three clasps, brevet of major, Sardinian and Turkish medals, and the Order of the 5th Class of the Medjidie. He also served in the Indian N.W. Frontier War of 1863, with the Eusafzye Field Force in command of the 1st Brigade, from the 4th to December 14th, and of the 1st Battalion 7th Fusiliers, at the attack and storming of the Conical-hill, and the capture of Umbeyla, being mentioned in despatches, and receiving the C.B., and the medal with clasp. General Shipley was the second son of the late Rev. Charles Shipley, of Twyford House, Hants.

GENERAL WILLIAM CHARLES GOTT, Bengal Army, who died on the 8th ult. at Umballa, Punjab, at the age of sixty-nine, joined the army in 1842, obtained his promotion to lieutenant same year, captain in 1849, major in 1857, lieutenant-colonel in 1861, colonel in 1871, major-general in 1881, and lieutenant-general in 1886. He served in the Gwalior Campaign of 1843-4, and was present at the battle of Maharajpore (bronze star). He also served throughout the Punjab Campaign of 1848-9, and was present at the passage of the Chenab, and actions of Saddolapore and Chillianwallah, being twice wounded (medal with two clasps). General Gott also served in the Sonthal Campaign of 1855-6.

MAJOR-GENERAL DAVID WATSON died on the 8th inst. at 29, St. James's-square, Bath. The deceased entered the army in July, 1833, became lieutenant in Oct., 1835, captain in June, 1841, major in June, 1854, lieutenant-colonel in Dec. 1856, colonel in July, 1862, and major-general in Oct., 1872. He served with the 82nd regiment in the Crimea from Sept. 2, 1855, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol (receiving the medal with clasp, and Turkish medal). He also served in the North-West Provinces in suppressing the Indian Mutiny in 1857-58, and was present in the operations at Cawnpore under Windham, defeat there of the Gwalior Contingent, actions of Kala Nuddee and Khankur, siege of the jail and subsequent operations at Shahjehanpore, affairs at Mahomdee, Shahabad and Bunkagaon (medal).

HON. DEPUTY SURGEON-GENERAL RICHARD COOPER TODD, who died on the 7th inst. at 15, Castle Hill-avenue, Folkestone, in his sixty-sixth year, obtained his appointment as assistant surgeon in 1850, surgeon in 1857, surgeon-major in 1870, and retired in 1879. He served with the 71st Highlanders in the Crimea in 1855, the greater part of the time in medical charge of the regiment, including the siege of Sebastopol and expedition to Kertch, receiving the medal with clasp, and Turkish medal. He also served with the 99th Regiment throughout the campaign of 1860 in China, including the actions of August 18th and 21st, and surrender of Peking, receiving the medal with two clasps.

COLONEL ARTHUR TOWER, commanding the 1st Battalion Suffolk Regiment, son of the Rev. R. Beauchamp Tower, who died on the 8th inst. at Jhansi, N.W.P., India, aged forty-four, entered the Service in July, 1866, obtaining his lieutenantancy in April, 1871; captaincy in April, 1878; majority in December, 1881; lieutenant-colonelcy in May, 1886; colonelcy in May, 1890, and has been in command since August last. Colonel Tower served in the Egyptian War of 1882 as brigade-major at Alexandria from August 25th to October 10th, receiving the medal and the Khedive's star.

COLONEL W. COCKELL, lately commanding the 16th (Bedfordshire) Regiment, and who served with the 14th Regiment at the siege and capture of Bhurtpore in 1825-26, for which he received a medal, died on the 9th inst. at 5, Queen's-parade, Bath, in his eighty-sixth year.

THE attention of a contemporary has been drawn to the fact that whilst the traffic of the North-Western Railway is falling away, grain arrives daily in Rawalpindi by country carts from districts served by the railway. Thus from Hussan Abdal, some thirty miles distant, situated so that it taps the fertile Hurreepore valley, it is cheaper to send grain by cart than to employ the railway or pay its rates. Other instances may be given, but this one is forcible enough, as the Rawalpindi district is by no means well supplied with carts.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COLONEL A. M. PHILLIPS, Staff Corps, has been permitted to reside out of India from or after the 13th proximo.

COLONEL W. LUCKHARDT, C.B., A.D.C., Staff Corps, has been permitted to reside out of India from or after the 12th December, 1890.

SECOND-LIEUTENANT W. P. JOHNSON has been appointed Captain in the 2nd Battalion B.B. and C.I. Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps.

MAJOR B. L. P. REILLY, Staff Corps, Assistant Commissary-General, third class, has been granted leave for one hundred and eighty-two days.

THE undermentioned officers have been permitted by the Secretary of State for India to return to duty:—Surgeon-General W. M. Webb, Medical Staff; Major F. W. Snell, Staff Corps; and Colonel S. B. Miles, Staff Corps.

LIEUT. W. F. NEWNHAM, 2nd Battalion Lancashire Fusiliers, officiating Squadron Officer 6th Bombay Cavalry, and Lieutenant C. M. Cockcroft, 1st Battalion Loyal North Lancashire Regiment, officiating Wing Officer Meywar Bheel Corps, have been admitted to the Bombay Staff Corps.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season report for the past week:—Rainfall for the season insufficient in parts of Broach, Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Satara, and Dharwar. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing in several districts. Standing crops damaged by locusts in 3 talukas of Kurrachee and 2 of Nasik, and by insects in 1 taluka of Kolaba; cotton in 1 taluka of Surat diseased; crops otherwise good, except in 1 taluka of Nasik and 3 of Ahmednagar, where they are withering for want of sufficient moisture. Fodder scarce in 1 taluka of Khandesh, 2 of Poona, Ahmednagar and Dharwar, 3 of Nasik and Sholapur, and 5 of Satara. Agricultural stock good, except in 3 talukas of Nasik, 1 of Khandesh, and 1 of Ahmednagar.

THE question of constructing new lines for the garrison at Delhi has been under consideration recently between the Lieutenant-Governor and the Commander-in-Chief while they have been on the spot. It appears extremely unlikely that any increase will be made in the present strength of the garrison.

COMING so soon after our expression, says the Lahore paper, of the hope that the opportunity of the meeting of the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Lieutenant-Governor would be taken to consider the advisability of increasing the garrison of Delhi, it is disappointing to hear that, though the opportunity has been taken, a negative decision has been arrived at. It is quite possible that, from a strategic point of view, more troops at Delhi would be no more important than Scindia's garrison in Gwalior; but in the East it is wise to sacrifice a little bare expediency at times for considerations of prestige. Also, though it is quite true that troops could in the event of disturbance be easily dropped into Delhi from Umballa and Meerut, it is equally true that troops in Delhi would forestall the disturbance; and prevention is better than cure. These, however, are obvious considerations, and we may be sure that the weight was given to them by the civil and military authorities: who had, no doubt, excellent reasons for deciding the other way.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.*

Colonel W. F. B. Lawrie has received the following letter from the German Ambassador conveying the thanks of the Emperor of Germany for a copy of the work, "The Presidential Armies of India."

"German Embassy,
"London, December 5th, 1890.

"Dear Colonel Lawrie,—

"With reference to my letter of the 18th August last, I beg to inform you that His Majesty the Emperor and King, my August Sovereign, has been graciously pleased to accept the copy of your work, 'The Presidential Armies of India.'

"At the same time I have great pleasure in conveying to you the Emperor's best thanks for your kind attention in presenting His Majesty with the book.

"Believe me,

"Yours very truly,

"Colonel W. F. B. Lawrie."

"V. HATZFELDT.

FOR want of a proper site the Jubilee Committee at Calicut has hitherto been unable to erect the Town Hall which was to be commemorative of the event; but at last a piece of land has been obtained from Government which is said to fulfil every requirement.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

FACE TO FACE WITH THE MEXICANS.*

"Mexico! Why, it is Italy and France and the best part of Spain tied up together in one bunch of rapturous fragrance!" Such is the land which Miss Gooch now lays open to the English-speaking peoples of the globe in a volume bearing the significant title, "Face to Face with the Mexicans." In these days of much book-making, this talented and adventurous American Senorita may claim to have trodden a path in literature almost, if not altogether, unexplored. It is true there are not wanting works which treat on Mexico; but they deal almost exclusively with the historical aspect of the country, whereas the account before us treats of the people—their habits, manners, customs—as learned from a residence in the midst of this little known land of upwards of seven years.

Assuredly Miss Gooch has plenty to tell. How many people, even in these days of competitive examinations, could give an answer to the simple question, "What is the capital of Mexico?" Who, again, if the answer were given "Toluca," could ransack the pigeon-holes of memory, and produce such a town? Miss Gooch pictures the land which has won her heart in glowing terms of love and admiration. Its climate is perfection; its inhabitants are, if not perfect, at any rate largely endowed with qualities which create admiration alike, as regards the eye and the soul. Nor can it be denied that she has largely made out a claim for friendly consideration towards a race which require to be known to be appreciated—a race which, conservative by custom and natural disposition, presents barriers to the globe-trotter, who sees, but does not understand; who hears, but does not comprehend. For instance—place aux dames—is it not comforting to the fair sex to gather that, no matter what may be a lady's age, even should she have passed the allotted limit of three score years and ten—she is, and always remains "Nina," a term denoting that she is but a child in years? As a set-off for this unquestionable advantage must be recorded the absence of afternoon tea—an institution not yet established within the portals of poor deluded Mexico. Alas! for life without this superb occasion for chatter and scandal! As regards the male sex it must be ranked as an undoubted "score" that reporters, if not conspicuous for their absence, are, at any rate, not ubiquitous and intolerable. Kept within reasonable limits these pests of modern society are a harmless, innocent class, who serve to give a tinge of piquancy to daily life, which, in quiet old Mexico, needs, one would think, a little zest and flavour. Brass bands are, sad to tell, universal; but it is consoling to some degree to learn that the music is rendered in such a way as to leave but little to criticize and much to commend. What a public benefit if only a few of these could be imported into England! Alas! however, for the names prevalent in Mexico! Fancy the agonies of a poor benighted son of Adam called upon to spell—ay, even to pronounce—such a collection of letters as Izmictlanapoch-calocca! Not the least interesting portion of this extremely interesting volume is the account of the aboriginal Indians, one of the few races of the world which, in an age of discontent, are happy and free from the conflicts of capital and labour, strikes being unknown, and the vices of modern civilisation a thing which it has not yet entered the mind of man to conceive.

Altogether, praise is the tribute which honesty must lay at the feet of this talented American Senorita, who, if she writes as a "Yankee"—spelling and laudation of her country reveal her nationality at every turn—has the art of conveying information in a graphic and pleasing shape. As a recherche gift-book at this festive season of the year, few volumes—albeit it is not supposed to be especially adapted for Christmas lore—would compare favourably with "Face to Face with the Mexican."

A RUSSIAN NOVEL.†

An original work of fiction, from the pen of Mrs. Sutherland Edwards, could not be otherwise than graceful and interesting. In undertaking to write a description of the various phases of life that distinguish the Russian Empire from other European countries, Mrs. Edwards possesses the rare advantage of dealing with topics familiar to her from her early girlhood. It was not until after her marriage, shortly subsequent to the coronation of Alexander II., that she visited the pale glimpses of a London moon. She consequently speaks Russ with as much fluency and grammatical propriety as the English language, so that many of the scenes she depicts are drawn from personal knowledge and experience. That remark, indeed, is not strictly applicable to the very picturesque vignettes of life in

* "Face to Face with the Mexicans." By Fanny Chambers Gooch. (Sampson Low, Marston and Co.)

† "The Secret of the Princess. A Tale of Country, Camp, Court, Convict, and Cloister Life in Russia." By Mrs. Sutherland Edwards. (Chapman and Hall.)

Sebastopol during the siege. Mrs. Edwards does not pretend to have been present in person during the bombardment of the beleaguered fortress, but as a resident of Moscow she was inevitably brought into contact with wounded officers absent on sick leave, with Sisters of Charity, and with curiosity-mongers of all classes. Some admirable chapters, also, are devoted to Siberia and, incidentally, to Mangolia—a convict, one of her dramatis personæ having escaped through multitudinous difficulties to Shanghai, whence Love, the deceiver, led him back to Moscow and a violent death. The novel opens with the departure from Moscow of Princess Volhouski, accompanied by her youthful son and two still more youthful daughters, who return to their late father's estate, situated some six hours of diligence-travelling from the ancient capital of Russia. A few charming sketches of pastoral life are thus drawn into the more momentous scheme, and constitute the foundation of Mrs. Edwards's exceedingly pretty novel. Readers who have a craving for sensational effects may perchance be disappointed that "gory beds" are not supplied in sufficient numbers to gratify their morbid appetites, though most men, and even some women, will acknowledge that their blood has been made to creep quite as coldly as if the Fat Boy in Pickwick had taken them in hand. The plot, it cannot be denied, is somewhat thin, but it reminds one of a silken thread strung with the bright, brilliant beads of a kindly, genial, wholesome imagination. Mrs. Edwards's two pleasant little volumes should be in great request at all circulating libraries; nor are we aware of any reason why they should not be purchased as household treasures even in these impecunious times. A thing of beauty, it should be remembered, is a joy for ever; and it is in that light that we have pleasure in recommending Mrs. Edwards's charming narrative to the considerable circle which, if we do not flatter ourselves, we have the privilege of influencing to their own advantage. Quite accidentally we have omitted to dwell upon the adventures of Pau Tarnouski, once upon a time a wealthy Polish nobleman, during his compulsory sojourn in Siberia, except in quite a superficial and perfunctory manner. The conscript has a marked character of his own, which is sketched with great delicacy and truthfulness. He is, in short, one of the most interesting personages delineated by Mrs. Edwards, though we do not pretend to admire the individual, or to regret that we were not favoured with his acquaintance during his hurried passage through the vale of tears. The "Secret of the Princess" is not at all mysterious. It may be divined from within a very few chapters, and it is never a matter of curiosity from first to last. The sad fate of her only son Sergius, and the love-passages of her two daughters, one of whom, by the way, marries an Englishman, will exercise a greater influence over Mudie's subscribers than the somewhat fatuous conduct of the Princess, who beheld a ghost in every cabbage-plant.

In the Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) Dr. Maguire continues his able criticisms on the American War of 1861-65; Captain Cyprian Bridge gives another instalment of his interesting account of "Six Months with a Russian Family"; and Rear-Admiral Colomb returns to the subject of "Naval Warfare," which he has been treating so ably in former numbers. It is pleasant to welcome again the pen and pencil of the "War Correspondent," the genial Irving Montague; and "Some Lessons from the Franco-Chinese War," by Lieutenant the Hon. H. N. Shore, R.N., will not be found dull reading even outside of the Services. The other purely professional articles are, no doubt, well up to the high standard which the Editor has always aimed at in selecting his contributors, and the illustrations retain their character.

The United Service Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) keeps up well to the good form it at once assumed under its present management. The present number contains a variety of articles, some of which will be interesting to other than professional readers; for instance, the conjectures hazarded by Admiral Sir George Elliot as to the causes which led to the loss of H.M.S. Serpent; General Strange's very able paper on the Canadian Pacific Railway; "Some Unpublished Letters of Lord Rodney," by Mr. Lloyd Sanders; and last, but not least, the chapter concluding the able series of papers on "National Insurance," which Sir George Tryon has been contributing for some months past to this old and popular magazine.

THE Gazetta de Portugal, the organ of the late Prime Minister of Portugal, states in regard to the electioneering rights or privileges conceded to the Goanese, that it would be far more profitable to them if they applied themselves to agriculture and industry instead of wasting their time and resources in squabbles after elections for representatives to the House of Deputies in Lisbon.

INDIAN INVESTMENTS.

OUR counsel to British investors to seek a safe and profitable field in India finds illustration in rather unexpected form in the Kaiser-i-Hind of Bombay. Possibly our Lancashire friends may feel that the Bombay writer proffers his advice in somewhat rude fashion; and, as they may decline to accept it, we will give the benefit of it to others, who need not be piqued by the form in which the really cogent argument and inducement is proffered. But we must premise that this moral from Bombay comes as a tag or Parthian shot after an exceedingly interesting statistical comparison between the textile industries of Great Britain and India respectively. It is pointed out that, whereas there are 2,538 cotton factories in the United Kingdom, there are only 108 in all India, whence so large a proportion of the raw cotton supply of Lancashire is drawn. As to the comparison in millions of spindles and looms the figures are too vast for us to trouble with; but the writer reduces it in this comprehensible contrast thus: whereas in the United Kingdom there is a spindle to nearly every eighth man, India "is so abjectly steeped in poverty that it can only manage to possess one spindle for nearly one hundred of its population." Without stopping to consider the qualitative value (as chemists say) of this comparison, we may, in passing, remark that it is gratifying to learn that the new industry has so far progressed that one hundred of its inhabitants have even one (steam-driven) spindle amongst them. Now for the Bombay writer's indignant reproaches, and his invitation to British investors, which, we must confess, seems to have been indicted—with incidental reference to proposed factory legislation—more in anger than in sorrow, and in anything but seductive tone, as regards the Manchester men; but, "let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung":—

When the Government of India is puzzled at the problem of how to find employment for the masses in the congested districts of the empire, the Secretary of State in his wisdom is doing his best (is he really?) to put a pressure on the Government to shackle Indian industrial labour and throw out of employment some of those who are enabled to eke out a bare existence! If the Holt, Halletts and the James Macleans and the Philistines of Manchester would only honestly digest the hard facts which the industrial condition discloses they would be heartily ashamed of dinning in season and out of season, as they do now, the so-called hardships of the Indian factory operative, and demanding an amended factory legislation unsuited to the requirements of this country. On the contrary, we are of opinion that they would really serve the interests of India by sinking their plethora of surplus capital in this country for the growth and expansion of textile manufactures of all descriptions, rather than advancing it to insolvent Republican States of the West or sinking it in bogus and unprofitable concerns—a hit—a palpable hit!). Manchester, if it really means to improve her material prospects, could not resort to a better country than India for the employment of its capital. The field for the expansion and progress of cotton, woollen, and other textile factories is almost virgin—(think of that!). The influx of silver it may pour in, for the establishment of such mills would be an infinitely more efficacious, safer, and healthier method of establishing a stable ratio between the relative value of that metal and gold than all the nostrums which it from time to time puts forward for the improvement of exchange, and, as a consequence, of its cotton trade. Its sincerity for genuine philanthropy will also stand a better test, in so far as the establishment of the factories proposed would find employment for a portion of the population who find no employment now. Thus Manchester, by the investment of its surplus capital in the industrial development of India, will not benefit itself, but benefit the country and its people also. It will benefit the State, too, in the proportion that the larger importation of its surplus capital in silver assists in steadying the ratio of silver and gold. It is, therefore, much to be wished that Manchester will desist from further decrying Indian labour, and at the same time changing its venue of activity. We earnestly wish that the Government of India, too, will direct the attention of the Secretary of State to the desirability of the introduction of such capital here. India's material salvation will ultimately lie in the substantial assistance which England can render to her till she is in a position to prosper and repay that capital with interest.

Private enterprise should be invited to embark its energy and resources in this line, and there can be no doubt as to the ultimate advantages arising from it.

Here it may be well to observe that a similar invitation to British investors—based on an exact statement of the financial results of the English-managed cotton factories of India—and one expressed in more businesslike form, is presented in an article in the Bombay Gazette (Summary of of Nov. 22nd, pp. 12, 13), to which we invite the attention of our Anglo-Indian readers, and any other possible investors.

INDIAN MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY.

The directors of this company, in their report to be submitted to the tenth ordinary half-yearly meeting, on the 19th inst., at the Cannon-street Hotel, states:—The length of railway worked for public traffic during and throughout the half-year was 734'36 miles, which comprises 677'35 miles of lines included in the contract with the Secretary of State for India, and 57'11 miles, forming the Bhopal State Railway, which is worked by the company under agreement with Government. This mileage represents the length of the whole of the Indian Midland system within the points at which it connects with other railways, viz., with the Great Indian Peninsular Railway at Itarsi; with the Rajputana-Malwa State Railway at Agra Cantonment, and with the East Indian Railway at Cawnpore and Manikpur. The Indian Midland trains are also worked by arrangements with other companies over a further aggregate distance of 19'19 miles, which is made up of the links giving through connection with the systems beyond Agra Fort and Tundla, and beyond Cawnpore and Manikpur. The gross receipts for the half-year were Rs. 17,41,308-9-2. The expenditure was in the ratio of 76'13 per cent. to the receipts, and amounted to Rs. 13,25,606-11-5. The balance of Rs. 4,15,701-13-9, representing net earnings, has been paid over to the Government in accordance with the provisions of the contract. The noticeable feature in the earnings is the falling off in the receipts from the carriage of the company's materials, as naturally arising with the completion of the railway. Omitting the earnings from this source from both periods, the receipts for the past half-year show a gross increase from public traffic on the corresponding period in 1889 of Rs. 6,48,446, of which coaching and goods have contributed about equal parts. The goods train miles run amounted to 300,670, and the receipts per goods train mile to Rs. 3-1-5. The goods and coaching train miles together were 576,483, and the average receipt per train mile on the gross receipts was Rs. 3-0-4. The expenditure per train mile was Rs. 2-4-9. The following remarks bearing upon the cost of maintenance, which stands at the high rate of Rs. 634-10-2 per mean mile open, are from a report by the agent and chief engineer, Mr. A. C. Cregeen:—The expenditure amounts to Rs. 4,29,872 against Rs. 407,975 for the second half of 1889 and Rs. 2,11,407 for the first half of that year. In the first half of 1889 there were only 469-05 miles of line open, against 677'35 miles in the first half of 1890. The expenditure in the first half of 1889 did not cover special renewals to ballast or heavy repairs to banks due to settlement during the rains of that year, the cost of which fell upon the second half-year and the first half of 1890. Since then, heavier rains than any that have occurred for many years past in this part of India have been experienced, the fall having been 63'74 inches in 1890, against 38-88 in the preceding year, producing further settlements in the banks, and necessitating still further renewals of ballast, &c., so that it will not be until 1891 that exceptional expenditure under the head of maintenance of way and works will probably disappear. We are, moreover, obliged to maintain a good running road, and I would here instance a case which illustrates the great advantage that has already been experienced from keeping the ballast well up to the standard section. When the down mail train was derailed in the 94th mile on June 24th, 1890, the tender and every carriage left the rails; and, although the speed could not at the time of derailment have been less than forty miles an hour, not a single passenger was seriously shaken, the transfer of the carriages from the rails to the ballast being so easy that the driver re-remained for some time unaware of what had happened. Had not the line been fully ballasted at this place it is almost certain that there would have been a considerable loss of life and property. The capital account shows a total amount of £6,706,116 8s. to have been received for the purposes of the undertaking at June 30th, 1890. The expenditure to the same date amounts to £6,145,437 17s. 5d., and the balance of £560,678 10s. 7d. includes cash, stores, and expenditure unappropriated at that date to final heads of account. The attention of the proprietors is called to the change of the company's offices to Copthall House, Copthall-avenue, London, E.C.

JOLAI (ASSAM) TEA COMPANY.

The directors of the Jokai (Assam) Tea Company, in submitting the interim report on the results of the present season, remark:—Telegraphic advice received to-day (Dec. 8), intimates that the season was about to close with a crop total of about 2,300,000 lbs., being less than the quantity estimated for by the managers. The falling-off in quantity is chiefly due to much finer plucking having been pursued on four divisions of the property. The weather was also most unfavourable, having been abnormally cold and wet throughout from May to September. Of this crop one-half (1,150,000 lbs.) has been sold to date, averaging 1s. 0½d. per lb., against an average of 11½d. for the same quantity sold last season. The directors, considering these results highly satisfactory, have resolved to pay the usual interim dividend of 5 per cent., free of income-tax, on the paid-up capital of the company.

CHAMPION REEF GOLD MINING COMPANY OF INDIA.

The report to be presented to the shareholders at the second ordinary general meeting to be held at the Cannon-street Hotel on Friday, the 19th inst., at half-past three, states:—The accounts include the total expenditure of the company from the date of its incorporation on the 3rd of June, 1889, a period of about sixteen months. The capital account shows that of the 90,500 shares offered for subscription, 72,995 were taken up, and 17,505 remain unissued. The sum of 17s. 6d. has at present been called up, leaving 2s. 6d. per share, equal to £9,124 7s. 6d. uncalled. Of the cash subscribed, £22,500 was paid as part purchase money for the property, £12,180 10s. 7d. has been laid out on machinery account, and £23,020 18s. 1d. has gone in the working expenses of the mines. The machinery supplied consists of pumping and winding engines with the necessary accessories, together with a complete rock-drilling plant. Good provision has, therefore, been made for the development of the reef. Mining operations have been actively carried on in both sections of the company's property, which, as the shareholders are aware, comprises the blocks acquired from the Mysore Gold and the Gold Fields of Mysore companies respectively. The latter, known as the Coromandel Section, is being developed by the sinking of two shafts named the Coromandel and Prospect shafts. No satisfactory results have yet been obtained from the work at the former shaft, but at Prospect shaft the appearances are much more favourable, and quartz has been met with yielding from 15 dwts. to 1 oz. of gold per ton. Although it is yet too early to say that a profitable mine has been found here, it will be seen from a perusal of the superintendent's report that the prospects are decidedly encouraging. The Mysore section of the company's property is situated immediately between the Mysore Mine to the south and the Ooregum Mine to the north, with the champion lode so successfully worked in both these mines coursing through its entire length of 3,490 ft. The mining operations on the ground consist of the sinking of four shafts. Two of these, Carmichael's and Ribblesdale's, being situated in the northern part of the property near the Ooregum mine; and the other two, Garland's and Dalyell's, in the southern or Mysore end of the ground. All these shafts have been sunk vertically, with the object of intersecting the lode below the ancient workings. The respective depths of these shafts at the date of the last report were as follows:—Carmichael's, 204 ft.; Ribblesdale's, 180 ft. 6 in.; Garland's, 174 ft.; Dalyell's, 132 ft. In Dalyell's shaft the lode was intersected a short time ago, and, although at the point of intersection the reef was disordered and somewhat broken up, pieces of quartz were taken out containing visible gold. The superintendent is of opinion that in the course of sinking, when the lode gets out of the influence of this disturbance, it will be found to improve in value. In neither of the other shafts has the lode yet been intersected; but in two of them, Carmichael's and Garland's, it is expected that the reef will shortly be met with, as, according to the survey, the shafts are nearly down to the required depth. The lode should also be intersected in Ribblesdale's shaft in the course of a few months. The mining operations are, therefore, now reaching a most interesting stage. As we pointed out in the prospectus, the Mysore section of the company's property derived its prospective value from its situation between the Mysore and Ooregum, the two richest mines on the Colar Gold Field, the property having the same lode and similar surface indications. It is satisfactory, therefore, to know that these two mines have since improved in value, and the monthly returns have been greatly augmented. The prospects of the Champion Reef Mine are certainly as good, if not better, than at the time the company was formed, and the directors confidently look forward to satisfactory results in the future. The directors, with great regret, have to report the decease, since the last general meeting, of their esteemed colleague, Sir Robert Dalyell. It is not intended at present to fill the vacancy on the Board. Two directors, Sir James Carmichael, Bart., and W. G. Probyn, Esq., retire at the forthcoming general meeting by rotation. They are eligible, and offer themselves for re-election. The auditors, Messrs. Cooper, Brothers and Co., also retire, but are eligible for re-election.

THE HYDERABAD (DECCAN) COMPANY.

The report of the Board of Directors, which was presented at the ordinary general meeting of shareholders on the 15th inst., states that the agreement between His Highness the Nizam, the company and the concessionaires in the form settled by the Secretary of State for India in Council, was executed under date 2nd January, 1890. The concessionaires and their friends, without delay, subscribed for the £150,000 of deferred shares provided for by the agreement, and paid up the whole amount thereof in cash. The immediate payment up of so large a sum was not needed for the business of the company, but it was requested by the Board and acceded to by the subscribers for the shares, in order to remove all possible objection to the granting of the mining leases for which the Board were about to ask. The granting of these leases is absolutely essential to the successful prosecution of the company's undertaking. The £300,000 which has been paid to the Board in cash, by subscribers for the original and deferred shares, is more than sufficient for the preliminary or prospecting stage of the company's operations. But, for the full development of the mines, to the leases of which the company is entitled, or even of a few of the most important of them, larger amounts are necessary. Those amounts will be raised without difficulty as soon as leases are granted on fair and equitable terms in accordance with the concession; but it will be obvious to the shareholders that until leases are granted, until it can be stated with certainty and precision what are the royalties to be paid, and what the obligations to be fulfilled, until it is known, in short, that the company is in possession of mines, under a title which leaves no uncertain points to be settled, the Board would not be justified in appealing in any form to the public for further capital. The Board next proceeds to give a short statement of the operations carried on in the mining fields. The deliveries of coal have gone on increasing, being 3,844 tons for the six months ended 30th June, 1888, 10,851 tons for that ended 31st Dec., 1888; 13,424 tons for that ended 30th June, 1889; 29,747 tons for that ended 31st Dec., 1889; and 50,331 tons for that ended 30th June, 1890. To the above have to be added the coal consumed at the colliery and the stock in hand at 30th of June, 1890, estimated at the value of £3,000. The Board have made a contract with the Southern Mahratta Railway Company, and are in negotiation with the Madras Railway Company, who have taken some coal on trial. Extensive works have been carried on at the Partyal Diamond Fields, but here again the company are waiting for the approval of the draft lease, and the same remark applies to the Singareni Iron Fields. His Highness the Nizam has not yet appointed a director in pursuance of the power given him for that purpose. The directors who retire by rotation are Lord Lawrence and Mr. Calvin, who offer themselves for re-election.

INDIAN GOLD MINES COMPANY.

On Dec. 8th an extraordinary general meeting of this company took place in Glasgow, Mr. John Wilson, M.P., presiding. The Chairman moved a resolution approving of the existing working agreement between their company and the Southern India Gold Mining Company. The Rev. Dr. Robertson seconded, and the resolution was approved. The Chairman said that the scheme of reconstruction of the company was submitted at the last meeting by the directors after careful consideration, and was recommended for adoption as being the most satisfactory in the circumstances. He then moved that the company be voluntarily wound up. The manager's report continued to bear out what was stated at the last meeting as to the favourable prospects connected with the reef in No. 11 tunnel. The resolution was agreed to. In thanking the shareholders, Mr. Wilson further observed that the prospects of the company had never been more satisfactory.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE
Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)
WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL
REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased.
Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."— DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DIS-COVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLO-DYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE
INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr.
Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.
This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—
See The Times, July 18th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,
London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient.
Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETE-LY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."
From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa, and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, Lis-tencency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRU-PULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists,

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regiments Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal-bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced cases they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 6th December; from Allahabad and Madras to the 4th December; and from Calcutta to the 3rd December.

THE VICEROY, after rather a lengthened visit at Agra, during which he opened the new Waterworks, left by special train for Benares, where he arrived at nine o'clock on Thursday morning.

THE Governor of Bombay will entertain the Czarewitch at Ahmedabad on New Year's Day, as well as the following days.

THE Report of the Factory Commission, just published, states that the female operatives have no desire to see their present hours of labour shortened. On the contrary, they have often expressed themselves strongly against any interference which will subject them to the risk of being turned out and deprived of their means of livelihood.

WITH regard to the proposal to draw a distinction between young persons and adults, the Commission, after anxious consideration, recommend no such classification, being of opinion that difficulty of protecting young persons should be met by raising the maximum age of children to fourteen.

THE Commission thinks that nine hours' labour in a day too much for Indian children, except where the shift-system prevails. In Calcutta Jute Mills, where children as a rule work nine hours in shifts, and for only four days in the week they are not overworked. Outside Bengal in the shift-system they recommend an extreme half-time to be fixed for children at 6½ hours.

ON the important subject of holidays the recommendation is that the proposed law should fix one day's rest out of seven, or fifty-two holidays in the year, for all operatives, exceptions to be made in the case of certain industries and at certain seasons. The day of rest suggested for general observance is Sunday.

AS a body the adult operatives themselves are not desirous that the legal working day should be fixed, but that the present general day—namely, from daylight to dusk, should be continued.

A COMMISSION, consisting of Mr. Beaman, C.S., and Captain Sladen, has been appointed by the Political Agent in Kattywar to inquire into all the allegations made in relation to the Porebunder Public Works Department.

THE St. Andrew's Dinner at Calcutta was a great success.

THE Government of Hyderabad has at last decided to hold a regular departmental inquiry into the alleged treasury frauds before taking further judicial action against any of the accused.

THE three divisions of the Zhob Valley Railway Survey have concentrated at Apozai, but move out again very soon. So far the work done has been most satisfactory, a good alignment having been obtained over the Mektarzai Kotal.

A SMALL party of the Suleiman Khels attacked some coolies at work in the neighbourhood of Apozai last week, killing five and wounding as many. The tribesmen have otherwise been on their best behaviour, and have not interfered with the Survey detachments.

THE 2nd Battalion 3rd Goorkhas, who were proceeding up the Irrawaddy on their way to the Northern China country, have been halted near Minhla, cholera having appeared in their ranks. A considerable number of cases have occurred, but the actual mortality has fortunately not been large.

MR. MACKENZIE has arrived in Rangoon to take over the Chief Commissionership from Sir Charles Crosthwaite.

A STORM of rain has swept over Beluchistan and Sind. Along the Hurnai Railway between three and four inches of rain fell in two days, with the natural consequence that the line was breached. Railway communication between Hurnai and Quetta is being restored.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN has arrived in Quetta, his work in connection with the Khidderzai Expedition having been satisfactorily concluded.

THE vacancy in the Allahabad High Court caused by the death of Mr. Justice Brodhurst has been filled by Mr. G. E. Knox, the present Legal Remembrancer.

LATEST reports from Madras state that not only in Tanjore, but in Tinnivelly, Kurnool, and Chingleput there is likely to be scarcity owing to the failure of the rains. Further west, in Malabar, the position is even more serious, as the crops are very poor.

THE MARCHIONESS OF LANSDOWNE presided at a meeting of the Provincial Committee of the Dufferin Fund held in the Viceroy's camp, at which the Lieutenant-Governor and several members of the Committee were present. A variety of matters connected with administrative questions were discussed and disposed of, and the Committee separated after recording a vote of thanks to her Excellency for having consented to preside.

COLONEL M. GERARD, Central India Horse, will be attached to the Czarewitch's party during their Indian tour. Captain Grover, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, and Lieutenant Newnham, 10th Bombay Infantry, have been selected for similar duty. They are both Russian scholars.

THE official inspection of the Delhi-Kalka Railway will take place early in January. It has now been definitely settled to open the line on February 1st.

COLONEL BROWN, V.C., Superintending Engineer, on return from England, has taken up charge of the Agra Circle from Major Pulford, who goes on leave for two months.

THE second phase of the operations at the Attock Camp has had to be abandoned owing to the rain.

THE MAHARAJA OF PATIALA has remitted four lakhs of rupees of his tenants' debts, to commemorate the Viceroy's visit.

LORD CONNEMARA made over charge of the Government of Madras to the Hon. Mr. Garstin, Member of Council, on December 6th.

COLONEL W. J. MUIR, Political Agent, Ulwar, is about to quit his appointment, probably during the current month.

THE office of the Deputy Secretary in the Home Department has been sanctioned. Mr. J. P. Hewitt, at present Under Secretary, will be appointed as the first incumbent.

WHEN the Delhi-Kalka Railway is opened, on Feb. 1st, all the staff will be provided by the East Indian Railway Company, except the engineers. The latter will consist of one Executive Engineer and three assistants, with Mr. Way, who has built the line, as an additional Engineer. After one year the whole staff will be absorbed by the bigger Company.

AT a farewell dinner given by the Maharajah of Jeypore to Colonel Prideaux on the occasion of his approaching departure for Cashmere, the latter announced that the Maharajah has just given a donation of £20,000 to the Imperial Institute in London, which the Prince of Wales has been graciously pleased to accept.

THE grand review of the Army engaged in the Attock Manœuvres came off with complete success. Amongst the visitors were several representatives of the frontier tribes. A general order issued by the Adjutant-General states that the result of the work that has been done in camp is extremely valuable.

THE CZAREWITCH, with a suite of twenty officers, will be the guests of his Highness the Nizam in Aurangabad from Dec. 26th to Dec. 31st. During that period they will visit the Caves of Ellora and Ajunta, and the Fort of Dowlatabad.

NOTES.

THE parting words of Sir Steuart Bayley, as telegraphed by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, are of a gloomy character for those who look to an Indian civilian's career as lightened up by the rainbow hues of hope. According to Sir Steuart there is nothing now to be got from such a career but disappointments and the dust of years. There is no pagoda tree now to yield golden fruit or even grateful shelter. "All is barren, from Dan to Beersheba."

CAN this be true? Are we Anglo-Indians of the past content to believe that now in the land of our early exile—"Every day the amenities of life grow less, the isolation more painful and complete"? The difficulties of finding house-room may be more serious, but is it also the case that "leisure for study or amusement is becoming more unattainable"? Is Indian official life now like Mr. Mantalini's as described by himself—"one demnition grind?"

SIR STEUART BAYLEY says so:—"The pressure of work is enormously aggravated by the number of available officers being diminished, and all the work has not only to be judged by a constantly-rising standard of excellence, but has, moreover, to be done under the glare of hostile, and frequently malignant, criticism." We can understand where the shoe pinches in the last complaint; but we should have thought that the late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal would have been of "sterner stuff," like some of his predecessors, who let the Native Press diatribes pass by them like the idle wind. It may seem to some that the honest performance of duty should be its only reward, but it has been too often the lot of the Anglo-Indian official to learn that truth. And to be conscious of it ought rather to brighten than to sadden farewell words when bidding India good-bye.

THE Pioneer, in alluding to the death of Sir Rivers Thompson, says:—"His courage and firmness of purpose over the Ilbert Bill, the dangers likely to arise from which he was the first to see, contrasted strikingly with the vacillation and weakness of more than one member of the Government, and unquestionably his consistent opposition to the measure had much to do with its rejection. In noticing his career upon his retirement from the Service, in the spring of 1887, we bore full testimony to the value of the work he did during his thirty-seven years' stay in India. As we then said, his mental characteristics were balance of mind, practical wisdom, common-sense, sobriety of judgment; he was not an epoch-maker, but a conscientious, hard-working official, who knew his plain duty, and did it fearlessly in whatever position he was placed. As to his personal character, his inflexible honesty of purpose, his strong moral courage, his manliness, and his entire freedom from any craving for notoriety were worthy of lasting remembrance."

COLONEL PARRY NISBET, in leaving India for a time and "perhaps the Punjab for ever," does so under a shower of compliments and good wishes from his many friends in that Province. The Civil and Military Gazette devotes a long article, which we cannot find space for to-day, to the record of the long and good services of this "Punjab officer," concluding thus:—"We can only say that—in view of the character and services of Colonel Nisbet, and the fact that for nearly thirty years he has, in every rank of the Civil Commission, fulfilled towards the Punjab and its people the most cherished traditions of those Civil officers who built up the Province after its annexation, and, largely by their personal influence, gave it the importance it now holds, and, we trust, will never lose among the Provinces of India—we hope to welcome back Colonel Nisbet to the Punjab. Indeed, many will say, and more will think, that if, on the occasion of the next vacancy, Colonel Nisbet is not selected to fill the highest appointment in the Province, that a candidate will have been passed over whose local knowledge, personal influence, popularity with the Natives, and long, important, and approved service mark him out as eminently deserving this high favour of Her Majesty and her Viceroy in India."

THE "pious memory of Saint Andrew" has been honoured in the usual way in Calcutta. The Englishman devotes over thirteen columns of close type to reporting the speeches at the St. Andrew's Dinner; and, although we cannot confess to have read them, we can say, from a hurried glance, that they look very like speeches which we have heard at Calcutta from Scotchmen on previous anniversaries of their patron saint. There is no doubt the old allusion of the unalterable and ever-present love of Scotchmen for their country—to which they do not always desire to go back, except on St. Andrew's Dinner nights.

AND then the assertion that the world, if not created by a Scotchman, has been altogether in debt to Scotchmen for any virtues within it, was no doubt as boldly made as ever, and as loudly cheered as in the days of long ago. The guest of the evening was Sir Charles Elliot, and he was thoughtful enough to remind his entertainers that the rest of mankind who are not Scotchmen may possibly be "God's creatures also"—a statement which the "Brither Scots" were good enough to receive without protestation.

BUT one who signs himself "An Outer Barbarian" writes to the Press, saying that the old Scottish instinct for harrying their neighbours is not extinct, for Mr. Mackay (the Chairman at the dinner) calmly appropriated to his "late lamented clansman," Mr. Aberigh-Mackay, Longfellow's lines:—

"And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day,
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away."

The Chairman did give the verse as his clansman's; but it was cruel of the paper in which the "Outer Barbarian's" protest appears to head the same "Scotch Marauding." But then the paper was the Englishman.

THE percentage of convictions for the whole province of Bengal fell from 56.0 in 1857, and 51.7 in 1888, to 49.1 in 1889. The fact shows that the chances of the escape of an accused person formally committed for trial by an investigating officer is greater than the chances of his conviction. Yet Sir Steuart Bayley takes exception to the view of the Government of India that the Native magistracy deal more leniently than they should with criminals.

IN consequence of the large tract of accretion to the shore on the south side of the southern arm of the Madras harbour, which is likely to become very valuable property, not being properly taken care of, and being consequently used by private individuals for rope-twisting, weaving and other purposes, the Collector of Madras has been directed to forbid all use of the land by private persons for any purpose whatever, except under his special permission and license.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 21.

The Madras meeting to protest against raising the age of consent in marriage, which ended in a fiasco, as described last week, was held again on Thursday. Sir Madhava Rao was absent, but he sent a memorandum stating his views. The business was proceeded with quietly. It was unanimously resolved:—"That this meeting recognises the evils of early consummation, but believes that such consummation rarely, if ever, takes place in the Madras Presidency, and protests against the proposed change as unnecessarily mischievous, and calculated to disturb the people's minds." It was also resolved to send a copy of the resolution to the Supreme Government.

It seems probable that the strong and general feeling against legislative action in this matter is due, not so much to a sentimental affection for old customs, as to the dread of police interference which pervades all classes of Native society. The coming congress might do some practical good if it would discuss and thresh out the whole subject, but the Indian Mirror, the principal organ of the Bengalese agitators, expresses a hope that it will not take up the question, as being neither political, economical, nor even social.

The examination of the ruins of the house, the falling in of which caused a terrible and fatal accident in Bombay last week, showed that none of the main walls were more than one brick thick, and that the materials were old and bad. Although the house was built only four years ago, many of the bricks could be crumbled into powder in the hand. It appears that there is no law to prevent a person in building houses in Bombay from using inferior materials, and making the walls of any thickness. Matters are not much better in Calcutta. Evidently more stringent rules are urgently wanted.

Some remarks which fell from Sir Stuart Bayley in his speech at the Civil Service farewell dinner given to him may be interesting to young men contemplating a career in the Indian Civil Service, and also to the public from the light they throw on the policy too often pursued during the late régime in Bengal. Contrasting the life of an Indian civilian now with that of thirty-five years ago, when he entered the service, he said:—"Every day the amenities of life at many stations grow less, the isolation becomes more painful and complete, the difficulties of house-room more serious, leisure for study or amusement more unattainable, and the possibilities of making a rupee do its old work smaller; and side by side with these the pressure of work is enormously aggravated by the number of available officers being diminished, and all the work has not only to be judged by a constantly rising standard of excellence, but has, moreover, to be done under the glare of hostile and frequently malignant criticism." Every Bengal civilian will admit the truth of these remarks, and probably not a few will add that their difficulties are enormously increased by the ready ear too often lent by the Government to every wild charge brought against its officers by any scurrilous Native journal.

Nothing definite has been settled regarding the date of the despatch of the Black Mountain expedition. It is now apparent that the punishment inflicted two years ago was not sufficient. The fact that during the recent military promenade Sir J. W. McQueen's camp was fired into, and that armed tribesmen made a hostile demonstration, shows that the Black Mountain still retains its character of being the home of some of the most unruly and hostile of the frontier tribes. The expedition will be purely punitive, and although not large will be strong enough to crush all resistance. Notwithstanding rumours to the contrary, the Government has no intention of annexing the country, nor any desire to burden itself with so troublesome and useless a possession. After the tribes have been thoroughly punished, the force will return to British territory.

A small punitive expedition is also to be sent against the Miranzais, near the Kohat border, who have not paid the fines inflicted on them for the outrages they have committed.

BURMA

RANGOON, DEC. 20.

Mr. F. W. R. Fryer, C.S.I., Financial Commissioner in Burma, will relinquish his office in March next, and will revert to the Punjab, his original province. Mr. Fryer's departure from the district is a loss to Burma. He has established a financial system, and has systematized the revenue administration in Upper Burma, both of which were in a state of chaos when Mr. Fryer assumed office. The revenue of the province under his management has vastly increased, and Burma, as a whole, now pays its way. Mr. Fryer has always displayed great sympathy with the Burmese people, especially with the peasantry.

Mr. Mackenzie will leave at the end of the month for Upper Burma. He will be absent from Rangoon for two months.

The new expedition against the Chins is apparently to be on a tolerably large scale. One thousand transport ponies and twenty elephants have already been assembled at Kan for the expedition. Kan is very unhealthy.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

AMERICAN CRITICS.

(Pioneer.)

[The most forcible impression which is left on the average mind by Mr. Kipling's works is, says the New York Herald, "the dismalness, insincerity, brutality and utter worthlessness of all classes of British humanity in India."]

We are "insincere," they tell us,
"Brutal," are we? "dismal," "worthless,"

So our cousins very plainly
Shout across the western water
From the land where all are candid,
Gay, sincere, and very worthy
With a worth which knows its value.

Lepel Griffin tells the story
Of the happy life out yonder,
Of the cultured minds of Boston,
Of the bacon of Chicago,
Of the Chinamen of Frisco,
Of the negro of New Orleans,
Of the Red Man and his whiskey
Of the sanctimonious Mormon,
And the innocent revolver,
And the mildly playful bowie.

Rudyard Kipling, too, has told us
As from sea to sea he journeyed,
Of the happy gracious manners
Of the Land of Minchaba,
Of the land of laughing water.
Very grave is our demeanour,
Grave our "average" demeanour,
But we sometimes yield to laughter,
Gay, sincere, if brutal laughter.

When America rebukes us,
From the very mouth of Kipling,
From the mouth of Rudyard Kipling,
For the very sins we cherish;
And quite candidly are proud of,
For brutality, moroseness,
Insincerity, and so on;

Then indeed we ache with laughter.
And the Himalayas echo,
And the Baboo stops to wonder
What on earth the sahib laughs at,
What disturbs the dismal white man.
How should they know where the joke comes—
They, our very distant cousins,
Who are all sincere and happy

In a land which owns no loafers,
Where no Tommy stains the sunshine,
And the women shun flirtation;
There it is, as someone tells us,
"Humbug has a solid vally,"
And the politician labours
For his countrymen's advantage,
And is very, very honest.

There the negro has his franchise,
And John Chinaman is happy,
And the Red Man drinks his whiskey
And the Irishman finds refuge
From the brutal, dismal Balfour,
And the "average observer"
Finds the Anglo-Indian hateful.
Well, he is not such as we are,
And may well misunderstand us,
So we freely laugh, and freely
Bless the Transatlantic critic
Who provokes our sudden laughter
As we think of Rudyard Kipling
And his quiet smile of pleasure
As he reads that we are "brutal,"
"Dismal," "insincere" and "worthless."

CIVIL SERVICE APPOINTMENTS.

(Englishman.)

We are glad to receive an assurance that the report regarding the appointment of Native gentlemen to Civil Service posts is wholly unfounded. The report was that Sir Steuart Bayley, in view of his retirement, had recommended certain Native gentlemen for direct appointment to high posts in the service. Two of these Native officers were named as having been recommended for appointment as District Magistrates, officers who were well-known to be particular friends of his Honour. Moreover, the story, circumstantial to a degree, came from a quarter which has some right to be regarded as authentic. We are now informed, however, that Sir Steuart Bayley has not made any such recommendations, and is not aware that any changes of the kind are contemplated. It is added that he does not intend, and never has intended, to recommend members of the Subordinate Service for such posts as those in question. This statement would be accepted with complete satisfaction, but, it seems, there is still a hint that the possible changes referred to are not altogether imaginary. We are reminded that, of course, the Public Service Commission of 1887 recommended that instead of the Statutory Service, which is closed, a certain proportion of the appointments scheduled as reserved to Covenanted Civilians should by degrees be filled by promotion from the Subordinate Executive and Judicial Services, and that among these were a proportion of District Magistracies and District Judgeships. The reason, it is explained, why this measure has hung fire for three years is that the question, as one of principle, was discussed by the Government of India and the Secretary of State for about two years, and that, having been finally accepted with certain modifications by the latter authority, it has now been referred to local Governments in regard to detailed rules. These rules will have to be passed in due course by the Government of India, and approved by the Secretary of State; but before they reach this stage we trust that they will be made public, so that the Civil Service may learn to what extent it is being sacrificed to the supposed claims of the discredited and disbanded Statutories. So far as the Service and the public are concerned, the Public Service Commission has hitherto been regarded as a dead-letter, and to disinter its proposals at this date is a course as little to be defended as the attempt to carry them into effect by stealth. It would be interesting to know whether the recommendations of that other abortive body, the Finance Committee, are also to be revived, and whether the Government of India means to carry out the suggested reduction of the expenditure on the Simla exodus. We are glad that the misunderstanding in regard to Sir Steuart Bayley has been cleared up, but it can hardly be surprising even to himself that such a misgiving should have arisen in view of the essentially pro-Native character of his administration.

A CURIOUS WORSHIP.

(Pioneer.)

Under the presidency of the Hon. Justice Telang, Rao Saheb B. A. Gupte, Curator, Government Central Book Depot, Bombay, delivered, on the evening of the 1st inst., a lecture on that phase of the view of intemperance which has been considered sacred by the Hindu religion. The lecturer stated that there exists a worship among the Hindus in which drink is considered essential. He called it the Shakumary, and traced it back to the sixth century, proving that Shankaracharya, who flourished after the decline of the Buddhist religion, was possibly the first to spread it, if not to start it. The temple of the goddess Kali at Calcutta, the hermitage of Shringeri, and the temple of the goddess Vindhya-Vasina, near Benares, are the chief centres of the worship, but no town or city is free from the priests who advocate it. Bengal appears to have taken to the goddess-worship more assiduously than any other province. The tenets which sanction the use of alcoholic drinks originate from Shiva, the destroyer of the Hindu Trinity; and the lecturer added that if the Hindus wish to follow the advice of their destroyer they have themselves to blame for the distinctive results! The worship of the goddess is so indecent and immoral that it cannot be described in a public lecture. Rao Saheb Gupte then gave translations of passages from the Sanskrit texts, which proved that the greatest secrecy was enjoined on the votaries, that the enjoyment of wine, flesh, and women were the chief observances, that the object of the worship was to attain religious merit, wealth, mortal desire and salvation. In the mystic symbol Shrichakra was centred the whole of the essence of what is desirable in this as well as in the world to come. Members of all castes are considered as sacred as the Brahmins while in the act performing the "puja." The most appalling feature of the worship is that drinking wine for the whole night and day is said to ensure salvation. "Drink," it is said in one of the commandments

"drink, drink, repeatedly, until you fall to the ground. Rise again, drink still more, and you will have a second birth. Hilarity pleases the goddess, insensibility pleases the god Bhairav, and vomits please all the gods!" There are eleven wines and three spirits described in the second book. The jack fruit, grape, bassia flower, date palm, bastard date palm, palmyra, sugar cane, honey, a reed called Nalkhada, a flower called Madhuk, and cocoa palm have all been utilised by the Hindus for extracting wine; spirits were distilled only from sugar, bassia flower (moura) and flour of cereals. It is said in the Shastras that the Spirit of the moura flower ensures success, that rum ensures salvation, and that spirits from the grapes go so far as to keep the devotees in obtaining a raj or kingdom? That the sight and smell of wine was sufficient for the attainment of mukti. There are sixteen draughts or doses prescribed, each having a verse describing its potency. After thus proving the existence and extent of the vice of intemperance under the protection of religion, Mr. Gupte described the ceremonies in which drink is considered necessary by usage. The birth or christening ceremony, the marriage ceremony, the invitation parties, the Durgapuja or Nabaratna, the Dasera, and the death ceremonies all have their share of the potent liquid. It was further explained that 25 per cent. of the Brahmins, 33 per cent. of the high-class non-Brahmin Hindus, and 80 per cent. of the Sudras and artisans, drink wine with the sanction of religion or of usage. Where, asked the lecturer, is the ground for accusing the British Government (as is the fashion of the day) of introducing the vice of intemperance into this country? It was further shown that the ignorant masses stand more in need of temperance associations than do the educated classes. Among the measures suggested for discouraging or abolishing the worship of the goddess an appeal to the caste was shown to be fraught with danger, as there was an overwhelming majority, in some, on the wrong side, and as the higher ones are now in a state of disintegration, on account of the transition state of the twice-born cases. He advised abstainers to discourage matrimonial connections with families in which the worship of the goddess prevails; asked the high-class modern social clubs to declare the proved insobriety of a member a disqualification; suggested that influential abstainers should not select drunkards for their assistants or clerks; and finally, proved that, of all the measures, the education of the masses through public lectures was, perhaps, the best and most reliable measure to make people appreciate what Milton calls the "sober certainty of waking bliss."

BENGAL.

THE VICEROY'S TOUR.

BENARES, DEC. 4.

This afternoon at three o'clock their Excellencies drove out, escorted by a body of the Ghazipur Light Horse, to lay the foundation-stone of the Ishwari Hospital for Women. They were received at the site by his Highness the Maharajah, and were conducted to a shamiana, in which were assembled a large number of ladies and gentlemen. The President of the Reception Committee read an address, stating the steps taken towards the construction of the hospital, and regretting the difficulty in inducing the citizens of Benares to subscribe for the purpose. The hospital is called after the late Maharajah, and the list of subscribers includes the present Maharajah and the Maharajahs of Bettiah and Vizianagram.

Dr. Hooper, Civil Surgeon, then showed her Excellency the plans of the proposed building. His Excellency the Viceroy then spoke as follows:—

Your Highness, Ladies and Gentlemen,—Lady Lansdowne desires me to tender you her thanks for the address with which you have been good enough to present her. She rejoices to know that the important movement initiated by Lady Dufferin for the provision of medical aid to the women of India is receiving support in this city, which is so closely identified with the national life of the Hindoo community. She wishes to acknowledge her great obligation to the liberality of his Highness the Maharajah, to whose initiative it is certainly due that we are able to meet to-day for the purpose of laying the foundation-stone of the new hospital. That hospital could not have a more appropriate name than that of his Highness the late Maharajah of Benares, whose memory is so affectionately and respectfully cherished by all who know him, whether of Indian or British origin. You have referred in language of regret to the fact that the generous example thus set by his Highness, and followed by the Maharajahs of Bettiah and Vizianagram, has not found as many imitators as you could have wished. Lady Lansdowne shares your desire that the Association should not depend merely on the prince and by the gifts of the illustrious benefactors who have until now been its principal supporters; and she trusts that it time to come the financial stability of the fund will come to rest upon broader foundations. Nothing, however, would be more opposed to Lady Lansdowne's wishes than that this movement should owe its existence to support reluctantly given; nor could anything be further from the intention of the Central Committee than that undue pressure, direct or indirect, should be applied for the purpose of inducing anyone, whether of high or low station, to become a donor or subscriber to the fund. It has been generously supported at the outset by large gifts from the leading chiefs and rulers of India, but we should look forward to the time when the different local institutions will be able to obtain a regular income from local subscribers of smaller amounts. When the immense advantages afforded by these hospitals come to be realised, I feel no doubt that the communities directly benefited by them will see to it that they are properly maintained, and provided with funds. Lady Lansdowne trusts that you may have no difficulty in completing this hospital, and that it will be worthy to take a place by the side of the other institutions of the same kind which the city already possesses. There is certainly no city in India which more requires to be adequately furnished with hospital accommodation than this city, which has to provide, not only for its large resident population, but for the vast concourse of pilgrims who year after flock to its shrines and holy places. Lady Lansdowne cordially wishes success to the new hospital, and will now, with your permission, proceed to lay its foundation-stone.

Her Excellency then spread the mortar, and the stone having been duly lowered, was declared to be "well and truly laid." Their Excellencies then walked through the wards of the Prince of Wales Hospital, and afterwards drove to the Alfred Hall, where a collection of local manufacture was exhibited, and where several artisans were busily employed in prosecuting their various trades.

MADRAS. (Dec. 4.)

THE inaugural meeting of the Public Health Society of Madras was held in the Victoria Hall on Monday. Sir Charles Lawson, one of the vice-presidents, in the absence of Lord Connemara, was in the chair. Dr. King read an excellent inaugural address.

Most of the administrators who are sent out from England to fill Governorships in India, have already held positions of responsibility at home, or figured with some prominence in the political world, so that we are able in some way to guess at their qualifications from their previous performances. This, writes an up-country paper, can scarcely be said to be the case with the new Governor of Madras. We cannot deduce much from the fact that he was elected to represent Chester ten years ago, and was unseated on appeal; but beyond this he has his public career all before him. He has, however, plenty of time to make a reputation, as he is only forty years of age. His lordship is married to a daughter of the Earl of Harewood.

A MADRAS paper says that an excellent new departure has been made by some wise ladies. This is the exchange of P.A.R. cards by post. "Of all the duties entailed upon a social position, perhaps the most exasperating was the devotion of one afternoon after another to driving along our extended roads, leaving cards at this house and that, knowing full well that the persons called upon were doubtless out upon the same errand themselves. Indeed, the reform is almost too sensible to live. It will soon lead to two forms of recognition of acquaintance. 'Mrs. Highcourt only has me on her card-dropping list, and yet, forsooth, she pays proper visits to my husband's deputy's wife!' But the evil has not come yet; for this season our matrons may safely patronise the post office."

LORD CONNEMARA goes to Colombo by the s.s. Clan Grant on Sunday. It is believed he goes on to Europe via Australia and Canada. It appears likely that something will be done to show public appreciation of Lord Connemara's work as Governor.

A SUBSCRIPTION list has been opened here to raise money to purchase a portrait of Lord Connemara for Rs. 3,000. The Hon. Mr. Garstin has headed the list. Mr. Garstin wished to give a farewell dinner to Lord Connemara, but the latter has declined. Lord Connemara goes to Japan.

BOMBAY. (Dec. 6.)

THE Rev. E. J. Bowen, M.A., having completed ten years service, has been promoted to the grade of Senior Chaplain, with effect from the 16th ult.

MR. A. C. TREVOR, C.S., and Colonel E. W. Trevor respectively delivered over and received charge of the office of Commissioner in Sind on the 19th ult.

At the meeting of the Bombay Natural History Society, held on Wednesday, no less than thirty-nine new members were elected, a fact which shows that the popularity of this Society still continues to increase.

AMONGST the passengers who arrived here from Europe by the mail steamer on Sunday were Lady Cavagnari, the Hon. Mr. W. Maxwell, and three Italian noblemen—Counts G. de Bagnaux, J. de Durport, and B. de Durport.

THE Hon. Mr. John Macpherson has resigned his office as an additional member of the Council of the Governor of Bombay for the purpose of making laws and regulations, and Mr. F. L. Latham has been nominated to fill the vacancy.

THE Rev. A. Y. Browne, M.A., who has been appointed by the Secretary of State for India a Junior Chaplain on the Bombay Ecclesiastical Establishment, has been admitted to the Service from the 23rd ultimo.

SIR HENRY MORLAND, Kt., Port Officer of Bombay, proceeded to Calcutta by the Jubbulpore mail train on Saturday last to take part in an official Commission appointed by the Government of India. It is expected that Sir Henry will visit Burma on his way to Bombay, and about the last week of December pay a second visit to Calcutta to confer with his brother Commissioners.

ON the recommendation of H.E., the Persian Consul-General at Bombay, H.M. the Shah of Persia has appointed Mr. Cowasjee D. Rustomjee Banajee, of this city, Persian Vice-Consul in place of his late father, Mr. Dadabhoj Rustomjee Banajee. The Kharita of Mr. Cowasjee's appointment is expected from Persia in a day or two, when his appointment will be gazetted.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season report for the past week:—Rain in Shikarpur, Hyderabad, and Upper Sind Frontier; beneficial to crops in the latter district. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing in several districts. Standing crops slightly damaged by locusts in four talukas of Kurrachee, two of Surat, and a few villages of Broach, and by excessive rain in parts of Shikarpur and Hyderabad; cotton in one taluka of Surat diseased and exotic cotton in one taluka of Dharwar blighted; wheat in one taluka of Dharwar and crops generally in two talukas of Ahmednugger withering for want of moisture; crops otherwise good. Fodder insufficient in one taluka of Khandeish, three of Nassik, and two of Poona, Ahmednugger, Sholapore, and Satara. Agricultural stock good except in one taluka of Khandeish, three of Nassik, and one of Ahmednugger.

ALARMING FIRE AT BYCULLA.—A serious fire broke out in a building occupied as a dwelling house and stables, situated in the compound of the Jewish Synagogue, at Byculla, behind Sulliman Dawood's Commission Stables, Bellasis road. Flames were first discovered issuing from the roof of the building at ten minutes past nine. The flames were observed from the Byculla fire-station, and Mr. Whittaker, accompanied by Mr. Robinson, district foreman of the station, and Mr. Rozario, engineer, immediately turned out with the steamer. On reaching the spot the whole building was a mass of flames, and the horses, together with a large number from Suliman Dawood's stables, were immediately released. The horses were beyond all control, and dashed off through the large crowd that were attracted to the spot, and continued their career through the Native town, creating a panic. A number of people were kicked and knocked down, but no report of any serious injury to persons or damage to property is as yet to hand. From latest accounts many of the runaway animals had not been captured. On the Byculla engine reaching the spot, Mr. Whittaker at once ordered the hose to be attached to a hydrant at the tank, in the compound of the Synagogue, while another line of hose was run from the police station to the back of the burning building, and there being a copious supply of water the fire was very soon got under control. Before the engine arrived, however, the people residing in the hut took flight, leaving a horse tethered inside to its fate, the result being that the poor animal was burnt to death. The fire-engines from the Fort, Pydhownee, Gowalia Tank, and Chinchpoogly appeared smartly on the spot; but the activity of the Byculla firemen rendered their assistance unnecessary, although the chief of the fire brigade considered it necessary to keep a stand-pipe at work all night with a detachment of men, as it was feared that some sparks from the burning building had fallen upon the adjoining property, which being constructed of bamboos and thatch were of a very inflammable nature. It is only owing, therefore, to the promptitude of the fire brigade, and the excellent supply of water, that a disastrous conflagration was prevented. The district is a very crowded one, and had the fire been communicated to the higher structures a serious loss of property would have resulted. Superintendent Mr. Crummy, with the members of the "E" division, rendered valuable assistance.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDE AND PUNJAB.

(Dec. 4.)

THE Hon. Mr. Knox took his seat as Judge of the Allahabad High Court on Tuesday.

MR. DEAS, Judge of Cawnpore, succeeds the Hon. Mr. Knox as Legal Remembrancer, North-Western Provinces.

THE well-known Punjab numismatist and antiquarian, Mr. C. I. Rogers, is now putting the catalogue of coins in the Lahore Museum through the press. The Government of the Punjab has made a grant towards the purchase of coins not as yet in the Museum. The intention is to obtain as complete a collection as possible for that institution of coins of the Greek Kings and Queens who ruled over the Province, as well as of their successors, the Sakas or Indo-Scythians, and thus wipe away the reproach that the rulers of the Punjab have cared nothing for its historical records.

BURMA.

FIRE AT THE RUBY MINES.

BERNARDMYO, Nov. 28.

A DISASTROUS fire broke out between four and five o'clock yesterday morning in the Commissariat godowns at Bernardmyo, and nearly the whole of the stores have been destroyed. Lieutenant French, Executive Commissariat Officer and Acting Officer Commanding, was almost the first on the spot, and with his staff worked indefatigably in saving what could be got at, such as the stores, records of the Commissariat and treasury, forty-six boxes of ball ammunition, all the kerosine oil, and a good portion of the medical comforts. The three godowns were mat-walled, with thatched roofs, and it is surprising how they escaped so long. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it has been conjectured that it may be the work of retaliation on the part of the villagers of La Hoo. About a week ago Lieutenant French, as Officer Commanding, at the request of the Deputy Commissioner, surprised the village, and searched the houses for arms and stolen property, which, it was supposed, were secreted there. This surprise was done about ten o'clock at night, much to the alarm and discomfort of the villagers—a people well known for their revengeful disposition.

A TELEGRAM to the Mandalay Herald from Bernardmyo says that on Friday all the Commissariat godowns and stores were burnt at that station. Lieutenant French saved several boxes of ball ammunition at great risk to himself, and also saved the store record and Commissariat treasure. The cause of the fire is not known. The sentries are said to be under arrest, also a bugler, who did not sound the alarm till the fire seized the two godowns.

ROBBING chimneys from the street lamps is the latest development of the Mandalay budmash.

THERE was another snowfall in Kulu on the 25th ult., the snow coming down to about 9,000 feet.

IT is reported that some Chinese miners are prospecting for gold in the Shwegyeen hills (Burma).

THE work of the Gomal Railway and Zhob Valley Railway Surveys is being actively pushed on.

A LARGE number of Shans have been visiting Mandalay lately, many of them with some A-1 looking ponies.

IN the Malikpore shooting case a charge of murder will be framed in the Chief Court against Sergeant Cross.

WINTER clothing was taken into general use by the troops in garrison at Kurrachee with effect from the 30th ult.

IT is rumoured in Calcutta that Mr. Justice Wilson, of the Calcutta High Court, will succeed Sir Andrew Scoble as Legal Member of the Viceroy's Council.

THE French chartered troopship Comorian arrived from Saigon at Colombo on the 19th ult., and proceeded to Toulon the next day.

ON the occasion of the Raja of Kapurthala's investiture the Khalsa Dewan telegraphed his congratulations, to which the Raja replied.

A CONTEMPORARY learns on the best authority that the rumour about the impending disbandment of the 8th Madras Regiment is unfounded.

COLONEL NISBET has given a donation to the Sikh Khalsa College.

LAND in Mandalay, it appears, is steadily decreasing in value.

A NUMBER of half-starved sepoy of the disbanded 33rd Regiment are now begging for food in Madras.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL PROTHOROE has been confirmed in the command of the Hyderabad Contingent.

A PARTY of Sangu Khel, Shanwari, lately carried off about 300 sheep from the village of Guli.

OBITUARY.

—o—

CAPTAIN WILLIAM AGNEW POPE, late 101st Regiment, died on the 13th inst., at 21, Evelyn Gardens, South Kensington aged sixty-two years.

COLONEL RICHARD CREWE, late Madras Army, died on the 13th inst., at 5, Devonshire-terrace, Hyde Park, aged seventy-four.

MAJOR-GENERAL DAVID WATSON died on the 8th inst. at Bath. He entered the Army in July, 1833, and served with the 82nd Regiment in the Crimea from September, 1855, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol. He next served in the North-West Provinces in suppressing the mutiny in 1857-58, taking part in the operations round Cawnpore.

GENERAL WILLIAM CHARLES GOTT, Bengal Army, died at Umballa, Punjab, recently, aged sixty-nine. He entered the Service in 1842, and served in the Gwalior campaign in 1843-44, being present at the battle of Maharajpore. He also served throughout the Punjab campaign in 1848-49; was present at the passage of the Chenab, actions of Sadoolapore and Chillianwallah, and was twice wounded. Deceased subsequently took an active part in the Southal campaign of 1855-56.

COLONEL ARTHUR TOWER, who took over the command of the 1st battalion Suffolk Regiment in August last, died on December 8, at Jhansi, N.W.P., India, aged forty-four. He was the son of the Rev. R. Beauchamp Tower, and entered the Army in July, 1866. He served in the first Egyptian war, and was Acting Brigade-Major in Alexandria when that place was first occupied by a military force after the bombardment. From December, 1877, to April, 1878, he served as a Lieutenant-Instructor at the School of Musketry, Hythe, and, previous to taking over the command of the 1st battalion of his regiment, he served as Commandant of the Kussowlie Depot.

MAJOR ANDREW CATHCART BOGLE, V.C., late of the 78th Highlanders and 10th Foot, died on the 11th inst. at Sherborne House, Sherborne, Dorset, aged sixty-two. He was educated at Cheltenham College, where he was from 1842 to 1847, being in the cricket eleven there in the years 1845-46-47, and in 1849 he entered the Army as an ensign in the 78th Highlanders. He was promoted lieutenant in March, 1853, and four years later he served with his regiment in Persia, including the bombardment of Mohumrah. Later in the same year he was in Bengal, and accompanied Havelock's column from its first taking the field. When the gate of Oonao was blown in, on the memorable morning of July 29, 1857, young Bogle, then a lieutenant, collected a few men of his regiment and stormed the passage, opening a way for Havelock's force. In the effort he was severely wounded, and was mentioned in despatches for "conspicuous gallantry," in recognition of which he was awarded the Victoria Cross. In 1858, again, he was in Rohilkund, under Lord Clyde, and at the action of Bareilly. He retired in 1865. In accordance with his wish, the body was on Tuesday removed from his residence at Sherborne, conveyed to Woking Cemetery, and there cremated.

THE outturn of Wynaad coffee this season is unfavourably reported on.

THE eclipse of the moon was only just visible at Bareilly on the 27th ultimo.

THE Tea Crop in Ceylon for January to December, 1891, is estimated at 52½ million pounds.

MR. AND MRS. SCHWANN will arrive in Calcutta on the 20th of November, and will be the guests for a time of Mr. Manomohun Ghose, Barrister-at-Law.

THE Mysore Government have sanctioned the outlay of Rs. 2,357 for converting the Fort Barracks buildings, Bangalore, into the Municipal English School.

THE opening day of the Rangoon Autumn Meeting was a success both financially and in a sporting sense, the enclosures being crowded, and business was very brisk.

THE formation of a Cadet Company in connection with the Coimbatore Volunteer Corps has been sanctioned by Government.

IT is said that the Mysore Durbar have a New Arms Act under consideration in the Legislative Department.

DURING the past year in Bengal there were no fewer than one hundred and four persons in durance vile for not paying rent or other dues.

THE Lucknow Advocate says:—"Our Queen's statue has reached Calcutta, and by the middle of December will arrive in Lucknow."

THE annual Rifle Meeting of the Madras Volunteer Guards will be held on the 26th instant and the following days at the St. Thome Butts.

ELEPHANT-CATCHING IN ASSAM.

"S" writes to the Pioneer.—Your correspondents "Smooth-bore" and "Truth" will perhaps pardon me for remarking that both are equally wide of the mark in their treatment of the great khedda controversy. Each seems to be under the impression that he will advance the cause of his protégé by besmirching the reputation of the rival elephant-catcher. No one who knows Mr. Sanderson will believe him capable of such ungenerous conduct as "Truth" lays to his charge—that he took all the best khoonkies and mahouts to the south simply in order to hamper his successor. Mr. Sanderson was embarking on unknown seas with a new country, race and climate to deal with, and he was perfectly within his rights when he provided against failure by selecting the best instruments to hand. Nor can I credit the charges of systematic injustice and ill-treatment as regards subordinates hurled at Mr. Savi's head. Men are not governed with rose water—least of all, mahouts. A firm hand is needed; and he who is incapable of the fortiter in re, had better stick to his desk, and eschew khedda operations. If Mr. Savi had really exhibited a callous disregard of his men's feelings and interest he could soon have been abandoned by all, and his campaign would have been a fiasco.

The matter lies in the proverbial nutshell. Dr. Johnson in reply to "Bozzy's" assertion that few men could have written a certain book, said, "No, sir; many men, many women, and many children could have written it." It is much the same with elephant-catching. The hilly regions in North-Eastern Bengal have been for ages well-nigh close preserve of these pachyderms. Thus, unmolested in the primeval forest they have increased and multiplied to an extent which would have shocked the late Mr. Malthus. The sagacity of the elephant in a state of nature has been immensely overrated. As a matter of fact it does not exceed that of our larger domesticated animals. I have seen monsters newly caught taken to water by naked imps perched on their necks, whom they never attempted to dislodge. To tract the numerous herds, collect them, and drive them into the immense trap prepared for their reception is a feat about on a par with a collie's on the Cheviots or a cowboy's in Texas. Tact and the power of organisation and command are essential in the leader of khedda operations. But these qualities are not rare among Englishmen, and it is probable that many scores of Messrs. Sanderson's and Savi's colleagues would have given as fair an account as they of their stupid quarry. In future phases of the controversy I venture to hope that personal reflections and the imputation of unworthy motives may be eschewed. Tactics which dimmed the lustre of a vast exploit should be avoided in a community so cultured as the Anglo-Indian.

THE LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

(From the Times of India Correspondent.)

ALLAHABAD, DEC. 1.

News of the Lushai operations from Changsil says that Mr. McCabe, political officer, and two hundred men of the Cachar military police, under Lieutenant Cole, with Lieutenant Tytler and Dr. Melville, returned there on Saturday from Kalkom's village. This column left Aijal on the 16th, and attacked Kalkom on the following day, acting simultaneously with the force of seventy men of the 40th Bengal Infantry and twenty men of the military police under Lieutenant Watson, which operated from Changsil. The Lushais, to the number of 300, mostly with guns, were unaware of the approach of the Aijal force, their attention being occupied by watching the approaches from Changsil, which they had strongly stockaded. Ten Lushais were shot dead in the village, and the remainder then bolted. The village consisted of 800 houses, and is the largest in Lushailand. The party under Lieutenant Watson captured Kalkom's temporary village in the jungle on the 18th, and got considerable quantities of goats and household property. Lieutenant Watson, with the 40th Bengal Infantry men and seventy policemen and coolies marched to Changsil on the 19th. He destroyed the village of 100 houses of Khama, Kalkom's brother-in-law, en route. On the 19th and 20th parties of military and police destroyed Jhoom, with its houses, grain, &c. On the 21st Mr. McCabe and 100 police, under Lieutenant Cole, captured Tongula's new village. Three Lushais were shot dead. On the evening of the 22nd Kalkom made an unconditional surrender, and gave himself up.

Since the operations commenced, on the arrival of reinforcements from Silchar, in addition to the above the following villages have been attacked and destroyed:—Thanruma, 4th October, 400 houses, by Lieutenant Watson, with fifty men of the 40th Bengal Infantry, and 250 police under Lieutenant Cole. Rankupa, on the 7th, 400 houses, by Mr. McCabe, with 100 police. Lalthima, 250 houses, on the 14th, by Lieut. Cole, with 100 police. Lalsavata and Minting, on the 16th, by Mr. McCabe, and Lieutenants Watson and Tyler. During the above operations the Lushais themselves acknowledge losing over fifty men, and the real number is probably larger. Kalkom says he has had twenty men killed and eight wounded. There have been no casualties to our force since the reinforcements arrived at Changsil, but two Sepoys have had bullets through their caps, and many narrow escapes are reported.

ALLAHABAD, DEC. 4.

News from the Lushai country says that the result of the investigations carried on during the last two months by Mr. McCabe about the recent rising may be summarised as follows:—The Lushais decided to fight about the 1st September. Hearing that Captain Browne was going to Silchar, and thinking he would bring up more troops, an assembly of chiefs was held at Kalkham's village and decided to attack Captain Browne and his coolies on the road, simultaneous attacks also being made on Aijal and Changsil. Runners were despatched by Thanruma, whose village is on the Aijal and Changsil-road, to give notice of Captain Browne's departure. Captain Browne's party was attacked by the Lienpungas. Sairang was attacked by Labihima, who has all Captain Browne's baggage, including gun, rifle, and two revolvers. His pony is now on its way from Lienpunga's village. It is hoped that the weapons will be eventually recovered. Over 1,000 Lushai guns have been collected.

THE CONNEMARA DIVORCE CASE.

The painful duty has devolved upon us of announcing that, in a suit which was brought last Thursday in the London Divorce Court by Lady Connemara, against her husband, a decree nisi, with costs, was pronounced. No defence was offered. We are ignorant of the circumstances of the case, nor indeed do they greatly concern the public which will consider itself bound to accept without hesitation the decision of the Court that the allegation in the plaint had been substantiated. It is greatly to be deplored that Lord Connemara did not act in anticipation of the case going against him by default, for, by retaining office until the result of the suit was known, he has placed the whole community of Madras in a most embarrassing position. Never before did a Governor of this Presidency arouse in his favour so general and so cordial a regard as that which has been the just reward of Lord Connemara's gracious ways and courteous activity. Had he retired six weeks ago, after "crowning the edifice" of his successful Administration by the opening of the East Coast Railway, his subsequent experiences in a Court of Justice in England would have been disassociated in the public mind from his service in India, and would have left the fame of his Administration unharmed. But to hold office, and while holding office to be condemned—this indeed is an error of judgment which no community, however sympathetic and un-Pharisaical, can fail to lament or be influenced by. His Excellency's position in Madras—a position quite unique—is rendered untenable, for in these days a man holding his very responsible office is bound to be beyond the reproach which now, sad to say, attaches to his Excellency.—Madras Mail.

A NURSING SISTERHOOD FOR THE ARMY.

Sir Frederick Roberts has done much during the past few years, not only to increase the efficiency of the Army as a fighting machine, but also to secure the comfort and welfare of the British soldier in India, and to make his life as enjoyable as possible; with the result that he is now comfortably housed, has libraries, billiard-rooms, and refreshment-rooms, in which to spend his evenings, while he can enjoy his leisure in workshops where he may learn a trade, or in gardening, in the pursuit of which he may add considerably to his pay. All these things are aids to sobriety, self-discipline, and self-respect, and go a long way towards securing for the soldier a healthy and useful life. This, again, is of the greatest importance to the State, not only from a humanitarian, but also from a financial point of view. It is said that every British soldier landed in India costs the country one hundred pounds. Our military machine is certainly a very costly weapon, and drunkenness, disorder, and sickness, such as used to be prevalent in times not long past, add greatly to its cost. Even with every care and precaution on the part of the authorities we fear that sickness will always be prevalent to a considerable extent among young soldiers, for the first few years at any rate, of their service in India. It is, therefore, pleasing to know that through the instrumentality of Sir Frederick Roberts the Government has inaugurated a female nursing service for employment in the hospitals of the British Army in India. The nurses to be employed in this service are ladies who are required before appointment to show that they belong to families of respectability and of good standing in society, and that they have undergone training as nurses for at least twelve months in a civil hospital in England, in which adult male patients receive medical and surgical treatment, and in which a staff of nursing sisters is maintained.—Englishman.

BOMBAY FABIAN SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Bombay Fabian Society on the 29th ultimo, at the residence of Mr. D. Gostling, a gentleman read a short paper on "After-dinner Socialism," giving an outsider's view of the kind of socialism preached in England and India. The gist of the paper was as follows:—

Socialism deserved credit for having attached itself to certain social reforms, but that most of these reforms had been put in practice years before socialism was born. Socialism had three faults—lack of candour or fair play, impracticability, and a tendency in this country to sedition. As to the first socialists said nothing about the good that Government did, nothing at all about the hundreds of thousands of well-paid and respectable working men, nothing about the incalculable injury to British trade that the labourers of England had done and were doing at the moment. They were constantly running on the miseries of the downtrodden working man and the wickedness of the landlord. It did not pay them to speak both sides. As to the visionary nature of the ideas, it was strange that if the taking of interest and the taking of rent were such sins, no one should have found it out till to-day. Our forefathers must either have been great fools not to have found it out, or, if they did know it, then they were greater rogues for continuing it. That was the only logical conclusion from the social statement. Commenting on the recent socialistic lectures in Bombay, the lecturer gave it as his opinion that the Bombay socialists were using the Marwaree as an advertisement in their ill-judged attempt to foist their creed on the inhabitants of India. The lecturer concluded by saying that if they attempted to form a judgment of the wants of the people of India from the handful of educated natives in and around Bombay, they would make a great mistake, and would earn nothing for their pains but ridicule and contempt.

A short discussion followed, in which Messrs. Gostling, Chambers, and Balfour, and Mrs. Gostling took part.

THE N. W. P. POST OFFICE.

The business of the Post Office is to serve the people, and the Government of India have recognised this truth by carrying it on at a small net loss annually. If, however, we can devise means at once to increase the usefulness of the Department and develop its capabilities as a source of revenue so much the better. In three notable ways during the past year Mr. Badshah has brought the Department in the North-West Provinces nearer to the attainment of this double aim. In the first place he has greatly expedited the despatch and delivery of letters between neighbouring stations. Formerly letters were carried on mail trains only, and the consequence in many cases was, that the distance which an article had to be carried to its destination did not affect its early or late delivery. A letter leaving a post town in the evening would be delivered the next morning, whether it was conveyed a distance of one hundred miles or three hundred miles. Mr. Badshah saw this could be improved upon by utilising local and passenger trains, wherever they were available, for the carriage of mails. As an illustration of the effect of the change the case of correspondence between Allahabad and Cawnpore may be cited. "Under the old arrangements a reply could not be received from Cawnpore the next day to a letter posted in Allahabad at six P.M. This can be done now. People in Allahabad can post letters to Cawnpore several hours later than they used to do formerly, and can receive replies the next day." Concurrently with this expedition in the despatch of letters the delivery at the station of receipt has been expedited also. In many towns of the N.W.P. the same set of postmen delivered all sorts of articles, paid or bearing. "They had, therefore," writes Mr. Badshah, "to wander about from house to house dawdling and delaying on the road, waiting to smoke a hookah or drink a cup of water, while a receipt was being signed or the postage due on a bearing letter was being paid." All this is now changed. In all the principal towns of the Provinces one set of postmen is retained for the delivery of paid letters alone, with the result that they are now delivered as often and as soon as they are received. The convenience of the new plan as compared with the old is obvious, and it is not surprising to learn that it has worked excellently.—Pioneer.

MR. BRADLAUGH'S NEW BILL.—The Indian Nation, edited by one of the "moderate" school in Calcutta, says:—"We confess ourselves greatly disappointed with Mr. Bradlaugh's now draft Bill. The whole of the draft Bill appears to us to be an instance of putting the cart before the horse. Details are settled; principles and general rules are left to be ascertained. Every person resident in India is declared qualified to be elected or nominated. The number of persons who are to sit in the Councils is settled; the proportion of the elected to be nominated members is settled. But who are to be the electors, or upon what principle are constituencies to be created, is a question not settled. Supposing it should be found that properly qualified constituencies are a very small body who should not have the power to elect so much as one-half of a council, what then? The only part of the Bill which we approve of, so far as it goes, is the part concerning the powers of the members of Council. What the powers should be is a question of principle fit to be determined by the Legislature of England. The only fault that we find with this part of the Act is that it is meagre and not sufficiently worked out. For instance, nothing is said as to the powers of the Councils as wholes. Are the Councils to be mere legislative bodies, or are they to have any control over the administration? If upon a division, on the Financial Statement, the Government were beaten, what would happen? If, for instance, Government propose a tax, and the majority of the Council vote against the tax, what is to happen? Government may say: 'If we are not to impose the tax we declare our inability to govern the country. We resign our trust.' We know what would happen in England; the Opposition would come into power. But what is to happen here? Surely the English practice cannot be followed. As the result of considerations such as this we come to the conclusion that either the conditions and effect of divisions in Council must be so determined as to avoid critical situations like the above, or there must be a standing official majority. It is easy to see that the number of Councillors and the ratio of the elected to the nominated and the ex-officio members are the very last details to be settled. Mr. Bradlaugh's Bill, therefore, appears to us both redundant and defective. It is not sufficiently explicit on the subject of principles, and a little too pronounced on details."

On the 27th ultimo a swarm of red locusts passed over Calcutta. They occupied some time in their flight over the city, and, coming from the direction of Seebpore, continued their flight straight onwards, heading north. In some places the swarm was densely packed, and colliding with telephone wires and poles, numbers of them were picked up in the streets. Hundreds dropped on the roofs and in the compounds of houses, and those interested in entomology might have collected specimens in basketsful.

MR. E. F. STRANACK, the Secretary and Treasurer of the Commercial and Land Mortgage Bank, Madras, who left for England in January last, resumed his duties on Monday, when a welcome address was read and presented to him by Mr. Furdoojee Nusserwanjee, the manager and accountant of the Bank, on behalf of his clerks. In reply Mr. Stranack thanked the manager and his staff for the address, and spoke highly of Mr. P. A. Churchward's exertions for the welfare of the Bank, with that of his other officials during his (Mr. Stranack's) absence in Europe.

THE Deccan Times says:—"We have often adverted in these columns to the stone found in the head of snakes which, if applied to the spot bitten by any venomous reptile, adheres to it till the poison is fully extracted and the person is out of danger. We hear that our well-known citizen—Haji Soojanlal—has secured one such stone quite recently from Kutch, and for very obvious reasons wishes the fact to be known to the general public. It is said that he obtained one some time ago, but as it did not appear to be a genuine one Mr. Soojanlal requested his father at Kutch to spare no expense in getting a bona fide one. On the stone reaching the Haji Sahib, it was experimented on a girl who was stung by a scorpion, when it removed the virus, and relieved her at once. It, however, cost the gentleman nearly a thousand rupees to obtain it."

THE erection of a Masonic Temple at Ootacamund will soon be a fait accompli. Ten thousand rupees is the estimated cost of the building, and this has been subscribed by the "brethren" on the Neilgherries. Although the District Grand Master, Lord Connemara, expressed a hope to be able to get the Government a site on the jail hill free, he has not succeeded; and for about half an acre of land seven hundred and odd rupees are demanded. This the fraternity have agreed to pay, and are now calling for tenders for the erection of their temple.

HINDOO marriage reform is a frail plant, and exposed to wintry treatment. The Hindoo Marriage Reform Association in Madras, for instance, has made it a rule to give a dinner to every newly wedded couple of whom the bride was formerly a widow, but experience shows that invitations to such dinners are as a rule responded to only by the bride and the bridegroom, all their friends and relatives refusing to come, for fear of losing caste.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Imperial service troops of the Faridkot State are making most excellent progress, and are as fine a body of men as can be found anywhere in the Punjab. They owe a deal of their proficiency to the exertions of their commandant, Colonel Perry.

THE Civil and Military Gazette asks:—Is the Staff Corps agitation already bearing fruit? We see that the Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the resignation by Lieutenant H. G. Turner, West Riding Regiment, of his probationary appointment in the Bombay Staff Corps; and 2nd Lieutenant R. M. P. Swift, 2nd Royal Dublin Fusiliers, has been allowed to resign his probationary appointment in the Bengal Staff Corps, and has been posted to the 2nd Battalion, pending receipt of orders from the Horse Guards as to his final disposal.

THE Brigadier-General Commanding the Allahabad District desires that officers commanding battalions marching in relief will practice their men in all the duties of advanced and rear guards, convoy duty, &c., as if in the presence of an enemy. Part of the battalion should also be frequently sent on an hour or two ahead, and directed to take up a position to oppose the advance of the remainder. Much useful instruction, both in attack and defence, may be thus imparted, without much extra fatigue to the men. Every endeavour should be made to render these operations as practical as possible. A return is to be kept of all such operations during the march, and forwarded to the Assistant Adjutant-General of the District at the termination of the march. Sketches and reports illustrating the operations should also be forwarded.

In the following paragraph taken from an up-country paper, a brief idea of the programme to be followed at the Attock camp, if the weather permitted, is given:—The weather cleared a little at the Attock camp on Thursday, and Friday was quite fine with a strong breeze, which, during the previous night, blew down numerous tents; it served, however, to dry the tents, horse-blankets, &c., very nicely. Nothing was done on Thursday; on Friday the principal officers of both forces met at the village Shaidoo, to inspect the ground for field firing which lies S.W. of that village, and select suitable position. The ground faces N. by W. with a range of hills in rear, and can be approached along various nullahs, where the going is good, which (owing to the rain) it is not by any means so elsewhere. On Saturday there was a short rehearsal of the programme with blank ammunition, which was a very pretty sight. The next day, Sunday, was a day of rest, and on Monday the 1st Division field firing was to take place. On Tuesday (was to have commenced) the third phase of the manoeuvres, limited to the hours from sunrise to sunset. On Wednesday the Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by the members of the Defence Committee and G.O.C., Rawalpindi District, were to have marched round the position. On Thursday is the march-past of the whole of both forces on a piece of ground east of the village of Shaidoo, about six miles from Khairabad, N. of the Grand Trunk Road, the former selection between the Cabul and Indus rivers having been abandoned. The camp then breaks up, and the Commander-in-Chief leaves for Peshawur. The 44th Field Battery have already left for Jubbulpore, and by the 8th, at latest, Khairabad will have returned to its wonted quietude. The heavy Battery are not to take part in the field-firing, as it is feared that their heavy shell with large bursting charges would imperil the safety of the markers.

THE Government of India have requested that it may be pointed out to medical officers that it is beyond the scope of Medical Boards to make any recommendation for the renewal of a wound pension in the case of an officer.

THE Pioneer says it may be noted that the Bhils in the hills about Oodeypore furnish a class of soldiers that would be of the highest value in mountain warfare. The Meywar Bhil Corps enlists no man under 5 ft. 7 in. in height, and there is no difficulty in obtaining recruits. These sepoys are born skirmishers in hill or jungle country; their powers of marching cannot be equalled in India—they always do the relief march from Khairwara to Oodeypore, over fifty miles in a day, as a matter of course; while in the handling of their weapons in the manual and bayonet exercises they can compare with the smartest regiments. They are unfortunately located in an out-of-the-way corner of India, and consequently have no chance of seeing service. In Upper Burma they would certainly have distinguished themselves, for they would have been quite at home in the dense jungles, and on the frontier they would probably have won equal distinction. Cannot Colonel McRae and his Bhils be given an outing in the Black Mountain Expedition next spring? They would volunteer to a man for service.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THOUGHTS OF A QUEEN.*

During her recent visit to North Wales "Carmen Sylva" captured the hearts of the grateful Cymry, who could not make enough of the foreign Sovereign who showed such an intelligent interest in their Bardic contests at the Eisteddfod. Little, however, did they dream that they were exposing themselves to the shafts of a keen but kindly cynic, who would not willingly hurt the feelings of the humblest of her fellow-creatures. Not inferior to La Rochefoucauld in the incisiveness and perspicuity of her epigrams, "Carmen Sylva" may say with perfect truthfulness that she has set down nought in malice, nor written a line that need offend the vanity of the most captious. In truth, she is more severe against her own order than against any other section of the human community. We read, for instance, that "the profession of queen demands but three qualities—beauty, bounty, and fecundity." This, too, is good:—"Strictly speaking, a prince requires nothing but eyes and ears; he does not need a mouth, except to smile." Very plainspoken is the following epigram:—"A little contradiction animates conversation; this explains why Courts are so dull." Neither is "Carmen Sylva" a flatterer of her own sex. The following remark, at least, cannot be called complimentary:—"Women who meddle with politics are hens who make themselves vultures." Again: "A nightingale shrieking like a peacock; such is a woman in a passion." For persons about to marry here is some sound, if quaint, counsel:—"Do not marry a woman whose mouth droops at the corners. Even were the mouth a cherry you would find the fruit bitter." This also is true, and not uncommon:—"A woman will often utter a daring opinion; but she recoils in terror if she be taken at her word." Who shall gainsay the following assertion: "A woman is stoned for an action which a perfect gentleman may commit with impunity." Though seemingly hard upon men it would not be easy to impugn the justice of the "Thought" that "a woman's virtue ought, indeed, to be great, since it has often to suffice for two." The whole subject is thus summed up: "In savage countries woman is a beast of burden; in Turkey, a toy; in Europe, a little of both." "Carmen Sylva" acknowledges that to her "Man is an enigma from his birth until his death. One thinks to understand him by tearing him open. A child breaks its toy to see what there is inside." What follows is only partially true, for both sexes can go wrong without any aid one from the other. The Queen, however, is of opinion that "women are bad through the fault of men: men through the fault of women." Only a very observant person could have drawn the following conclusion:—"When a man loves his children with an excess of passion, be sure that he is not happy." The next maxim is certainly original: "A woman does not become a mother; she is a mother from her birth. A numerous family satisfies her vocation, but does not create it." Very natural, too, are these words of wisdom: "A household without children is a bell without a clapper. The latent sound would be beautiful enough were there something to awaken it." We are probably all agreed in thinking that "jealousy in a lover is a homage; in a husband an insult." Can this, however, be exactly accurate? "Forgiveness is almost indifference; who really loves does not forgive." Almost at random we have made a little packet of the preceding gems—a scanty handful out of "Carmen Sylva's" treasure-chamber. We cannot but congratulate her Majesty on her good fortune in having met with two such admirable exponents of her "Thoughts" as M. Louis Uhlbach and Mr. Sutherland Edwards. Every diner-out should commit to memory the priceless maxims that our limited space has compelled us to reject.

THERE has been heavy rain and a thundestorm at Lahore and at Murree, also twenty-four hours' rain and sleet with snow on the neighbouring hills.

MUNICIPALITIES IN BENGAL

IF Municipal institutions giving a liberal allowance of local self-government to the ratepayers are likely to flourish satisfactorily anywhere in India it ought to be in the Province of Bengal. The results of the experiment which is being tried there ought to form a very fair criterion of the success, or otherwise, likely to follow by extending the system throughout all India. The total number of Municipalities in Bengal at the close of last year was 147, and the average proportion of ratepayers to the whole population in the Municipalities was a little over 17 per cent. The system under which two-thirds of the total number of Commissioners are elected by the ratepayers was in force in all except twenty-nine Municipalities. Out of 103 bye-elections held to fill up vacancies ninety-one was conducted successfully, and twelve failed, as no candidates were nominated by the electors. The Report giving these details, long delayed, as all Indian Official Reports are, says that the attendance of the members at the Municipal meetings was generally good, showing an average of from 80 to 90 per cent., and in many cases between thirty and forty meetings were held during the year. This looks very satisfactory; but there was never a difficulty in Bengal in getting Babús together to talk. This was long ago shown when Calcutta obtained the blessing of a Municipality, in which many Native gentlemen took their places as nominees of the Government. Sir Stuart Hogg must have a lively recollection of the "talkative" scenes which used to take place when he was Chairman of the great institution which used to meet and wrangle in the Town Hall of the City of Palaces. When the elective system came in the talk, of course, did not diminish in quantity, whatever it did in quality; and what was characteristic of the Calcutta Municipality may fairly be held to be characteristic still of all the Municipalities in Bengal. Coming, however, to the question of work done, the results are not so satisfactory as the record of attendance. It appears that the average incidence of Municipal taxation throughout Bengal, including Calcutta, was during the past year 11 annas and 11 pies per head of the population, being as low as 8 annas in some Municipalities. In Bombay and the Punjab the rate is above one rupee; in Madras and in the North-West Provinces it is about the same as in Bengal. The Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, commenting on these statistics, remarks:—"These figures show how very moderate is the incidence of Municipal taxation in India generally, and especially that it is low in Bengal, where the wealth of the people and their standard of comfort are greater than in other provinces. It is obvious that there is some scope for increase in Municipal taxation, and unless there is such an increase, it is impossible that reforms can be undertaken." Under the Municipal Act assessments continue in force for three years only, the intention of Government being that they should be revised as the prosperity of a town increases, in order to carry out Municipal improvements, especially in the way of sanitary reform, of which every place in India stands so much in need. But the Bengal Municipal Commissioners do not see matters in this light. It may be "obvious" to the Lieutenant-Governor, but it is not so to them that any such reforms should be attempted. The local Government, indeed, condescends to inform them that the carrying out of Municipal improvements "is one of the most distinguishing marks of efficiency and of aptitude in local self-government. But what has been the effect of endeavouring to put this suggestion into practice?

"The year's record," says the Englishman, "shows that the path is strewn with difficulties. In Rampur Beaulah the assessment is from 8 to 12 annas per cent., and this is how the chairman of the Municipality describes what happened: 'A hue-and-cry was raised, in which those whose assessments had not been increased, nay, even those who had been exempted from assessment, joined. The Municipal Office was literally besieged with objection petitions. A memorial was sent to his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, complaining against the enhancement. A party of men, who affected to pose as friends of the poor, but who really had at heart some grudge against the Municipality, actively set about rousing the people against it under this colourable pretext. For nearly two months there was scarcely any collection of house-tax. Everybody refused to pay. It was a time of serious trial to the Municipal Commissioners. By a policy of conciliation and firmness, and by promptly deciding the objections, order was restored." In the petty Municipality of Jugdishpur dissensions rose so high that a criminal suit was instituted by one Municipal Commissioner against another for obstructing him, with the help of certain ratepayers, as he was returning from office, and threatening to kill him. In the Tikari Municipality a yet more scandalous case occurred; for the chairman was violently assaulted by hired lathials, instigated, according to common report, by an opponent on the municipal board, and the vice-chairman, who was conspicuous in opposition, was removed from his post."

The general result is that the total income of the Bengal Municipalities has been diminishing; some are in arrears with their collections to the extent of four or five years, and an official Circular has had to be issued calling serious attention to these defects. Would they be remedied if the elective principle were as freely extended as the Congress supporters ask? "If these are done in the green tree, what will be done in the dry?" Or, in less metaphorical language, If such abuses exist in "enlightened" Bengal is it wise to extend the experiment to less-favoured localities?

HINDU MARRIAGES.

ANOMALIES AND CURIOSITIES OF INDIAN MARRIAGE SERVICES.

An article on the Hindu marriage question in Blackwood contains a useful and entertaining version of the difficulties which surround the Hindu in his matrimonial affairs:—"Let us take an instance, and in order to avoid the fumes of bewilderment that are thrown off by uncouth names let us cast it in a familiar mould. Let us imagine the great tribe of Smith, the 'noun of multitude,' as a famous headmaster used to call it, to be transformed by art magic into a caste, organised on the Indian model, in which all the subtle nuances of social merit and demerit which Punch and the society papers love to chronicle, should have been set and hardened into positive regulations affecting the intermarriage of families. Two modes or principles of grouping would be conspicuous. First of all, the entire caste of Smith would be split up into an indefinite number of 'in-marrying' clans, based upon all sorts of trivial distinctions. Brewing Smiths and baking Smiths, hunting Smiths and shooting Smiths, temperance Smiths and licensed victualler Smiths, Smiths with double-barrelled names and hyphens, Smiths with double-barrelled names without hyphens, Conservative Smiths, Radical Smiths, tinker Smiths, tailor Smiths, Smiths of Mercia, Smiths of Wessex—all these and all other imaginable varieties of the tribe Smith would be, as it were, crystallised by an inexorable law forbidding the members of any of these groups to marry beyond the circle marked out by the clan name. Thus a Unionist Mr. Smith could only marry a Unionist Miss Smith, and might not think of a Home Rule damsel; a Hyphen-Smith could only marry a Hyphen-Smith, and so on. Secondly, and this is the point which we more especially wish to bring out here, running through this endless series of clans we should find another principle at work, breaking up each clan into three or four smaller groups, which form a sort of ascending scale of social distinction. Thus the clan of Hyphen-Smith's which we take to be the cream of the caste—the Smiths who have attained to the crowning glory of double names securely welded together by hyphens—would again be divided into, let us say, Anglican, Dissenting, and Salvationist Hyphen-Smiths, taking social rank in that order. Now the rule of this trio of groups would be that a man of the highest or Anglican group might marry a girl of his own group or of the two lower groups, that a man of the second or Dissenting group might take a Dissenting or Salvationist wife, while a Salvationist man would be restricted to his own group. A woman, it will be observed, could under no circumstances marry down into a group below her, and it would be thought highly desirable for her to marry up into a higher group. Other things being equal, it is clear that two-thirds of the Anglican girls would get no husbands, and two-thirds of the Salvationist men no wives. Of course, other things would not be equal. There are several ways of redressing the unequal proportions of the sexes, and putting artificially straight what has been artificially made crooked. One way is for the parents to kill all female infants except those for whom they can make sure of finding husbands. This is what the Rājputs of Northern India used to do, until we passed a law making things unpleasant for any village which could not show a respectable proportion of girls. Another way is wholesale polygamy, such as was practised by the Kulin Brahmins of Bengal (the group answering to the Anglicans in our illustration) a generation ago, and prevails still on a smaller scale. One middle-aged Kulin was said to have had several hundred wives, and to have spent his life on a round of visits to his mothers-in-law. For each wife he had received a handsome bridegroom-price, and he asked no questions about the children.

The writer urges the moderation of the changes proposed in relation to this subject.

"DEGREES IN LOYALTY."

We lately published two interesting letters on the subject of loyalty to the Government, in which a Sikh said, subsequently, a Muhammadan, each claimed for his own community the honour of having been foremost in the display of loyalty to the British Government. We have received other letters, tending to raise a discussion which could serve no practical purpose. Still, and although comparisons are generally odious, perhaps an impartial investigation of the claims of the two communities might not be amiss. To be impartial, however, the comparison must be made under equal conditions as to time and space. It would not be fair to the Sikhs, whose contact with British rule is of comparatively recent date, to collect examples of Muhammadan loyalty in previous times. Nor would it be fair to the Muhammadans of the Punjab to adjudge them inferior to the Sikhs of the Province, on the ground of the shortcomings of some of the widely scattered Mussulman communities in other parts of the British Empire. To be strictly impartial, the comparison should only take into consideration the respective claims of the Muhammadans and Sikhs of the Punjab during the period of British rule in the province. Within these limits the Sikhs then can justly claim that their loyalty, even against their co-religionists, was shown in the Sulej campaign, after which the grateful Government created new Sikh chiefship with sovereign powers; they can also claim that they displayed signal loyalty during the Mutiny; and again, in disregarding Dulip Singh and his manifestoes. The Muhammadans of the Punjab can, on the other hand, claim that they also displayed loyalty against their co-religionists in the Afghan war and the Indian Mutiny, as well as in Egypt. As both claims are undeniable and neither side can allege any instance to the contrary effect, it is evident that both communities in the Punjab have admirably passed every test of loyalty to which they have been subjected; and we have yet to learn that the Punjabi Hindus, in spite of the way in which a new school of writers affect to interpret their sentiments, are anything but thoroughly loyal. As we said with reference to another matter recently, it is only natural that different communities should claim the foremost place in loyalty to the crown. Education in a good cause is always welcome; but the function of the Press is not to fan competition into controversy, nor to encourage the discussion of the merits of communities in such a way as to provoke mutual recriminations. It is easy with the best intentions to do much mischief, if tendencies to controversial argument are not restrained at the outset. Our correspondents, therefore, both Muhammadan and Sikh, will, we hope, see the wisdom of the course we have followed in withholding their communications.

A RURAL BANK FOR INDIA.

The Madras Mail writes:—

An immense amount of capital is required for the development of India. The soil produces but ten bushels when it should give thirty; wells, topes, and drains are essential; and better implements, better tillage, better cattle, more manure, and more crops are desirable. Soils are in process of exhaustion over vast areas; while the processes of agriculure are generally so rude as to accentuate the difficulties arising from drought. Population is rapidly increasing, not only without any corresponding increase, but with a decreasing outturn per acre under cultivation. Poorer soils are being brought under the plough, while even these are decreasingly available. Hence the standard of comfort, originally too low, must still further deteriorate, unless agriculture and the characteristics of the population undergo radical changes. Then capital is badly needed for punctual payments by the ryot, either as revenue or rent. It is impossible that either Government or landlords should wait for the whole of their demands not only till the harvest is over, but till the ryot has taken his crops to the best market. Fiscal and Imperial requirements forbid it, and there is, in the present character of the ryot, positive danger in unduly deferring the demand upon him. Nor is it wise to teach him that thrift and timely provision against future demands are unnecessary virtues, or that no one will ask an anna from him till his crop is sold. In some cases the ryot has to pay a portion of his dues before he had sold or reaped his crops, and if this necessity is not met by prudence and thrift, recourse is had to the money-lender. But in India, as in all other countries of peasant farmers and imperfect banking facilities, borrowing means usury, which in turn means thralldom amounting to serfage. What would be the use of technical improvements in agriculture if the profit arising from them were to go, not to the ryot, but to the sowcar?

There is a third need for capital, namely, in connection with the ryot's current expenses. Probably a majority of the ryots have an account current with the sowcar, who periodically advances money for cattle, seed, family subsistence, &c. At harvest time accounts are made up, and the balance, if any, is carried on to a fresh account. It is obvious how important a feature this account current is in the ryot's economy, and how easily even solvent ryots may drift into a state of perpetual dependence on, if not of servitude to, the money-lender. It is equally clear that the person who mainly profits by the transaction is the sowcar rather than the ryot. The custom, however, is so general, and is so closely bound up with the ryot's habits that any attempt to supply his needs must take account of it by endeavouring to substitute for the running account with the sowcar some much less expensive mode of supplying capital. The Indian ryot is not alone in these requirements. The agrarian history of France, of Italy, and even of Germany, shows precisely the same difficulties. In Italy and France they are greatly aggravated by far heavier and more uncertain taxes, by the universality of the conscription—a war tax on industry and capital—and by the greater rigour of the climate. There is, then, nothing remarkable in Indian needs; rather there is room for hope, in that several conditions of Indian life are more favourable to the peasant farmer than in Europe. But the very rigour of the European conditions has led to the consideration of remedies, and one great remedy is that provided in a great system of popular banking, and in the organisation of credit for the ready supply of cheap capital.

However poor India may be there is ample wealth in the country to finance banks without the aid of Government. The amount of rural capital secreted in coin, or invested in jewellery, is enormous. The observed facts of daily life, the records of Mofussil courts and police offices, the traditional instincts of the country produced by her long unsettled condition, and the imports of gold and silver (which to the amount of nearly £500,000,000 sterling, including gold to the value of about £150,000,000, have disappeared in the country within the last fifty years), support this assertion. What is wanted is that this hoarded and barren capital should become available for production, and should return profits both to lender and borrower, by means of a popular banking system.

OLD PUNJAB DAYS.

The following account of a Viceregal tour in the Punjab is from the Calcutta Englishman :—

Thirty years ago, in the spring of the year 1860, Lord and Lady Canning announced their intention of visiting Peshawar. The railway was only made as far as Raneegeunge, in Bengal, and therefore all the Viceregal tours beyond that place were done in camp. The tour they were now on was on a very large scale, and the camp covered some acres in extent. It had reached Lahore, and then the question was raised of proceeding to Peshawar. The Grand Trunk Road was not metalled beyond Lahore, and the road was very rough, knee-deep in dry dust, while the rivers were unbridged, except just over the narrow stream of water, where a bridge of boats was made as a temporary measure, so that the vast expanse of sand stretching from bank to bank was left to be got over as best you could. Not even the old dāk gharis could go over such a road as that was. People travelled in doolies on men's shoulders, or in the dāk cart, a conveyance warranted to jump over every obstacle.

It was, of course, impracticable for such an enormous camp as the Viceroy's to travel over such a country, or even to obtain sufficient supplies; so it was arranged that the camp should proceed by easy stages to Sialkot, where a grand durbar was to be held, while the Viceroy and a small personal staff were to go to Peshawar, and were to be the guests of the civilians through whose districts they passed. They were to travel in the camel carriage belonging to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and when the distance between the headquarters of two districts was too great to be accomplished in one day, a halt was to be made, tents pitched, and food prepared, and all be in readiness for a night's rest. Considerable dismay was felt all along the proposed route, for how could people living out in the jungles be expected to provide proper accommodation for the Viceroy, or to entertain him in such a way as he was accustomed to live. Worse and worse, a rumour arose, spread rapidly, and was confirmed as a fact, that Lady Canning would accompany the Viceroy.

Some one evidently protested, for this plan was modified, and eventually the orders were that the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, and a small staff, would travel on the first day, and that Lady Canning and her maid, with two or three gentlemen, would follow the next. Now in the Punjab beyond Lahore we were all very dependant on each other for help in an emergency. The European shops in Lahore were at best only very poor things, and beyond Lahore there was nothing but an occasional Parsee merchant, so that we were almost beyond the pale of civilisation.

The district I was in was a very small one, and the Deputy Commissioner was a young bachelor; so, being the only lady in the place, it became my business to make his house as fit as I could for the reception of such important guests. We ransacked the whole station, and carried off all the pet adornments of the various bachelors' homes—armchairs, pretty tables, pretty table-covers, and picture-albums. Every washhandstand and dressing-table was in request. There were only two sets of bedroom crockery to be had, for men used chilumchees. I was the only possessor of a dressing-table, so it was designed for Lady Canning's use, but, alas! I had not a looking-glass, only a small handglass in my travelling bag.

We sent a man to Lahore, and another to Sialkote, but they could not either buy or borrow one; all were wanted. At last we got a very shabby one, for it had a flaw in the very centre of it, but beggars could not afford to be choosers, and we were glad to get it. We then found that two camps would have to be provided for, and, alas! we had only this one glass; the officers, too, from the next district had three camps to cater for, and they had no glass either, and asked for the loan of ours. Another difficulty was the camps. Say the party started by 6 A.M., they would require breakfast about 11 A.M., with bath-rooms and dressing-rooms, as well as a breakfast tent; all had to be ready for them on arrival. Then when the headquarters of a district were too distant to be reached by nightfall, a camp had to be ready, with dinner and sleeping rooms. It became a problem how to spread out our scanty belongings so as to be ready at all points. Remember that there were no shops or stores to fly to, only one or two Parsee merchants, and the jails where manufactures of all sorts were carried on. We got some carpets and rugs and some armchairs from one jail, and some basket-work things from another, and lamps from the Parsee merchants. Dinner services and table glass were rare in those days; it used to be said that at Government House in Lahore itself no two plates were of the same pattern.

This being so, a great number of necessities had to be packed on camels as soon as the travellers left their rooms; and while early chota haziri was eaten and something of interest looked at, the camels were driven ahead as they had never been driven before, so as to reach camp in time to be unloaded before the travellers arrived. This could not be trusted to a Native; an English officer had to turn camel-driver in order to keep up the pace. I shall never forget the scene when Lord Canning arrived. I have witnessed many more elaborate and gorgeous receptions since then, but none have been more striking. We stood at the entrance of a fine old house which had belonged to a Sikh Chieftain, and which, since the annexation of the Punjab, had been added to and made fairly comfortable for an English residence. A long avenue of noble trees, looking black in the darkness, was terminated by a picturesque brick gateway, through which advanced the large closed travelling carriages, each drawn by four camels, and the camels ridden by Natives in the Viceregal scarlet livery. The Civilians of each district they passed through rode by the side of the carriages, and an escort of Native Cavalry followed. The whole cavalcade was surrounded by a cloud of wild-looking men with flaming torches, which threw a strange and lurid light over the massive buildings, and the gleaming sabres of the troopers. These were drawn up in long lines in front of the house, while the flashing swords of the officers and the wild notes of the bugles, with gaily clad, picturesque groups of Natives gathering round the stately figure of Lord Canning as he descended from his carriage, made a curious and an impressive scene.

Lady Canning was very tired when she arrived the next day, and declined dinner, but partook of tea in her own room. I was the only possessor of a silver teapot, and, of course, I had contributed it especially for Lady Canning's use. The Native servants, however, kept this in reserve for the gentlemen, and, with characteristic contempt for women, sent in for Lady Canning, an old, well-battered one of Britannia metal. In some confusion, I pointed this out, and begged her Excellency to look upon it as a proof that she was really in the jungles. She laughed pleasantly and said she longed so much for the tea that she was sure it would be delicious in spite of the old teapot.

A rather amusing complication arose about the tents. One of the assistant magistrates had to see the tents struck in the morning as soon as Lord and Lady Canning had left them. It was on the return journey, when the whole party travelled together. He had to convey the tents forty miles to the next night's resting-place, pitch them, and see that everything was ready by the evening. Lady Canning was nervous about iron stoves, as her camp had been almost burned down a few weeks before; so a brick fireplace had to be built in the tent she used. Now, as everything had to be carried by camels, whose rate of progression was very slow, the difficulty was to know how to detain the travellers so as to allow time for all this. At last the happy thought occurred to the Commissioner to speak of the old fortress of Rohtas, situated fifteen miles off the road, and to praise its architecture and many attractions. The ruse succeeded. Lady Canning at once wished to go there, and everyone knew that, once there, she would spend hours sketching, and all would go well. So a luncheon was improvised at the fort, and the officers took care to detain the party as long as possible. Meanwhile the tents were struck, their destination was reached, and the tents again pitched and furnished, and the brick fireplace was very nearly built, when the carriages were heard approaching. The Assistant Magistrate shouted to a servant to light the fire, while he on his knees finished plastering the bricks; and as Lady Canning entered at the tent door, he flung all his tools under the kanat (wall) and rolled out after them, to the amazement of the sepy on guard outside, who was half inclined to take him into custody.

The celebrated looking-glass travelled in the arms of a man on a fast camel from one halting-place to another. I believe it went as far as Peshawar and back again. On her return, when taking leave at the last halting-place, before reaching her own camp, Lady Canning laughingly remarked that she had taken leave of her travelling companion, the looking-glass, and begged to be told how its rapid transit had been managed. Then a confession was made, and the story of the fireplace was told, and sundry little expedients were acknowledged. She was very much amused, but through all the banter and fun we saw that she quite appreciated the trouble which everyone had taken to make her journey as easy to her as was possible in the jungles.

THE BENGAL CENTRAL RAILWAY COMPANY.

The half-yearly ordinary general meeting of this company was held on Dec. 17th at the offices of the Company, Gresham House, Old Broad-street.

Lient.-General C. H. DICKENS presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, said it would be observed that the Board had the same remarks to make as to the acceptance of the working agreement with the Eastern Bengal State Railway as they had last year. This matter was still in the same state. Practically it was settled, but the details were still being discussed, and, consequently, a final settlement had not been recorded. The capital outlay during the half-year had been confined to minor works and the gradual progress of the ballasting. The line was maintained in good condition. The gross earnings were slightly less. The decrease in passengers was due to the accident of the bathing festivals in 1889 being more important than in 1890. In goods there had been a falling-off in oil, seeds, and grain, due to dull trade. The falling off in sugar was remarkable as being due, it was alleged, to the displacement of Bengal-grown date sugar in the Calcutta market by Java-grown cane sugar. The date-sugar trade bids fair to become a staple of traffic on their line, and this displacement was unfortunate. The increase of the betel nut was due to the growing confidence in the traders in the joint conveyance by flotilla and railway, which at first they distrusted, fearing loss in handling at Khoorna. This growth was very satisfactory, and might, it was hoped, lead to a further expansion of this traffic, which paid well. The working expenses had been reduced relatively from 61.88 per cent. of the gross earnings to 60.37. The gross earnings of the company decreased 6.05 per cent.; the working expenses

7.88 per cent.; and the net earnings 3.12 per cent. There was no fault to find with the economy of the management, but the half-year had not been a very fortunate one in the development of the traffic. In the dividend they had been able to recommend it was, however, the most fortunate half-year they had yet experienced. This was due, in the first place, to their having cleared off all the accumulated debt to the Government, and to be able consequently to divide the company's one-fourth share of the net earnings; and, secondly, to the exchange having been more favourable than on the last occasion for getting home their share. He now came to the current half-year, which had been hitherto rather unfortunate. The trade of the districts had continued in much the same state, but the country had been again affected by floods, and this time they were more severe than they were in 1885. They were due to much the same cause as on the previous occasion, namely, to the bursting of an embankment on the Bhagiruttee branch of the Ganges, combined with heavy rains. The cost of the repairs would be, they now heard, about Rs. 32,000, and the new works for providing extra waterway would be about Rs. 1,60,000, and perhaps some more. The latter was, of course, a capital charge, and for this the funds in hand would almost suffice. The former charge would go against working expenses, and would pro tanto reduce the net earnings. So also would the loss of traffic occasioned by the branch of the line, which would be Rs. 70,000. The net earnings of the current half-year would, therefore, turn out to be considerably less than they hoped for, and in all probability reduce the dividend to be declared in June next. Still, they hoped to be able to divide something beyond the guaranteed interest on that occasion.

Mr. G. CHRISTIAN seconded the motion, which was agreed to unanimously.

The dividend recommended was afterwards declared.

A GOVERNMENT mineralogist was appointed in Madras in the year 1885, and some time ago the engagement with Mr. Bosworth Smith, the first incumbent, came to an end. The appointment originated in a scheme which had for its object a careful mineralogical survey of the Presidency, and the creation in the central museum of a perfect index of the mineral wealth of the country. At present the appointment is in abeyance. The rules in force in the Presidency for prospecting and mining for gold, minerals, and precious stones, were carefully considered during last year, and it was decided that no modifications in them were necessary.

BY

LUCY JONES.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Those whom the matter concerns will find a faithful and fertile source of information."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"Contains a fresh recipe for every day of the year, is clearly printed, and of a handy size. The recipes are clearly set forth, and likely to be of practical assistance to cooks and housewives, since they have all been approved by experience."—THE CATERER.

"A useful little cooking book."—HOME NEWS.

"Miss Lucy Jones' 365 receipts are admirable for their terseness and for the ease with which they can be understood. This handy book is a veritable treasure to young housekeepers."—PUBLIC OPINION.

"The collection as a whole in this handy and useful volume will be highly prized."—BRITISH WEEKLY.

"We could not recommend a better work."—ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE.

"A considerable number of the recipes are out of the ordinary run, and those which we have examined in detail appear to be constructed on sound principles."—MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

"Will be found extremely serviceable."—METROPOLITAN.

LONDON: W. H. ALLEN & CO., 13, WATERLOO PLACE.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's

When merey seasons justice,

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render

The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced cases they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 13th December; from Allahabad and Madras to the 11th December; and from Calcutta to the 10th December.

LORD LANSDOWNE, with Lady Lansdowne and suite, arrived in Calcutta on the morning of December 9th. Their Excellencies, who were both looking remarkably well, were received with the utmost cordiality.

SIR HENRY MORLAND, Kt., H.M.I.N., Port Officer of Bombay, has arrived in Calcutta to attend the Passenger Commission.

MR. P. C. LYON has been selected as Private Secretary to Sir Charles Elliott. Mr. Lyon has already acted in that capacity under Sir Steuart Bayley, and was, moreover, at one time Personal Assistant to the coming Lieutenant-Governor.

MR. C. J. LYALL is confirmed in the post of Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, Mr. F. C. Daukes succeeding him as permanent Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Assam.

AT the Calcutta Cathedral, on December 9th, the marriage of Miss Bayley, daughter of Sir Steuart Bayley, to Mr. W. B. Gladstone was duly celebrated, in the presence of a large assembly.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR and Lady Harris are now both in Bombay.

H.E. LORD HARRIS held his first levee at the New Secretariat, Bombay, on Dec. 12th.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF BOMBAY, Sir George Greaves, is now on tour in Rajpootana and Gujerat.

THE official programme for the reception of H.I.M. the Czarewitch on the 23rd inst. has been published.

MR. REES, who has been appointed on Lord Wenlock's Staff, has left Bombay for Cairo, to await the arrival of Lord Wenlock, whom he meets at Ismailia.

THE VICEROY has nominated Mr. Robert Crosthwaite to be Agent to the Governor-General for Central India, in succession to Mr. Henvey, who retires on Jan. 1st, 1891.

THE Leprosy Commission visited the Leper Hospital at Madras on December 12th, and were shown round by Dr. Cook, the Superintendent. The members of the Commission were very favourably impressed with the general working of the hospital, and were of opinion that a great deal was being done towards the treatment of the disease in the Madras Presidency as compared with the marked apathy evinced in this direction in other parts of India.

THE breaking up of the four Hindustani regiments of the Bengal Army, which are destined for reconstitution on a new footing, will probably be carried out from January 1st.

IN place of the 32nd Madras Infantry about to be disbanded, the Myingyan Levy will be converted into the 4th Burma Infantry.

IT is announced from Thayetmyo that up to the 5th inst. there have been about 67 cases of cholera among the 2nd and 3rd Goorkhas, with 33 deaths. The epidemic is, however, now subsiding.

RECENT statements in one of the Rangoon papers that trouble is brewing in Burma are believed to have no foundation whatever.

REPORTS from all districts show the entire absence of serious crime or disorder.

THE Jain community of Bengal and Behar has resolved to raise two separate memorials to Sir Steuart Bayley.

THE retiring Lieutenant-Governor was entertained by the Viceroy on December 12th to a farewell dinner at Government House, to which a large gathering of the local society were invited. At the close his Excellency rose and spoke in terms warmly eulogistic of Sir Steuart Bayley's services, extending over thirty years.

THE European community were to entertain Sir Steuart and Lady Bayley at a farewell ball in the town hall on December 15th. The Viceroy, on being invited to attend as a guest, expressed a desire that his name should be added to the entertainment committee as one of the hosts.

THE Civilians were to entertain Sir Steuart Bayley at dinner at the Bengal Club on December 14th, Mr. Justice Tottenham presiding.

THE latest news from Kabul reports that the Amir is still busying himself with administrative matters, though suffering from an attack of gout. He has expressed his high approval of Mr. Pyne's progress at the workshops, which are now turning out breechloading cartridges.

THE first portion of the operations in Lushailand—those regarding the Western Lushai Chiefs—has been successfully concluded, and the murder of Captain Browne duly avenged. The attention of the force will now turned to the country of the Eastern Lushais.

THE Chiefs of the Black Mountain tribes have been given clearly to understand that the action of the Hassan-zais last October in opposing General McQueen's advance from Oghi will necessitate the sending of a large body of troops into their hills.

CHARGES of neglect have been framed against the captain and first officer of the s.s. King Arthur, which stranded in the Persian Gulf on Nov. 16th.

EIGHT MONTHS' pass duty on opium in Bombay leaves the revenue nineteen lakhs worse than the estimate. At the same time the Bengal sales show a deficiency of over six lakhs.

LORD CONNEMARA left Madras on Sunday, December 7th, for Colombo. Almost the whole of the European community, and a great number of Natives attended his departure at the pier. His lordship, who was much moved, said that he would never forget this demonstration of their affection.

THE principal appointments on Lord Wenlock's Staff have already been distributed. The Military Secretaryship will be held by Lord Wenlock's younger brother, Captain the Hon. Richard Thompson Lawley, of the 7th (Queen's Own) Hussars, who are now quartered at Secunderabad. He is at present at home on leave. Surgeon-Major Maitland, who held the appointment of Surgeon on Lord Connemara's Staff, will, we hear, be appointed to be Medical Officer, Ootacamund. Lord Wenlock has appointed Mr. J. D. Rees, C.I.E., to be his Private Secretary for one year. The names of Lord Wenlock's aides-de-camp have not yet been ascertained, but it is known that none of the present Governor's Aides will be appointed. Surgeon-Major P. R. Gabbett, 7th Hussars, now in charge of the North Station Hospital at Secunderabad, has been selected by Lord Wenlock to be his Medical Officer in Madras. He entered the Army in 1871, and arrived in India in March of last year.

ACCORDING to the latest official programme of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's second tour, he will leave Poona on Jan. 10th, and, arriving at Secunderabad on the 16th, stay there five days for the Camp-of-Exercise. Leaving Secunderabad on the 22nd, his Excellency proceeds to Madras, where he stays from the 23rd to the 27th, returning on the 28th to Secunderabad, where the Royal Artillery Camp keeps him from the 30th to Feb. 2nd.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR CHARLES WARREN, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., has arrived in Madras, and intends to make a short tour through India during the next two months, having obtained leave of absence for that period.

In the Calcutta High Court, on Dec. 5th, Mr. Woodroffe, on behalf of the Bar, expressed to the bench the regret generally felt at the death of Sir Barnes Peacock, and spoke in eulogistic terms of his high attainments as a Chief Justice, whom few would equal and none ever excel.

THE firm of Messrs. Benn, Ashley and Co., of Bombay, suspended payment on December 5th. At a meeting of the creditors it was stated that the liabilities amounted to £66,608, and the available assets to £19,519. It was also announced that Mr. W. M. Macdonald, one of the partners, would probably file his petition in the Insolvency Court.

THE Calcutta Chamber of Commerce propose to address Government on the question of Hindu stamps with a view to obtaining a ruling on the subject, and, if necessary, an amendment of the law.

H.M.S. Scrapis arrived at Bombay on December 12th with drafts for various regiments. The vessel was expected two days earlier, but was delayed, owing to a block in the Suez Canal.

H.M.S. Reindeer put in at Bombay from Trincomalee for repairs on December 6th.

COLONEL TOWER, commanding the Suffolk Regiment, died suddenly at Jhansi on December 8th.

NOTES.

THE telegrams from India published to-day are, it will be seen, chiefly devoted to the doings of the Congress, which held its meetings last week at Calcutta. The resolutions proposed and carried were more moderate than, perhaps, outsiders had anticipated. If the moderation was owing to the absence, "by order," of Government officials, the action of the Government of India in forbidding their attendance may be commended, although it seems rather a curious step to have taken. Did the Government expect a "row" a la Kilkenny?

HOWEVER, it is satisfactory to note that questions of Native social reform were discussed, besides political ones; and the speakers who denounced the practice of infant marriages appear to have spoken sensibly, and in a manner which argues well for the progress of the suggested reforms.

THE visit of the Czarewitch seems to have caused little sensation amongst the Native population, but to have been a mystery to the Native Press. The Amrita Bazar Patrika cannot understand it, but advises its countrymen to deport themselves with care, and lays particular stress upon the Indian princes not having "any private talk with our honoured guest." It thinks that the Czarewitch will be "not the worst possible agent" for serving the Russian Government, for he will have access to places where a simple agent will find it impossible to penetrate; besides, he will be accompanied by "a good many agents." And lastly, "he will be surrounded by the Feudatory Princes of India, and will have, it is hinted, an opportunity of spreading sedition from one end of the country to the other!"

THIS nonsense is the result of the Russophobia so industriously sown in India through the majority of the Anglo-Indian Press for years past. We have been teaching the Natives that we are afraid of Russia, and we have only to thank ourselves if they have come to believe it.

BUT the fears of the Amrita Bazar Patrika are explained in the following revelation by it, showing the depth of Russian intrigue:—"It is very easy for a Briton to say that the Czarewitch should be treated as an honoured guest; but it is not so easy for an Indian to follow the advice. Many years ago we were surprised one day to find a letter from the Government of Russia subscribing to a copy of this paper. But if the letter had been simply a business one, we might have complied with the request without giving any particular thought upon the subject. But there was another request. The Russian Government promised to thank us if we would supply it with the names, addresses, &c., of all Indian political papers conducted on independent principles. Now such a mark of confidence from the Russian Government is calculated to turn the heads of most men. But, then, we knew many instances of Russian gratitude towards those who had served it. If anyone could serve it undetected, well and good. But if he was caught, the Russian Government immediately disavowed every connection with him, and left him alone to shift for himself. Besides, though we were asked to do that piece of business, there was no talk either of commission or any other substantial reward. The only reward promised was 'thanks,' and we considered it not quite adequate for the service that was required of us." The last sentence is a charming confession for a Bengali editor—and so like Babu.

SURELY the following is a little "mixed." The Bombay Gazette:—"The appointment of Mr. Alexander Miller as Legal Member of Council in succession to Sir Andrew Scoble is not easy to account for, since Mr. Miller, whose name recalls the agitation in Calcutta against the Ilbert Bill, even if he be that well-remembered gentleman, cannot be deemed a legist of standing." The London Daily News:—"How Lord Cross construes the responsibility imposed upon him may be tested by his recent appointment to one of the most important and influential posts in the Empire. Such a selection as that of a superannuated Railway Commissioner to be the legal member of Council is enough to make the friends of India despair."

THE Hindu sees in Mr. Justice Best, who holds an acting appointment in the Madras High Court, a model judge:—"His lordship brings to the consideration of his cases a mind wholly unbiassed by any influences outside the four corners of his record, and has achieved a triumph over the consciences of those among whom he works by an impartiality which is (as it should be) the best and more splendid qualification for judicial office. A kindly, equable temperament does the rest. Mr. Justice Best is never in a hurry. If at times he has been seen to administer the silent reproof of a glance at his watch, he more than compensates for this disturbance of one's self-esteem by a bright twinkle in his eye which, if it helps to send the shaft more deeply home, cleans all its points of rancour or of gall. Finally, he does all his sleeping at home."

THE Native papers are taking an original and indulgent view of the case of the late Governor of Madras. A representative Bengali paper seems almost to regard Lord Connemara as a victim. What, it asks, has Lady Connemara gained? She has blasted the life of a man whom she promised to love and obey, and blasted her own happiness entirely. Marriage is a civil contract, is it not? Well, the wife in Europe knows that she can get rid of her husband, and the husband knows that he can get rid of his wife. This feeling alone stands in the way of permanent and perfect unity of hearts. A Hindu lady would have condoned the offence of her husband on the ground that her fate was the fate of almost all women all over the world, and that the party who had offended was after all her own half.

THE Lahore paper understands that the following circular will shortly be issued by the Punjab Government:—"It having been brought to the notice of the Punjab Government that a practice of wearing slippers in drawing-rooms and at messes has of late years grown up among junior Assistant Commissioners, the attention of all such officers is invited to this irregularity. Deputy Commissioners should satisfy themselves that the rules of polite society on this subject are known to their assistants when first joining, and that the latter are in possession of the necessary dress shoes; and the Commissioners of Divisions will in future notice in their annual confidential reports whether junior officers strictly comply with these instructions or not."

WE, in England, have had some cause to grumble at the weather lately; but there are grumblers in India also. "It is curious, observes the Pioneer, how, in spite of the generally trustworthy character of the cold weather climate of Upper India, the three great occasions of the last few years have each been ruined by its caprices. Rain marred the great march-past at Delhi that had been so carefully prepared as an impressive spectacle for the foreign officers. Rain turned the Rawalpindi camp into a swamp, and, while inflicting the utmost discomfort on all who were gathered there, robbed the ceremonials that marked the meeting of the Viceroy and the Ameer of most of their brilliancy. Another bout of unseasonable weather has caused the Attock manoeuvres to go out like a damp squib, and the most interesting parts of the programme have had to be sacrificed."

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 28.

The Indian Government issued yesterday another series of papers replying to the attacks on the excise administration. The first subject dealt with is an assertion in a letter to the Secretary of State by Mr. Evans, Baptist missionary at Mussoorie, that in Bengal and the North-West a system prevails of giving contracts in connection with certain distilleries to persons who undertake to sell a maximum quantity of liquor, and that lessees are required to pay duty on a certain minimum quantity. The Government papers show that this is absolutely unfounded as regards Bengal, while the system complained of is in force in only three districts of the North-West, and even as to these Mr. Evans's statements are incorrect. It is added that his recklessness in assertion, coupled as it is with a claim of special knowledge on the subject, is hardly less culpable than intentional misstatement of facts.

Then follows a correspondence on the subject of the alleged increase of drunkenness in the tea districts of Bengal and Assam. The Government reply sums up with the remark that official reports lead irresistibly to the conclusion that the accusations made against the excise administration in the tea districts are for the most part unfounded, and in all cases exaggerated.

About 600 Mahomedan gentlemen meet at Allahabad to-day to consider various questions connected with education, and sit three days. Sirdar Mahomed Hyet Khan Bahadoor presides, Sir Syed Ahmed acts as secretary, and Nawab Mohsin-ul-Mulk represents the Nizam's Government. Among the papers to be read is one on technical education by the secretary.

The so called National Congress assembled at Calcutta on Friday for its first meeting. Pheroze Shah Mehta, a Parsee barrister, of Bombay, was elected president, and delivered the opening address. At a second meeting yesterday four resolutions were adopted; the first expressing approval of Mr. Bradlaugh's Indian Councils Bill; the second reaffirming certain resolutions passed in previous years; the third praying the House of Commons to take up the Indian Budget earlier in the Session; and the fourth calling attention to the excise question.

The third resolution was proposed by Mr. Caine.

So far, the Congress has shown no signs of justifying its existence by discussing the age of consent or any other social questions. The proceedings attract little attention. It is stated that there was a great falling-off in the attendance of delegates on the second day.

The work of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway is making rapid progress. It is hoped this important line will soon be opened. It is understood that the Indian Government propose to construct a branch line between Palamow and Mogul Serai for the purpose of opening the Daltongunge coalfield.

The Leprosy Commission are now at Madras, where they have received the most important and valuable information obtained so far.

Sir Mahava Rao is seriously ill from paralysis.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 27.

The second day's sitting of the National Indian Congress was devoted to the consideration of the various resolutions submitted. The proceedings were conducted with calm deliberation and in perfect order, the speakers displaying an anxious earnestness to lay stress upon their intense desire to treat vexed questions in a manner likely to conciliate the Government without sacrifice of principle. A notable feature was the variety of race and creed represented by the speakers, who included Hindoos and Mahomedans, Parsees and Christians, and spoke both in the vernacular and in English. The Bengal Government having notified through all the local papers that, under orders from the Government of India, the presence of Government officials, even as visitors, were not advisable, no officials attended, and even the European visitors to Calcutta, in deference to the apparent wishes of Government House, were similarly absent.

The first resolution adopted was a petition to both Houses of Parliament to pass Mr. Bradlaugh's Bill, framed on Lord Cross's Indian Council Amendment Act, whereby a portion of the members of the Viceroy's Legislative Council should be elected, the Viceroy deciding to whom the franchise should be given, and providing safeguards for the protection of minorities.

Mr. Lalmohun Ghose, in moving the resolution, urged all classes to treat the measure in a generous spirit, and said that granting the franchise to however small a percentage of the population would tend to raise the self-respect of the people by imposing a sense of responsibility.

Mr. Shrufuluddin, a Mahomedan barrister, urged that influence should be brought to bear upon the Secretary of State's Council to bring that body into line with the India of to-day.

After reaffirming the various resolutions of previous congresses, Mr. Caine moved and carried, amid great enthusiasm, a petition to the House of Commons to restore the right formerly possessed of bringing forward Indian grievances before the Speaker leaves the chair on the introduction of the Indian Budget.

The last resolution adopted urged local option in excise matters, a subject apparently regarded as of the highest importance by orthodox parties.

DEC. 28.

An interesting conference of sympathisers with social reform was held in the Congress Pavilion to-day, at which over a thousand persons representative of all castes were present. The Madras delegates took a prominent part in the proceedings, and much excitement prevailed between the orthodox and the reformers. The latter in their speeches skillfully quoted the Shastras, or religious precepts, in support of their position, urging that the reforms advocated were, in fact, a return to primitive teachings instead of an innovation.

Dr. Mohendralall, who presided, chiefly confined his speech to the evils of the early marriage system, to which he attributed physical decadence and intellectual deterioration.

The editor of the Indian Mirror argued that social advancement should march with political progress, and declared that the reforms demanded were not thrust on the people by the Government, as was erroneously supposed, but were supported by the teachings of the Vedas.

The Dewar Raghunathrow held that the Hindoo law and sacred writings nowhere justified the existing practice of infant marriages. He said that, all classes having realised the paramount need of reform, the time was past for mere academical consideration, and the granting of political enfranchisement would be useless without social improvements.

After the matter had been exhaustively treated on both sides, the conference unanimously resolved that the celebration of marriage rites should be postponed till the age of twelve years in the case of girls and of eighteen for boys, and the consummation of the marriage to the ages of fourteen and twenty respectively, the reform association pledging itself to carry this out. A resolution was also passed to the effect that imprisonment in the execution of decrees for the restitution of conjugal rights should be abolished, such coercive process not now receiving the sanction of any enlightened State.

In the debate on a resolution discountenancing marriages between men older than fifty years with girls below twelve years, the Native speakers supported the proposal on the ground of the physical and mental suffering entailed by such unions, but the authority of the sacred books was not invoked. Mr. Schwann, M.P., advocated the desirability of the resolution.—Reuter.

BURMA

RANGOON, DEC. 23.

Mr. Wetherell, of the Burma Police, and Assistant Political Officer at Haka, was killed by Chins on the 21st at Yokwa. The murderers are believed to be Thetta Chins.

DEC. 27.

The punitive force will probably reach Thetta on Jan. 1. A body of 1,200 troops is being sent to the Chin hills. With the force already there the total number employed in the Chin country during the present dry season is 2,200 bayonets. All the villages which have not already submitted will be visited. Mr. Mackenzie intends to devote special attention to the construction of a wagon road between Haka and Fort Tregar, and to improve the line of road from Kan to Haka, thus opening a direct land communication with Bengal, and allowing the tide of immigration to flow into Burma.

The Siamese Government have withdrawn all their armed posts in the Trans-Salween States found by Mr. Ney Elias's Commission to be tributary to Burma.

In the Northern and Southern Shan States some difficulty is experienced in realising the tribute assessed. The payment of the tribute is suspended, and an inquiry has been instituted to ascertain the actual resources of each State.

During the present cold season an attempt will be made to extend our knowledge of the wild tribes inhabiting the borderland between Bhamo and the Northern Shan States and the Chinese frontier. Lieutenant Daly, superintendent of the Northern Shan States, accompanied by Mr. Warry, of the Chinese Consular Service, starts from Lashio with an escort of fifty police to visit the States on the Salween, including the important State of Kyinglounga, and he will return along the supposed Chinese border. Lieutenant Elliott, Assistant-Commissioner, accompanied by Major Hooday, of the Survey Department, is to proceed from Bhamo up to the western bank of the Irrawaddy to the bifurcation of the river. He will then cross the river and examine the country up to the Chinese frontier on the east bank. This country is practically unknown. Efforts will be made to ascertain the limits of Chinese territory, with a view to a future formal delimitation of the frontier.

Another small column leaves Bhamo under Lieutenant Wilson, and visits the Kachin villages west of the Irrawaddy to exact compensation for the outrages committed. A third small column under Captain O'Donnell is to operate in a similar manner to the east of the Irrawaddy. A fourth column proceeds to Momeit.

THE CZAREWITCH IN INDIA.

BOMBAY, DEC. 23 NOON.

The Czarewitch has just landed here, and has been received with the highest honours due to royalty. A brilliant assemblage, including the civil and military authorities and the foreign consuls, had gathered on the Apollo Bunder to welcome his Imperial Highness. The distinguished party at once drove to Government House, where they met with the warmest reception. Dense crowds lined the route, and the Natives were evidently greatly impressed with the splendid uniforms of the Princes and their suites. The Czarewitch will visit the Elephanta Caves this afternoon, and will to-night be present at a grand banquet, to be followed by a ball.

DEC. 25.

To-night the Czarewitch, who has stayed in Bombay a day longer than he at first intended, leaves here for Nandgaon.

The squadron remains here for three weeks, and will meet the Czarewitch at Colombo. From Nandgaon his Imperial Highness will proceed to the Ellora Caves, and will visit the tomb of the Mogul Aurungzebe.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 28.

The Czarewitch's visit to Bombay passed off quietly, and was not marked by any great functions or spectacles. He was well received wherever he appeared.

ST. PETERSBURG, DEC. 27.

The report published yesterday by a Vienna newspaper, that the Czarewitch had been desired to return home at once, is entirely without foundation.—Reuter.

The Mandalay Herald says:—In consequence of the highly mischievous conduct of certain of the troops in garrison, our local gharrywallahs have refused to ply for hire at night until the authorities afford them proper protection. The soldiers are not only in the habit of declining to pay for the rides, but they delight in smashing venetians and panels, and not unfrequently assaulting the drivers, the police in the majority of instances declining or being afraid to interfere.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

ANGLO-INDIAN CELEBRITIES AT HOME—VII.

SIR LEPEL GRIFFIN, AT 9, ST. JAMES'S STREET.

(Times of India.)

It is in the very centre and heart of club life that Sir Lepel Griffin has fixed his London home. Next door is the Junior Army and Navy; at the rear are the famous assembly rooms known to our ancestors as Almack's, but more familiar to the present generation as Willis's Rooms; in front is Brooke's, redolent of memories of Fox and his gaming exploits; while in the immediate vicinity are White's, Boodle's, the Cocoa Tree, the Conservative and a score of other clubs whose history is writ large in the annals of London club life. The situation is one of unrivalled interest to a man who is so essentially "clubbable," to use Dr. Johnson's phrase, as Sir Lepel Griffin. From the French casements of his pretty drawing-room he can look down upon the tide of fashionable life which ebbs and flows in that famous thoroughfare. The "curled darlings" of the Guards on their way from their chambers in the Albany to their club-house in Pall Mall, the rising politician bustling off to his duties at the House of Commons, the man about town killing time by a lounge on "the sweet shady side of Pall Mall," and the dozen other types of smart humanity which go to make up that mysterious aggregation known as Society are all passed in review in the course of a morning. There is probably no other street in London where the same spectacle could be witnessed. Pall Mall is, perhaps, more celebrated, and Piccadilly more lively, but the celebrity of Pall Mall savours of old fogginess, and the liveliness of Piccadilly of the bourgeoisie. For the acme of fashion one must visit St. James's.

Sir Lepel Griffin's fondness for the locality dates from his bachelor days. On the occasion of his spells of furlough he invariably pitched his tents there. He lived the life by which he was environed, and grew in time to look upon the thoroughfare as his natural home, so it happened that when he eschewed his Indian career and took unto himself to wife the accomplished lady who now shares his title, the street was not deserted. Savouring as the neighbourhood does of fashionable bachelordom, there is, however, nothing to suggest the bachelor in Sir Lepel's ménage. After mounting the flight of stairs from the street entrance one is ushered into a room of fairylike beauty. Outside the murky atmosphere of a morning in late October envelopes everything, but here a soft subdued light from incandescent electric globes prevails, touching up the rich appointments, and creating with the bright fire which crackles on the hearth an indescribable sense of comfort. It is essentially an English drawing-room, and yet it is impossible to mistake the Oriental leanings of its owner. The beautiful marble replica of the Venus of Milo which occupies the space between the windows at the end of the room, the Erard grand pianoforte hard by, the costly oil and water-colour paintings on the walls, and the exquisite bijouterie which meets the eye at every turn only accentuate the more the Eastern adornments—the Indian carpets, the giant tiger and leopard skins, the trophies of ancient Oriental arms, the soft hangings from Indian looms, and the rare and elegant bric-à-brac which has been rescued from the obscurity of Indian bazaars. Here and there one sees even more tangible evidences of the owner's connection with India. Two paintings of Indian princes in all the glory of their durbah costumes, for example, carry the mind at once from St. James's to the wilds of Central India, where Sir Lepel exercised for so long a period something little short of sovereignty. There is over everything, in fact, a strong suggestion of Orientalism, not of Liberty and Co. and Regent Street, but that Orientalism which comes as natural to the individual as his morning meal.

In Sir Lepel himself there is, however, nothing to suggest the returned Anglo-Oriental. His strong athletic frame, his fresh healthy complexion, and his active movements rather indicate the typical English country gentleman, who from youth up has been burdened with no duties more exhausting than riding to hounds in winter and attendance at Westminster during the Parliamentary session. No one ignorant of India looking at him would believe that his connection with the Indian Civil Service goes back nearly a quarter of a century, that he has followed an army in the field, and concluded a notable treaty with the ruler of Afghanistan, and that he knows perhaps more of the inner life of Indian princes than any living Englishman. Nor would it be possible to imagine anything more utterly dissimilar than his old career and that upon which he is now embarked. From the deadly dulness and depressing inertia of Native Courts he has plunged into the feverish atmosphere of English commercial life—from indicting solemn and weighty warnings to contumacious princelings he has passed to addressing persuasive harangues to meetings of not invariably friendly shareholders.

Strange and striking as the transition is, Sir Lepel has made it without an apparent effort. He goes to his city work "as to the manner born," and makes as good a chairman of companies as he did a Political Agent. With his oratorical talents the task of elucidating intricate questions of finance or explaining technical details is a mere bagatelle, while his literary gifts makes him more than a match for critics who may have the hardihood to cross swords with him in the Press. But it must not be supposed that Sir Lepel Griffin is, in the ordinary sense of the word, a City man. Circumstances have thrown him into the stream which sets in the direction of Capel Court, but his interests are centred solely in two or three great enterprises entirely apart from the bubble speculations which form the staple of the business at that great centre of commercial life. In these he has implicit faith, and it is because he is as certain as any one can be on a matter of the kind that they will all yield an ultimate large return on the capital invested in them, and at the same time tend to the advantage of the Empire that he is associated with them. It is, of course, to the Burma Ruby Mines Company that Sir Lepel Griffin is most attached. That Company owes its existence almost entirely to his initiative, and he takes a paternal interest in its welfare. As to its ultimate success he has no sort of doubt. That there are stones at the mines he says has been amply proved, and it only remains for the Company to get at them. Get at them they certainly will, if money and energy can accomplish it. As a proof of the determination of the Company to succeed, it may be mentioned that they have just engaged on a princely salary one of the most celebrated engineers in the Indian Service, and given him practically carte blanche to do what he deems necessary. The great difficulty the Company has to contend with is the thefts by employes. It is so easy for a dishonest workman to conceal a stone of great value about his person without the slightest fear of being detected that the temptation to theft is very great, and it will only be by the utmost vigilance that it will ultimately be overcome. Suggestions have from time to time been made that the regulations in force at the Kimberley diamond mines should be adopted in Burma, but, as Sir Lepel Griffin points out, that is out of the question. The mild Hindoo or the wily Burman would never submit to the rough-and-ready methods which are resorted to for bringing the unsophisticated Zulus to a sense of the difference of meum and tuum. A course of emetics for a fortnight, not to mention rigorous searches, would make Rama or Bo Shwe very ill, and would soon deplete the mine of its workmen. Milder measures will have to be adopted, but there is no reason why they should not in the long run be at least as efficacious as the more drastic devices in vogue in Africa. Any way, Sir Lepel has no fear on the point, and he looks confidently forward to the time when wealth will be flowing into the coffers of the Company in a continuous and ever-increasing stream.

From Burmese rubies to Persian banking is not a long stride for an Anglo-Indian, and Sir Lepel Griffin has taken it without the least difficulty. Side by side with his work as President of the Ruby Mines Company he participates as director of the Imperial Bank of Persia in the important movement recently set on foot for the development of the Shah's Dominions by means of British capital. Baron Reuter's concession has in its possibilities which it is not easy to forecast. When we remember that Persia is not only without railways, but without even roads, that until recently it was absolutely devoid of banking facilities, and that it is in parts as fertile and rich in mineral resources as any country in Asia, it will be seen that there is a magnificent future before the pioneers of its commercial development. Sir Lepel Griffin waxes quite enthusiastic when he speaks of the prospect the Company has before it. At present it is only a banking concern, but it has been so successful that it will pay a substantial dividend on its first half-year's work—an achievement almost unique in the history of such undertakings. There is, however, no intention to confine the operations of the Company to mere banking. The time is approaching when it will take upon itself far larger responsibilities. The undeveloped mineral resources of the country will be turned to profitable account, railways and roads will provide openings for commerce and infuse life into the centres of trade which now languish for want of adequate means of communication with the outer world; and Persia, in short, will become what India has become under the vivifying influences of British rule, a country of the first commercial importance. Necessarily the progress at first must be slow. Old prejudices have to be overcome, the ingrained corruption of officials has to be conquered, and, above all, the formidable rivalry of Russia has to be reckoned with. But Sir Lepel Griffin does not despair of successfully grappling with each and every one of these difficulties. A beginning has already been made by the opening of the Karun River to British ships, and a still more important project now being carried out will pave the way for the accomplishment of the programme which the company has set before itself. This is nothing less than the construction of a metalled road from Teheran to Kom, and from thence to Mohammureh at the head of the navigable portion of the Karen river. Traversing as this road does the heart of Persia it will be an inestimable boon to trade, and will have great indirect benefits by familiarising the people with the advantages of easy and rapid communication. Thus the prospects of the company are of the brightest, and with fairly good fortune there is no reason why it should not be one of the greatest successes of our time.

Commercial cares have left Sir Lepel Griffin little time for literary work, but his pen has not been entirely idle. Not the least interesting feature of his recent trip to Burma was the impression which the religious system of that country made upon him. "I came back almost a Buddhist," he remarked in a moment of candour; "not a Buddhist in the theosophic sense, but a believer in the suitability of Buddhism for the peculiar conditions of a people situated as the Burmese are." These interesting impressions are set out at length in a characteristic article entitled "The Anti-Burman Creed," which Sir Lepel has contributed to the current number of the Fortnightly, so no more need be said of them here. The article is only a literary fragment, lively and interesting though it may be, but the writer has better things in store for the future. He is engaged upon a life of Runjeet Singh for the Indian Statesman series of the Oxford Press; and when that work sees the light, we may be sure that it will give a highly entertaining picture of the old Lion of the Punjab. But Sir Lepel has no intention of giving a mere individual sketch. He believes that what will be far more interesting to people who are not mere bookworms will be the elucidation of the political and social history of the India of that time, with an account of Runjeet Singh's rise to power, and the circumstances under which he came into collision with England at last, and was crushed, and, finally, a resumé of the connection of the Sikh army with the development of the Indian army. Some future day when this work is off his hands, the world may, perhaps, see a history of the Native States of India from his pen. No man living is more competent to write one, and it is a subject upon which, though he has written much, he might be expected to write more—that is, if politics as well as commerce does not claim him as her own. As to this it would not be wise to prophesy. Sir Lepel will resist all blandishments until the general election, but he will then take his chance as a Liberal Unionist candidate, and who knows that a few years hence we may not see him sitting on the Treasury Bench, immersed in the cares of office? Whatever the future may have in store for him, it is certain that his light will not be hidden under a bushel. The causes which made him such a striking figure in India in the last decade will operate equally in England, and tend to push him to the front rank of our public men.

"A PUNJAB OFFICER."

(Times of India.)

As Colonel Nisbet is now leaving India for at least a year, and probably the Punjab for ever, and as his name has very frequently appeared of late in our columns, we (Civil and Military Gazette) think that a retrospect of his services would interest our readers.

Colonel Nisbet, we find, arrived in India as an Ensign at the close of the Mutiny, and was immediately sent to do duty with the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade at Lucknow, where the operations in Oudh against the mutineers had not fully terminated. After nearly three years' military duty with that regiment, Lieutenant Nisbet, who had not served in the Native army, entered the Bengal Staff Corps in July, 1862, under the original warrant, and on the same date joined the Punjab Civil Commission as Assistant Commissioner at Karnal in the Delhi Division, of which the late Colonel George Hamilton, of Multan fame in the Mutiny, was then Commissioner. In April, 1863, Lieutenant Nisbet, having passed by the Higher Standard "with credit," was transferred to Rawalpindi, then a place about a quarter of the size it now is, and a small military cantonment under a Brigadier. We believe we are right in saying that no officer now in India has done, from time to time, so much as Colonel Nisbet to develop Rawalpindi into what it has now become, the largest of the civil and military stations in India, containing the largest British garrison in the world. He was enabled to do this by the many years of his service passed at Rawalpindi, first as Assistant Commissioner, then as Deputy Commissioner, and subsequently Commissioner of the Division. It was during his first connection with the place, in 1863, that Lieutenant Nisbet had opportunity of showing the energy and force of character that has marked his whole career, in the valuable assistance he gave in transporting, at a very serious crisis, long before existence of railways in the Punjab, a vast amount of military stores, ammunition, and equipment of every kind, required for the Ambelya Campaign, which was entered upon in October, 1863. The then Commander-in-Chief in India, the late General Sir Hugh Rose, publicly acknowledged that, but for the resourceful energy of this young officer, the military operations would have been greatly retarded, if they could have commenced at all on the original date fixed. Lieutenant Nisbet was then transferred as Assistant Commissioner for duty to Peshawur and Nowshera, specially to assist the Transport and Commissariat Department, and in 1864 he was appointed Assistant Commissioner at Amritsar. Subsequently, in 1865, he was one of the first four officers in the Punjab Commission selected to revise, under the orders of Mr. Edward Prinsep, C.S., Settlement Commissioner, the Land Revenue in several districts of the Punjab. The other three officers appointed were the present Lieutenant-Governor, the late Mr. Leslie Saunders, C.S., and Colonel Waterfield, C.S.I. Lieutenant Nisbet was placed in charge of the Gujranwala settlement, and within three years effected a regular settlement of the district, which has remained successfully in force till now, after a currency of twenty-five years, it is again being brought under revision. It was probably the thorough insight then gained by Lieutenant Nisbet into revenue administration and details, which laid the foundation of the reputation which, with added experience he has long held as an excellent revenue officer. The people of the Gujranwala district still remember his work with affection and gratitude, resulting to them in a quarter of a century's marked agricultural prosperity, as the extension of cultivation and population in the district since 1868 fully testifies.

In 1868-69, Captain Nisbet was again in the Rawalpindi District, and in 1870 took a first furlough to England for two years. He was not idle during leave, but completed his terms, and passing with credit all the examinations, was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in January, 1872, receiving the distinction of a special call. On return from furlough in 1872 he was posted as officiating Deputy Commissioner to the Shahpur District, where, in the following year, the late Lieutenant-Governor, Sir Henry Davies, K.C.S.I., found such a change to good order, contentment, and prosperity that, though the most junior officer of his rank in the commission, he transferred Captain Nisbet to the charge of the Lahore District. Hardly any one now remembers what Lahore then was. It was before the days of the division of judicial and executive duties, and before the days of local self-government, and quasi-independent committees. The Deputy Commissioner of Lahore had far greater responsibilities, for everything was on his shoulders, and close application for thirteen out of the twenty-four hours of the day hardly kept him abreast of his work. Captain Nisbet maintained an excellent reputation as Deputy Commissioner of Lahore, and was extremely popular with all classes, many of whom, to our knowledge, still gratefully recall his term of office there. With industry and method the duties of his office were got through with punctuality, and watchful regard for the interests and feelings of others; and he also found time to make everywhere in Lahore and in the district very extensive local improvements. It was due entirely to Captain Nisbet, under whose orders and direction the whole project was commenced and prepared, that Lahore now enjoys one of the largest and best supplies of pure water of any place in India. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, two Viceroy, and many distinguished visitors honoured Lahore with their presence while he was Deputy Commissioner, and on every occasion the hard-working District Officer took care that everything possible should be done to uphold the credit and dignity of the capital of the Province, in a way that has not always been closely followed on similar occasions since.

In 1877, just before Sir Henry Davies, K.C.S.I., resigned the office of Lieutenant-Governor, he sent for Captain Nisbet, and, to the surprise of that officer, told him in the heartiest manner that for nearly five years, during which he had been Deputy Commissioner, he (the Lieutenant-Governor) had not had the least anxiety about anything in the most important place and district in the Punjab, and would gladly show his appreciation of such services. As no exceptional promotion was at his disposal, the Lieutenant-Governor said he offered Captain Nisbet a transfer to Simla, then a most coveted district. Coming from Sir Henry Davies, an able and just man of very formal and cold demeanour, this was indeed high praise. In the ensuing five years twelve officers held the office of Deputy Commissioner at Lahore, and constant changes, with proportionate disadvantage, have been made in the district officers ever since. At any rate, no Deputy Commissioner has remained in the headquarter district continuously for five years since Captain Nisbet left. In 1877 he went to Simla as Deputy Commissioner, but was not permitted by his predecessors to find the office one of dignified leisure or ease. Advantage was taken both by the Government of India and the Punjab Government of the transfer to Simla of a District Officer of known energy and tact to put in hand those public improvements which at last were declared indispensable to the summer seat of the Imperial and Provincial Governments. Great confidence was reposed in the Deputy Commissioner, now Major Nisbet, and large funds were sanctioned, which resulted in the introduction of a pure water-supply, good roads, and the demolition of the old Simla Bazaar, which for thirty years had grown up, a foul passage through which for nearly a mile the main road of the station passed. The burden of carrying out these and many other improvements, which in the way of fine public offices and other buildings have gone on increasing ever since, was borne by Major Nisbet, whose rule for five years at Simla will be long remembered as energetic, wise, and practical in the most effective way. In his office also at Simla, as Superintendent of Hill States, Major Nisbet did an immense amount of good, and established himself firmly in the hearts and goodwill of the hill chiefs, who still name him with the greatest regard as one of their kindest and best friends.

In 1882 Major Nisbet again took furlough, and on his return in 1883, being offered a choice of districts, selected his old one of Rawalpindi. During the next two years he was frequently withdrawn from his substantive duties to officiate as Commissioner of the Delhi Division for nine months in 1884, and subsequently of the Derajat, Peshawur, and Rawalpindi Divisions. Colonel Nisbet was Commissioner of the Rawalpindi Division when the meeting between his Highness Abdul Rahman, Ameer of Cabul, and the Viceroy of India took place in the magnificent Durbar held at Rawalpindi by his Excellency Lord Dufferin in 1885. This Durbar was admitted by all who witnessed it to have been, in spite of climatic derangements, the most successful, as it certainly was the most important, State pageant of the kind held in recent years in India. Everyone will understand how the influx during three weeks of an additional hundred thousand people into Rawalpindi, including the most distinguished guest and all the leading Chiefs of the Punjab, must have taxed the ordinary local resources to the utmost, and in its necessary details have proved an immense strain on the ability and resources of the Civil officers, and required at their head a man of exceptional administrative ability.

Colonel Nisbet remained as Commissioner of Rawalpindi till, in October, 1888, he was specially selected to fill the office of Resident in Cashmere. Diffident of his capacity to face the difficulties of the situation, it was at least six weeks before Colonel Nisbet could be persuaded that the Government of India expected that he would not decline, even at a large personal sacrifice, to accept an appointment of acknowledged anxiety and heavy care and responsibility. We do not wish here to go over recently-trodden ground or to dilate on the undoubted value of Colonel Nisbet's services in Cashmere. We have frequently found occasion to applaud the very marked progress, reform, and improvement that has resulted from his deputation to Cashmere, and the somewhat delicate task imposed on him. We believe the future will fully confirm our opinion of the value of his recent services to the Government of India; but it is rather his long and approved service in the Punjab Commission to which we have now drawn attention.

Brought up under men of the old Punjab School, Sir Robert Montgomery, Sir Donald McLeod, Sir Herbert Edwardes, Melville, Reynell Taylor, Farrington, and others, Colonel Nisbet profited by their example, and early imbibed an ardent love for the Punjab and its people. Combining an excellent judgment of men and character, together with generosity of heart and kindness of manner, no trouble on their behalf has seemed too great for Colonel Nisbet to take in any capacity in the interest and affairs of his Native friends. This, however, was subject, as a Native gentleman lately told us, to a very sensible (and useful) limitation, namely, that though few were denied, Colonel Nisbet did not assist every one. An applicant whom for good reasons he could not assist was always at once told so, instead of, as is too often the case, being deluded with indefinite promises or kind words never to be fulfilled or acted upon. The result is, that to-day, with his extensive acquaintance, made in a very varied service throughout the Punjab, thousands are regretting his departure as the possible loss of an old and generous friend, seeing the uncertainty there must always be whether an officer of Colonel Nisbet's standing will return to India, or if he does, whether it will be to the Punjab or to some high political post in another part of India.

A MULTITUDE OF COUNSELLORS.

(Madras Times.)

There is no position more perplexing than to be the helpless recipient of a heap of conflicting and unsolicited advice. And the awkwardness of the situation is materially increased when the would-be guide, philosopher and friend fails to grasp the problem which he proposes to solve. India, at this moment, is in a position of considerable embarrassment, and no small danger, from a plethora of counsellors. An ancient writer of some renown once said: "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety," but there are circumstances when even that wise saw must be taken cum grano. We are at present in the centre of a cyclone of controversies. The tempest raised several years ago by the introduction of the Ilbert Bill, and, later on, by the Local Government Board question, had scarcely subsided when we found ourselves compelled by the force of a popular agitation to face the question of Provincial Legislative Councils on an extended scale, and the general enfranchisement of the people. Then came the questions of widow remarriage and infant marriage, with their inevitable heart-burning and strife; and later on the controversy as to the age of consent. And these are only a portion of the current controversies of our time. We shall not, we hope, be suspected of advocating stagnation if we say that we conceive it to be disastrous for any country, particularly India in her present state of transition, to be harassed by a conflict of opinion, mainly forced upon her from without, on all manner of subjects, which are, after all, of interest, chiefly, to certain enterprising politicians of Western bias, if not Western blood.

It is quite a mistake to suppose that India is in the hopeless, woe begone plight that certain of her would-be-friends would have us believe. The very commonplace complaint repeated by Mr. Bradlaugh at Croydon Skating Rink the other day, that "Members could scarcely ever succeed in making a statement about India in the House of Commons," is practically groundless, for, as every one knows, the whole working apparatus of Government may be stopped by any Member who has a real grievance to complain about; and as for general legislation, what are the various Councils in India for, and the India Office in London? Again, to tell us that 14,000,000 of persons have died in India from starvation during the present century sounds well as a party cry, but what are the facts? Supposing the figures to be correct, then in the course of three generations about two per cent. of the population of India has suffered from want. Is that equalled, or exceeded in London or Northampton, we would venture to inquire? Mr. Caine has his pet theory that the country is going to be swamped by toddy and beer; but the recent report on the Excise administration of India proves, without doubt, the Government is doing all it reasonably can to prevent the growth of the Abkari system, and the increase of drunkenness in the country. Of course Mr. Caine takes to himself the praise and glory of all this kind of legislation; but, unless we are greatly mistaken, much pressure was brought to bear on Government before Mr. Caine's name was much heard of in India. In the aim of his present mission to India, namely, the formation of Students' Temperance Unions in Bengal, Burma and the North-West Provinces, we can heartily support him, and we have no doubt he will succeed, but even in this respect the late member for Barrow may remember that some useful work has been and is being done by several old-established societies. Mr. Malabari's pamphlet entitled "An Appeal from the Daughters of India," has borne fruit already, and will perhaps result in raising the age of consent. We hope it may. His project has, at all events, been adopted by the London Times, and is supported by such names as Prof. Max Müller, Cardinal Manning, Lords Ripon, Dufferin, Northbrook, and Reay, although Mr. Hume, Mr. Justice Muthusami Iyer, Mr. Varada Row, and others, show that in practice, the case is not quite so bad as is popularly supposed. But fourteen millions of Hindu widows is, in any case, a strong argument for some reform, even if the figures do not reach 40,000,000, as Mr. Malabari says they do. The impression left on the public mind by the controversy is, that there is much hushed-up suffering of a very terrible kind extant, and it is tolerably certain that while Government will not meddle with Hindu marriages as such it is very likely to throw the egis of its powerful protection over helpless little girls.

We cannot say as much for the panacea that Mr. Hume and Mr. Bonnerjee and some other gentlemen propose for all and sundry of the ills from which India suffers at present. An Indian Parliament is, we suspect, a dream of the future not yet to be realised. The great difficulty, both here and in England, lies in the fact that the reformers appeared before the country and the Government with ill-digested measures of reform, based, often, upon a quite imperfect knowledge of the people and the conditions under which they live. And then, when these fail to find immediate acceptance, dissatisfaction follows, either real or assumed, and we hear frothy declamations to the effect that 40,000 young men are being "qualified each year to take any position that may be offered them, who, notwithstanding their shining abilities, are not suffered to take any part in the Government of their country." We should like to know how many of them care one cash about their country, as it is called. If Mr. Caine were to speak with them individually about "their country," their thoughts would wander lovingly to some banana or mango tope in the depths of the mofussil, where the ridges of the paddy fields would present to them a fairer sight than all the scientific frontiers of modern diplomacy. As for India, as a whole, it is a foreign country to most of them, its interests are alien, its people are of other castes, which it is their bounden duty to hate vigorously; and all the claptrap and bathos of the hustings will not alter this. The truth is that all this "advice gratis" about Indian affairs savours often of quackery. It is a case of "too many cooks." What with Factory Commissions, Cholera Commissions, Leprosy Commissions, Sanitary Commissions and many other enterprises too numerous to name, together with gold exploiting, ruby mining, exchange excitement, and all the rest, there seems to be but little time left for steady development, and general advance. There are signs that the country resents all this gratuitous intrusion upon the domain of her internal affairs. Already one hears hints of "sinister designs." Adventurers are reminded of the nursery story of "Little Red Riding Hood" and advised not to play "Wolf." Children recite the story of the "Spider and the Fly" with suggestive emphasis. What the country most needs is to be let alone. As guests, all travellers are welcome, and they might go further and fare worse: but for political exploiters there are no vacancies. For there was never a period in her history, when India was, as a whole, so contented or prosperous as now. Barring a few evils, which can be remedied, she is rapidly improving. Her producing capacity and mineral resources are being developed. Employment is found for the poor at rates of remuneration which threaten to revolutionise all the fiscal relations of the Empire. Engineering enterprises are rapidly approaching perfection, and what the country chiefly needs is to be let alone and permitted to thrive.

THE IMPERIAL SERVICE CORPS.

(Pioneer.)

With his visit to Bhutpore the Viceroy has brought to a close his self-imposed duty of inspecting the Imperial Service Corps in the Punjab and Rajputana. Though not a soldier himself, he is in keen sympathy, as the head of the Government in India should be, with all that relates to the military profession; and the speeches made during his tour show that he is specially interested in the reorganisation of the armies of the feudatory States. The words of praise and encouragement uttered before the Chiefs whose troops he has seen have been happily chosen, and there can be no doubt that they will be remembered for a long time to come. Moreover, his remarks cannot have failed to convince the public generally that the policy adopted by Government two years ago was sound and statesmanlike. There is no playing at soldiering by the Chiefs and their retainers, but an earnestness of purpose in their actions which is most gratifying. The selected Sikh, Rajput, and Jat regiments are being trained for practical warfare, and they are making steady progress towards that efficiency which will entitle them to take the field with the sepoy of the regular army. Their numbers are not very great at present, but the battalions will be gradually increased by careful recruitment. There is no advantage to be gained by hasty action, as this would probably involve the enlistment of mercenaries of the old type, men who are certainly not wanted in the selected regiments. The burden of expense, too, would be severely felt if the outlay necessary for the maintenance of the corps at full strength were all at once imposed. It is better that the Chiefs should proceed cautiously at first, and thus avoid excessive expenditure which would be a drain on their revenues. It must be remembered that they have to provide large annual grants for their new regiments, in addition to the original outlay on the equipment and housing of their soldiers, in itself a heavy item. That they are cheerfully fulfilling the obligations which they undertook when proffering their services to the Imperial Government is a proof of their sincerity and patriotic feeling.

At the present moment nearly every State of any consequence is being included in the scheme, which has for its object the expansion of the defensive fighting strength of the country. In Kashmir, at Bahawalpore, Nahan, Kapurthala, Faridkote, Gwalior, and Bikanir there are just as good troops or useful transport corps as Lord Lansdowne saw at the various capitals where he halted. Further afield the work of organisation has begun in Mysore; in Katthiawar light cavalry are to be raised; and Rampur is now engaged in forming two squadrons of Rohillas. The contribution which Hyderabad is eventually to make will be of the first importance, and, indeed, the reformed troops already in existence there need only breechloaders to render them available for service at short notice. The estimate made by the Government of India in 1888 was that between 20,000 and 30,000 trained soldiers could be counted upon in four or five years from the various States, and there is every reason to believe that these figures will be reached within that period. As to the utility of the troops they have not yet received their baptism of fire; but in more than one instance they have expressed the desire to be sent on service in any expedition that may be undertaken. In Kashmir we have a regiment actually garrisoning Gilgit at the present moment, and their presence there is a guarantee that the peace of the frontier in that direction will not be disturbed. It cannot be too widely made known that the military authorities have given a place in the mobilisation scheme to the selected troops, and that in case of war they will have more exciting work to do than simply holding the lines of communication. The Inspecting Officers under Colonel Mellis have doubtless published this good news among the officers and men; and this will stimulate them in their efforts to rise to the level of our Native regiments.

Looking at the scheme, then, as a whole it may fairly be concluded that, founded as it is upon the solid basis of the loyalty of the feudatory chiefs, its success is assured. If any fault can be found with the policy of the Government it is that they have been too cautious in granting the services of British officers to the corps. This caution was mainly due to their desire not to revive the old system of Contingents which was thoroughly discredited during the Mutiny. The object aimed at was to have regiments officered entirely by the natural leaders of the men forming them, and thus to keep alive the spirit of enthusiasm which prompted the chiefs to come forward when the question of the defence of the North-West frontier was urgently claiming attention. A small staff of Inspecting Officers only was therefore sanctioned, and it was expressly ordered that they were not to assume command of the troops, but to give every assistance in the matter of organisation and general instruction. Their work, it is almost needless to say, has been of the most ardent kind, for, as a rule, they have each had three or four States to look after. Their individual inspections, therefore, can only be made at intervals of some months, and thus the full effect of their personal influence on both Native officers and men is lessened. It is absolutely necessary that their numbers should be increased, more particularly in the Punjab and Kashmir. Of course, it is not desirable that each small State should have an officer assigned to it; but in cases where considerable numbers of men are being trained or transport corps raised, something more is needed than flying visits of inspection. In the matter of musketry instruction, too, it is essential that constant attention should be given to the training of the sepoys. Unless they can shoot well they will be of little use in these days of breechloaders, and it can scarcely be expected that they will excel on the range if taught only by non-commissioned officers. The Inspecting Staff should be supplemented at once by the addition of a number of officers with a special knowledge of musketry, for as yet the selected regiments have had little or no practice with their Sniders. These officers would be available for general inspection duty, too, and the work of organisation and drill would be more rapidly carried on. There needs but this increase of strength to ensure a high standard of efficiency being reached. The only defect in the scheme is this paucity of British officers, and the remedy is so easy of application that it should be applied forthwith.

CENSUS PRELIMINARIES.

(Pioneer.)

Each house was numbered in the village street
And Ram was 10 and Zalim 24,

We thought our little paper labels neat,—
One little label over every door.

Tho' Ram complained his number brought ill-luck,
And swore that Zalim's number was the best,
Yet where we put our labels there they stuck,
And each Enumerator hoped for rest.

Then came the Supervisor, babbling speech
Of blocks and schedules, circles and a score
Of uncouth phrases far beyond our reach,
And, by his order, one by one we tore
Our paper labels down and searched for chalk Wherewith to scrawl new numbers on the wall.
We furnished food for fresh surmise and talk,
But still we piously re-numbered all.

Then came the Superintendent of our charge.
Who, spectacle on nose, found chalk marks dim.
He thought the numbers "might have been more large."
And charcoal figures were the things for him.
So we explained to Ram that chalk and ink,
The shasters proved, were nishedh, or kharab,
And Kurim Buksh learnt matters which, I think,
Have not before been found in his kitab.

Next the Collector came. He said he knew
Why ink and paper were not good enough,
And he was bigger than the other two,
And when we quoted these, cried coarsely, "Stuff!"
So we re-labelled all the village street,
And Ram was 10 and Zalim 24,
And to our rustic fancy it was sweet
To use the labels which we used before.

It matters little. Ram won't understand,
And Zalim Khan believes we'll tax him yet,
Poor Ram, whose life is in his sowcar's hand,
And Zalim Khan, most foolishly in debt!
We'll get the figures John Sirkar requires,
We'll gather him statistics without stint,
We'll fill each schedule as his heart desires
And he will, doubtless—put it all in print.

BENGAL.

(Dec. 10.)

THE Calcutta Jute Association has abolished minimum paper rates from Jan. 1st next.

THE Hindu revivalists of Calcutta have set themselves to the task of examining the books fixed for the University examinations, with a view to find out if they contain passages that may wound orthodox Hindu feelings. In the geographical text-book for the entrance examination they have observed that the author has advised the students to renounce Hinduism and adopt the Christian faith, and to eat food shunned by orthodox Hindus. The University authorities are, therefore, appealed to to expurgate the book from the list of text-books for the entrance candidates.

A FASHIONABLE MARRIAGE IN CALCUTTA.

At St. Paul's Cathedral yesterday afternoon (Dec. 9th), in the presence of a very large gathering of relatives and friends, the marriage of Miss Alicia Sydney Bayley, second daughter of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and Mr. William Buckley Gladstone, son of the late Mr. Murray Gladstone, of Penmaenmarr, was solemnised. The Cathedral was beautifully decorated, and the service was very impressive. Although four o'clock was the hour fixed for the ceremony the guests began to arrive fully half an hour earlier. Among those present were Sir Charles and Lady Elliott, the Hon. F. M. Halliday, Sir J. Ware Edgar, Sir Alfred Croft, Sir Henry Harrison, Sir A. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Colvin, Mrs. Amir Ali, Mr. Harry Lee, Mr. A. Smith, Mr. R. Steel, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Henry, Messrs. Justices Tottenham, Prinsep, and Macpherson, Mr. P. Nolan, Mr. H. J. S. Cotton, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lambert, Dr. Lethbridge, Mr. C. Tawney, Mr. J. L. Mackay, Colonel Chatterton, Captain E. W. Petley, R.N., Mr. H. C. McInnes, Mr. C. E. Buckland, Mr. W. Bell-Irving, Mr. R. H. Thomas, Dr. McConnell, Dr. Crombie, Dr. Cobbe, Mr. G. A. Stack, Mr. Cumberlege, Mr. A. Flemming, Mr. A. Barnard, Mr. J. Barnes, Mr. W. M. Beresford, Mr. T. B. Cass, Mr. Toomey, Mr. C. Butler, Rev. Neville Rolfe, Mr. J. Ralli, Mr. J. A. Bignold, Mr. F. Barnes, Mr. G. Henderson, Mr. H. B. H. Turner, Mr. C. C. McLeod, Mr. R. Turnbull, Mr. J. D. West, and Captain Bayley.

The bride was attired in a white satin dress, with a train which was held by Master Simpson, dressed as a page. The six bridesmaids were the Misses M. Bayley, Halliday, Worgan, Hilton, White, and Lambert, all attired in white. Mr. Arthur Gladstone officiated as best man. The bride was conducted to the altar by her father, Sir Stuart Colvin Bayley. The Rev. Welbore McCarthy conducted the marriage service, assisted by the Rev. A. G. Luckman. On the bridal party entering the chancel the organ played Wagner's Bridal March. At the close of the service the Rev. Mr. Luckman delivered a short address, which was followed by Stainer's Sevenfold Anthem. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played as the bridal party retired.

On arriving at Belvedere the bride and bridegroom, with a select party, were photographed by Messrs. Bourne and Shepherd. The newly-married couple then left for Barrackpur, and will thence proceed to Darjiling for the honeymoon. It may be mentioned that the late Mr. Murray Gladstone, the father of the bridegroom, and formerly a merchant in Calcutta, was a cousin of Mr. W. E. Gladstone, the Liberal statesman.

The bride's trousseau was procured from London, and was designed by Madame Whitticomb.

Babu Satya Prokash Baderji has been inspired by the event, and burst forth in an epithalamium, of which the following lines are a specimen:—

As trickling streams that out from lofty source
The glen adown, chance far from home to meet—
Two hearts have met to speed a blended course,
And swell the flow with mutual solvance sweet.
In happy choice their hopeful search now ends;
Love's balmy breezes urge the mingled tide.

Ye sylphids smile! two noble clans unite—
Proud Bayley's name with prouder Gladstone's mates

MADRAS.

(Dec. 11.)

THE Honourable Mr. J. H. Garstin, C.S.I., Governor of Madras, has entered into residence at Government House, Mount Road.

MESSRS. PARRY AND Co. are, the Madras Times hears, negotiating with the Travancore Government with a view to obtaining a concession for mining for plumbago and mica in the Neduvengad Taluk of the Southern Division, which is said to be very rich in these minerals, and also in any other four taluks which they may select after prospecting. Fifteen years is the period asked for as the duration of the concession.

THE Indian Tramways Co. (Limited), to which was granted the concession for the construction of a steam tramway within the municipal limits of the town of Madras, has asked that the limit of time allowed it up to the 15th instant, may be extended, owing to the recent financial depression in England, which, it alleges, has made it almost an impossibility for it to raise the funds necessary for the construction of the line. The application is under the consideration of Government.

THE DEPARTURE OF LORD CONNEMARA.—At 4.30 P.M. on Sunday, Dec. 7th, Lord Connemara, who had been residing at Government House, Guindy, since his resignation of office as Governor, drove to Government House, Madras, under the usual escort of the body guard, and was received by the Hon. Mr. J. H. Garstin, C.S.I., Provisional Governor and suite, the household servants lining the entrance, and the members of the Governor's band being also present. After a short stay Lord Connemara, the Hon. Mr. Garstin, Major Scott-Chisholme, and Mr. J. D. Rees, entered one of the Government House carriages, and drove to the Pier, taking the route across the Wallajah Bridge, round the north-western glacis of the fort, and along the North Beach road. Another carriage, containing members of the Governor's Staff, followed, and the whole party reached the Pier about 4.45 P.M. The Governor and Lord Connemara were received with a general salute by a squadron of the Body Guard, which had been drawn up in review order in command of Subadar Major Sirdar Bahadur Mahomed Uneef. Lord Connemara on alighting walked up to this Native officer, and in a few appropriate words, which were translated to the men, bade the Body Guard farewell. He was then conducted to a spacious shamiana that had been erected on the southern side of the shore end of the Pier, and in which a large number of people had assembled. Lord Connemara went about among those present saying a few words of adieu, and shaking hands with almost everyone individually. Before leaving the shamiana, he said:—"Ladies and gentlemen,—I am afraid that I have very little to say. I can assure you I shall never forget the kindness, affection, and cordiality of those amongst whom I have lived for the last four years; and all I can say in wishing you farewell is that this signal demonstration of affection will never be forgotten by me." Lord Connemara, who was deeply affected, then, in company with the Governor and his staff, followed by a large number of persons, proceeded to the steps of the pier, where, after saying farewell once more, he, with Captain Fowle, left in the Port Boat for the s.s. Clan Grant amid three cheers from the company present. The Provisional Governor and Staff also accompanied Lord Connemara on board, and after a short stay returned ashore. The Clan steamer, as well as the B.I.S.N. s.s. Goleonda and the German Liner s.s. Baroda, were dressed with flags; and the crews and passengers on board these vessels cheered as the boat went off from the pier. Captain Fowle has accompanied Lord Connemara to Colombo.

BOMBAY.

(Dec. 13.)

SIR THOMAS THOMPSON invited a large number of his friends to visit the new Port Trust Graving Dock on Thursday afternoon in honour of the completion of his contract considerably within the contract time. His guests had the opportunity of inspecting the excellent workmanship of the dock at their leisure, and after sundown the dock walls were brilliantly lit up.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain during week in Kurrachee, Kolaba, and all districts of the Deccan and the Southern Mahratta country; beneficial to standing late crops except in parts of Kurrachee and Satara, where they are slightly damaged. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing in several districts. Standing crops slightly damaged by locusts in 1 taluka of Kurrachee and 1 of Baroda; cotton affected by cloudy weather in parts of Broach, and diseased in 1 taluka of Surat; exotic cotton blighted in 2 talukas of Dharwar; crops otherwise good. Fodder scarce in parts of Nassik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Satara, Dharwar, and Baroda. Agricultural stock good except in 1 taluka of Khandeish, 2 of Nassik, and 1 of Ahmednugger.

At a general meeting of the Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce, held on the 4th inst., the following resolution referring to the loss of their president, Mr. McHinch, was passed:—"The Chamber desires to place on record their sorrow with which they regard the death of their chairman, Mr. McHinch, who served as chairman of the Chamber for five successive years with marked ability and tact, and the members feel that in him they have lost one who had the mercantile interests of the port at heart, and who strove at all times to promote them. The members further offer their sympathy to the bereaved widow and family."

At the meeting of the Municipal Corporation on Monday, the Hon. Mr. Javerilal moved, "1. That, as proposed by the Commissioner, in his letter No. 18,407, of this day's date, he be authorised to address Government with a view to the raising of a loan of 5½ lakhs for the cost of housing the Fire Brigade, the loan to be raised in 1891-92, bearing interest at 5 per cent. and repayable in twenty years, the interest on which for the ensuing year has been included in the Budget Estimates now being framed. 2. That, pending the sanction of Government to the raising of the said loan, the Commissioner be authorised to carry out the works in question at a cost not exceeding 5½ lakhs, the necessary payment being made out of surplus cash and loan fund balances, to be adjusted on the said loan being raised." Mr. P. M. Mehta moved an amendment that the second para of the above proposition be omitted. Mr. Wacha moved another amendment to the effect that the consideration of the question be deferred until after the Corporation had passed the Budget for 1891-92, and it was carried by a majority.

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation, at their meeting on Thursday, considered a resolution of the Standing Committee dated 25th of November, 1890, as under:—"That the report of the sub-committee appointed by the Standing Committee on the 5th of June, 1889, to inquire into and report on the proposal for the taking up from Government of the whole of the triangular piece of ground immediately to the south of the Crawford Markets, be approved and adopted, and that the report be forwarded to the Corporation with the recommendation that the ground be acquired from Government at an estimated cost of Rs. 4,65,000, the cost to be debited to Loan charges." Colonel Merewether proposed that the report be approved and adopted, and that the ground be acquired from Government at the estimated cost of Rs. 4,65,000. Mr. P. M. Mehta and several other members strongly opposed the proposition, on the ground that the rate of Rs. 50 per square yard demanded by Government was an extravagantly high one. After a lengthy discussion the proposal was, on a division, lost, a large majority voting against it.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDE AND PUNJAB.

(Dec. 11.)

THE chrysanthemum show at Lahore this year was a great improvement upon its predecessors. A great many more plants were shown than last year. There was an improvement all round, too, in the growing of this plant; and some exhibits were really very good, notwithstanding the heavy rain of the beginning of the week. Some splendid specimens of cut chrysanthemums were shown by the A. H. Gardens—some as much as seven inches in diameter.

COLONEL PRIDEAUX, the Political Resident at Jeypore, was entertained on the evening of the 1st instant at a farewell banquet by the Maharaja, on the occasion of his approaching departure for Kashmir. Those who know the Jeypore Residency—and a great many people have had an opportunity of seeing it lately—are well aware that in no Native court are the relations between the chief and his political adviser upon a more cordial and intimate footing, while the little band of European officials attached to the State are as a happy family. Under the circumstances, the ceremony was more than a formality. Colonel Prideaux, by the way, in the course of his speech, made the announcement that the Maharaja has just given a donation of £20,000 to the Imperial Institute in London, which the Prince of Wales has been graciously pleased to accept.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—A feature on Saturday was a strong demand for Indian Gold Mining Shares. Mysore rose 3-16, Ooregum Preference ½, ditto Ordinary, 1-16, and Gold Fields of Mysore 1s.; but Champion Reef relapsed 1-16. Mysore Shares were last quoted 6 to 6½, Nundydrog 1½ to 2, Indian Consolidated New Company (9s. paid), 4s. 6d. to 5s., Balaghat-Mysore (New) 8s. 3d. to 8s. 9d., Champion Reef 1 1-16 to 1 3-16, Ooregum Ordinary 2½ to 2¾, ditto Preference 2 9-16 to 2 11-16, Devala-Moyar 1s. to 1s. 6d., Nine Reefs New (fully paid) 2s. to 2s. 3d., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 5s. to 5s. 6d., Mysore Wynaad (18s. 6d. paid) 2s. 3d. to 2s. 9d., South-East Mysore 9d. to 2s., Indian Glenrock New 3s. 3d. to 3s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 14s. to 15s., New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 2s., and Mysore West (17s. 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d.

CHRISTMAS IN INDIA.

If one has by chance or duty to pass Christmas time in India, a pleasanter place to pass it in could hardly be chosen than Calcutta. The climate, to begin with, is generally then delightful, although we have heard more than one misanthrope regret the want of frost and snow. We who are having the experience just now in London of snow, fog, and frozen water-pipes are not likely to sympathise with that objection, and many of us might prefer to be in Calcutta to-day than being wherewe are. Besides, with the absence of frost and snow in Calcutta, there is generally also an absence of those canting "commonplace compliments which make Christmas in England a season of organised social hypocrisy. The love which we profess for our neighbour on the 25th of December, when we treat him or her to the chilling charity of a Christmas card, is now becoming somewhat recognised as of about the value of the card itself, with or without the postage; and if we have to give Christmas presents of more intrinsic value to friends or dependents, the gifts are more often given by the force of custom than from any higher motive. Let us not be misunderstood, however, as being cynics who would rail at what is good in human nature at this time. We know that it is a season which brings noble answers to many an appeal for help for the poor and sick. The hospitals benefit by increased subscriptions—many hungry mouths are filled for the day, and many homeless wanderers provided with shelter for the night. The sad after reflection is that with the passing hours the good done in them ceases until the year again brings round the charitable season. In India there is, we think, less of the Christmas cant among Englishmen and women than there is here. Perhaps it is a more serious time, and the feelings are deeper as thoughts of the absent little and other dear-ones who may be then at home come to throw their shadows on the exile's heart, and recall the fact that India to the English "breadwinner" there must still be the "land of regrets." But, sad as the reflection may be, we know that it neither saps the energy nor damps the ardour of our countrymen in doing their duty in the vocation there to which fate or fortune has called them; and we know, therefore, that Christmas can be made as "merry" a time amidst Indian sunshine as amongst London fogs. And "so mote it be!"

THE CONGRESS AND THE CZAREWITCH.

It will be seen from the telegraphic news which we reprint to-day that the two most important matters which are being discussed in India are the doings of the Congress and the visit of the Czarewitch. We agree with the Daily News of this morning that "the National Indian Congress passed some very moderate and sensible resolutions," although amongst these certainly cannot be classed that brought forward by Mr. Caine, that "a Petition be sent to the House of Commons to restore the right formerly possessed of bringing forward Indian grievances before the Speaker leaves the Chair on the introduction of the Indian Budget." This Resolution is reported to have been moved and carried amid great enthusiasm; but the Native gentlemen who cheered Mr. Caine can have little idea of what the result would be of the granting of such a petition. It would simply be that there would be nobody in the House to listen to the Indian grievances. It is difficult enough now to secure the necessary attendance to listen to the Indian Budget, but if that uninteresting statement is to be preceded by an outpouring of Indian grievances by one or more M.P. "grievance-mongers," honourable members will clear out of the House quicker and in greater numbers. Parliament is not yet educated enough, nor likely to be so for many a long day in Indian subjects, and the majority of members are wise enough to abstain from meddling with matters which they do not understand. Who would bring forward the so-called grievances? Only a few "faddists" or interested agents whose attempts to gain a hearing, much less redress, would be utterly futile. For those who have real "Indian grievances," and we are not urging that no such grievances exist, it will be found, we think, the wiser and more profitable plan to adhere to the present constitutional methods in seeking for remedies. The resolution that some members of the Viceroy's Legislative Council should be elected, the franchise to be defined by the Viceroy himself, seems a small demand, and is supported by the Daily News, but only by this argument:—"This very moderate and reasonable experiment ought to be tried, if only because its failure would be harmless, while its success would be valuable and encouraging."

The other item of interesting news—the visit of the Czarewitch—is not much dwelt upon by the senders of the telegrams or the writers in the Press. It would seem that the Natives have troubled themselves very little about the matter, whilst the English officials are doing all in their power to show English and Christmas hospitality to their illustrious guest. We think it a matter for regret that the visit should be so limited in time and extent of country. The heir to the Russian throne should have seen more of India than he is likely to see, according to the official programme of his tour. We should have been glad if he could even have seen an "Indian National Congress" meeting. But perhaps the little that he will have seen of India under British rule will help him to the reflection that there is something more stable in it than fools and flatterers may have led Russian opinion to suppose.

PENNOCK—Dec. 7, at Lal Bagh, Parel, Bombay, Jessie, the wife of J. F. Pennock, aged 25.

THE CHARGES AGAINST CAPTAIN NORMAN.

At the Esplanade Police Court, Bombay, Dec. 8th, before Mr. C. W. Richardson, Acting Third Presidency Magistrate, Captain Charles Norman was charged on remand by Inspector Briscoe, with cheating Messrs. Hurjeemul and Co., and Ardeshir Bhicajee, two well-known Bombay jewellers, details of which have already appeared.

Mr. Walker, of Messrs. Chalk, Walker, and Smeatham, prosecuted, and Mr. Frere, of Messrs. Little, Smith, Frere, and Nicholson, was counsel for the defence.

Mr. Frere, in addressing the Court on behalf of his client, said that this was the first opportunity Captain Norman had of making any statements in public in reference to the matter, although various accounts from the other side had already appeared in the newspapers. Since Captain Norman's return he had had no means of refuting those allegations, from the fact of his having been suffering from fever since he was first placed before the Court. From certain explanations that had been given to the complainants they were now of opinion that Captain Norman had no intention to cheat at the time he took their goods. He had been compelled to leave Bombay somewhat suddenly. His departure had nothing whatever to do with the present charge, which had, no doubt, been the principal cause for a warrant of arrest being granted by the Court. That ground had now disappeared, and from the nature of the explanation that had been given he (Mr. Frere) submitted that the case against his client could be withdrawn, for Captain Norman had in reality only done what many other persons do—that is, left the country without having paid his debts. The property had been taken possession of by the police, who arrested his client at Suez, and could now be made over complete to the complainants. It now rested with the Court to discharge the accused.

The Magistrate: The case is not compoundable.

Mr. Frere, continuing, said that in such cases the difficulty could be overcome by his learned friend Mr. Walker informing the Court that his clients did not wish to give evidence or press the charge. If, on the other hand, that gentleman thought he had a good case, he would raise a similar argument on behalf of the defendant.

The Magistrate: I must have the desire from the complainants themselves that they do not wish to proceed any further.

Mr. Walker: The fact that the property has been returned is an important element in the case. I am told that the property of the complainants is before the Court, and considering that the accused has already been in custody for eleven weeks, and has during that time been suffering from fever, I may state that my clients are not willing to press the charge.

The Magistrate expressed his willingness to withdraw the case after assuring himself of that fact from the prosecutors themselves.

The jeweller, Kanjimull Kalary, was put into the witness-box, where he at first desired to proceed against Captain Norman. Eventually he expressed himself to the contrary on receiving his ring set with a sapphire and diamonds valued at Rs. 1,200. The second complainant, Ardeshir Bhicajee, after identifying his property, brooches, rings, and bangles, also withdrew the charge.

His Worship in discharging the accused said that on referring to the information, that was in the first instance not filed before him, he had some doubt as to whether there was a clear case made out; and as it now appeared from the evidence of the complainants that they did not wish to proceed further, the only alternative now left to him was to discharge the accused.

The property was returned to the jewellers.

THE CZAREWITCH'S VISIT TO INDIA.

(Bombay Gazette, Dec. 13.)

The first week of H.I.H. the Czarewitch's visit to India will be spent in a most interesting corner of H.H. the Nizam's dominions, and with their customary liberality when any notability visits the State of Hyderabad, the Nizam's Government have made the most extensive and complete preparations for the Czarewitch's entertainment. An elaborate programme has been carefully planned out, so that during the short time he will be the guest of the Nizam he will be taken over a large tract of ground, seeing the most of some of the wonderful sights that are to be seen in the Hyderabad State. As already announced, his Imperial Highness will in all probability land in Bombay on the 23rd inst., when he will be joined by Colonel M. Gerard, Central India Horse; Captain Grover, 2nd Punjab Cavalry; and Lieut. Newnham, 10th B.I.; who have been appointed by Government to conduct him on his tour. From Bombay he goes to Poona, and thence to Nandgaon, by the G. I. P. Railway, reaching there on the 26th inst. At Nandgaon, which is the nearest station to Aurungabad and the Caves of Ellora, the Czarewitch will be met by a distinguished party on behalf of H.H. the Nizam, consisting of Nawab Vicar-ul-Umra, one of the chief Pagan nobles and Revenue Minister, his son the Nawab Sultan-ul-Mulk, the Nawab Fateh Nawaz Jung, Home Secretary; Mr. Lauder, Private Secretary to the Nawab Vicar-ul-Umra, and seven others. Teams of horses, drags, and tongas, specially brought from Nassik, Ahmednagar, and other stations near by, will carry the Czarewitch and party over to Ellora, escorted by a detachment of H.H. the Nizam's mounted police, while on reaching his destination he will be received by a guard-of-honour of the Hyderabad Contingent. There being much to see at Ellora, two days will be spent at that station. There are nearly forty large caves there, Buddhist, Brahminical, and Jain, and as each has an interest and history of its own, his Imperial Highness will find sufficient to interest him. But besides the caves there are the beautiful waterfalls, which, fortunately for the visitors, are almost at their best at this time of the year. On leaving Ellora he will return to Nandgaon, escorted, as he came, by the mounted police. Owing to the brief space of time to be spent in the Nizam's dominions, and many objects of interest to be seen at Ellora and Ajunta, no visit is to be paid to Aurungabad, although, if time should permit, a flying visit may be paid to Daulatabad. At Nandgaon the party will re-enter the train and proceed to Pachora, the nearest station for the famous Ajunta Caves. After a sojourn of two more days at Ajunta his Imperial Highness will return by tonga or on horseback to Pachora, reaching Bombay again on New Year's Day.

To draw out so complete a programme, and make all the necessary arrangements for such a tour, is no light task. Mr. Furdoonjee Jamsetjee, private secretary to H.E. the Minister, is superintending the arrangements from head-quarters, and Mr. A. K. Stevens, staff officer to the Minister, is carrying out arrangements locally, and will be in charge of the transport and camps; and Colonel Ludlow, C.I.E., inspector General of the Nizam's Police and his detective assistant, Mr. Stevenson, are in charge of the police arrangements. To add to the comfort and safety of his Imperial Highness and party a medical officer from the Hyderabad Contingent will probably be deputed to superintend the sanitation of the camp.

The following notification was published in yesterday's Government Gazette relative to the visit of H.H. the Czarewitch:—

His Imperial Highness the Hereditary Grand Duke Nicolas Alexandrovitch, Czarewitch, is expected to arrive on board the Russian cruiser Azora, accompanied by the Monomach and the Koncloff in Bombay harbour, on the 23rd instant and to land at 8 A.M. His Imperial Highness will be received on arrival with all the Naval and Military honours due to his high position.

2. As soon as the Azora is signalled from the Light House, three guns will be fired from the Saluting Battery at an interval of ten seconds each.

3. His Excellency the Naval Commander-in-Chief or, in his Excellency's absence, the Senior Officer of the Royal Navy in the port, and the Director of the Indian Marine, will meet his Imperial Highness on board the Azora.

4. His Imperial Highness will leave Azora at 8 A.M., and the Director of the Indian Marine should be requested to consult with his Excellency the Naval Commander-in-Chief or the Senior Naval Officer at the station, and to act in concert with him in arranging the details of his Imperial Highness's disembarkation at the Apollo Bunder. The arrangements for landing at the Bunder will be made by the Director of the Indian Marine. All other arrangements at the Bunder will be made by the Public Works Department.

5. On his Imperial Highness reaching the shore, a salute of twenty-one guns will be fired from the Saluting Battery. A Guard of Honour of British Infantry, with Band and Colours, will be drawn up at the Bunder head. His Imperial Highness will proceed along the Esplanade-road as far as the Post Office, and thence by the Queen's-road to Government House, Malabar Point.

6. The following high officials, if present in Bombay, are invited to receive His Imperial Highness—namely, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and Staff and the Honourable the Chief Justice of Bombay, the Lord Bishop of Bombay, the Judges of H.M.'s High Court, the Additional Members of the Council of His Excellency the Governor for making Laws and Regulations, the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Bombay, the Secretaries to Government, the Brigadier-General Commanding the Bombay District, the President of the Bombay Municipal Corporation, the Military and Private Secretaries and the Staff of His Excellency the Governor, the Municipal Commissioner, the Under Secretaries to Government and the Heads of Departments, Civil and Military.

7. The Consular representatives of Foreign Governments are invited to be present on the occasion, and a space marked B will be reserved for them.

8. All officers of Her Majesty's Services, Civil, Naval, Military, and the Indian Marine and officers belonging to Corps of Volunteers then in Bombay are invited to attend. Members of the Corporation of Bombay are also invited. To all such who wish to attend cards of admission to space C will be supplied on application to the Executive Engineer of the Presidency. The same officer will also issue cards of admission to space A to any Heads of Department not specified by name in paragraph 6 who may intimate that they will be present. For the Consular representatives and all others mentioned above no cards will be necessary. As far as accommodation in space D is available, it will be allotted to any ladies or gentlemen who may apply for tickets to the Executive Engineer.

Full dress will be worn by all officers of Government entitled to wear uniform, and morning dress by all others.

9. His Imperial Highness, escorted by a detachment of His Excellency the Governor's Body Guard, will proceed to Government House, Malabar Point, where a guard of honour of Bombay Infantry, with band and colours, will be mounted. An officer's guard of forty-five British rank and file will remain on duty at Government House during his Imperial Highness's stay.

10. No procession of carriages will be formed. The Commissioner of Police will arrange for the maintenance of order and for keeping the streets clear, and the Military Department will issue the necessary instructions for the firing of the Imperial Salute from the saluting battery.

11. His Imperial Highness will arrive at Kirkee on Thursday, the 25th, at Nangdaon on the morning of Friday, the 26th, and at Ahmedabad on the 1st of January at a time which will be hereafter communicated to the several collectors at those stations. On the arrival of his Imperial Highness he should be met at each of those stations by the Commissioner of the division, the officer commanding the station and the collector, and at Ahmedabad by the Secretary to Government, Political Department, in addition to those officers.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE following is extracted from the Zhob Field Force Orders:—"Camp Karam, No. 183, dated 17th November, 1890.—The purpose for which the Zhob Field Force was assembled having been successfully accomplished, Major-General Sir Geo. White begs to thank all ranks for their cordial co-operation and exemplary conduct."

LIEUT.-COLONEL T. H. LLOYD, R.A., has been appointed a corresponding member of the United Service Institution of India for the Poona District.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. TROOPSHIP SERAPIS.

Her Majesty's troopship Serapis, Captain C. P. G. Hicks, arrived in harbour on Thursday morning from Portsmouth, which she left on the 13th November, calling at Malta on the 22nd and Port Said on the 26th. She was detained for two days in the Suez Canal on account of the grounding of the P. and O. Co.'s steamship Valetta, which was towed off on the 28th ultimo, after having discharged a large portion of her cargo. During the time she was aground the canal was entirely blocked and the traffic had to be suspended. The Serapis left Suez on the 29th November, and passed Aden on the 4th December. One death occurred in the Red Sea on the 1st December, namely, that of a Private named Thomas Devlin, of the Highlanders L.I., of fever. During the passage entertainments were organised by the medical officer of the ship (Dr. Marsh), and much enjoyed, the series being brought to a close on Tuesday last with the laughable farce, entitled "Creatures of Impulse," in which the whole of the performers acquitted themselves most satisfactorily.

The Serapis has brought 57 officers, 18 ladies, 7 children, 1,132 men, 30 women, and 41 children, attached to different regiments. The following are the names of the saloon passengers:—

OBITUARY.

—O—

THE death of GENERAL SIR FRANK TURNER, K.C.B., is announced as having taken place at Cromwell Houses, Southsea, on the 19th inst. General Turner, who was in his seventy-eighth year, served in the Afghan campaigns of 1839 and 1842, and in the Indian Mutiny, and was Inspector-General of Ordnance in Bengal from 1864 to 1874. During the Indian Mutiny he commanded the artillery of a movable column at the battle of Budleekerserai and the siege of Delhi, and commanded a detachment at the relief of Lucknow, the battle of Cawnpore, the action of Khodagunge, the retaking of Futtyghur, the capture of Meangunge, and the final siege of Lucknow. He was thanked by the Governor-General for his services, received a medal with three clasps, and the brevet of lieutenant-colonel and colonel. In 1858 he was created a C.B., and K.C.B. in 1886. He entered the Bengal Artillery in 1830, became colonel in 1858, general in 1877, and colonel-commandant R.A. in 1882.

MAJOR WILFRID DAVID BRADLEY FENTON, of the Royal Artillery, youngest surviving son of the Rev. G. L. Fenton, of San Remo, died at Dumfries, from sunstroke in Kashmir, on the 13th inst., at the age of thirty-six. The deceased obtained his lieutenancy in September, 1873, captaincy in October, 1882, and his majority in May, 1890. He served in the Afghan War of 1878-80, receiving the medal.

MAJOR GEORGE ROBERT REMINGTON, late of the 15th Bombay Native Infantry, died at his residence, Westbourne Villa, Sandown, Isle of Wight, on the 14th inst.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 18th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

TO J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
 DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cures short attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUBSCRIBED IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

JEOPARDY OF LIFF, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—

J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced cases they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.
